MISCELLANEOUS.

THE CONVERSATION FAN.

THE LAST AND MOST ABSORBING SENSATION OF THE DAY IS, TO USE A THEatrical phrase, "a great take." Everybody, to be en regle for the season, and to avoid the proscription of imperious fashion, must have A CONVERSATION FAN.

No family circle is complete in social diversions and entertainments without one, and in order to enjoy the pastime it should be distinctly understood that the answers do not numerically follow the questions, but to spice the amusement an answer must be looked for that will afford a fitting response to an interrogatory.

Where a direct answer is not to be found to a direct question, it will be discovered that it furnishes the sequel to a sustained conversation, so that couples can carry on a love-tete, which they may not wish to make audible, by silent indications of numbers.

THE CONVERSATION FAN

is an infallible remedy against dullness, breaking the spell of silence by a suggestive inquiry, furnishing congenial pleasures for an evening's entertainment, and opening up a novel and ingenious method of whiling away agreeable hours at home, in the promenade, at a party or private gathering.

ONLY TEN CENTS A FAN.

To be had at Harp's, Gresham's, Ellis & Bro.'s, Haley's, Kuhn & Co.'s, and all the Book Stores in the city, and at Piffet's, and issued by

ERNEST TURPIN,

Nos. 112 and 114 Poydras Street, New Orleans.

Inventor and Patentee of the celebrated Conversation Fans.

☞ Parties ordering Fifty or more Conversation Fans can have their cards printed on both sides without extra charge. mh5 1yeow

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the seventeenth instant:

Louisiana and Mississippi	bales...	2,379
Arkansas	"	254
Mobile	"	10
Total		3,093

On Saturday the market opened with a very good inquiry, but, buyers being met by still more stringent pretensions on the part of factors, the demand soon slackened off, and barely 1,600 bales changed hands during the morning, partly at previous rates and partly at fuller prices, after which the movement exhibited but little variation, and as one broker took 2,000 bales, mostly toward the close, the entire business summed up 4,250 bales. Among the principal sales we noticed strict good ordinary, high style, at 15⅛c., low middling at 16¼@16⅜c., strict low middling at 16⅝c., and middling at 17⅛@17⅜c. On Monday the movement commenced under the favorable influence of an advance of 1-16d. at Liverpool (where the sales were put down at 18,000 bales,) and an improvement at New York of ⅛c. in spots, and 3-32@¼c. in futures, in consequence of which factors raised their pretensions about ¼c. This checked the movement, and only a few hundred bales changed hands during the morning, after which parties came together more freely, and the sales summed up 2,850 bales, mostly at an advance of ⅛@¼c., but with a considerable portion of the business at Saturday's rates. On Tuesday, under the favorable influence of encouraging accounts from Liverpool and Manchester, factors adhered with increased firmness to their previous pretensions, but buyers being reluctant to go on, unless at some concessions, the market continued inanimate throughout the morning. Offers of 16⅝c were repeatedly refused for low middling, and strict low middling to middling, which some classed as Liverpool middling, sold at 17⅛c. The sales embraced 2,900 bales.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 10,000 bales, against 20,750 for the corresponding time last week and 17,100 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 1,127,656 bales, against 1,086,222 bales to the same date last year, and the increase in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 341,621 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 87,597 to Great Britain, of 108,990 to France and of 110,301 to other foreign ports. VOL. 20. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, APRIL 30, 1874. NO. 18.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

RALEIGH, April 22.—A letter from Chimney Rock, at the foot of Stone mountain, dated the eighteenth, says: Stone mountain and vicinity experienced one of the most terrific shocks that has yet been felt. The whole earth shook and trembled. Houses shook and things were disarranged. Several shocks have occurred within the last week.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Subscriptions for the relief of the Louisiana sufferers are coming in rapidly. Several thousand dollars have already been raised. Mayor Havemyer has published an appeal to all citizens to aid.

CAIRO, April 24.—The Minneola, from Memphis hither, picked up seven families from skiffs, rafts and dugouts, fleeing from their flooded houses.

The overflow hence to Memphis is chiefly on the west side of the river.

MONTGOMERY, April 24.—Rains all over the State for ten days raised the water. The Alabama is all over the low grounds and still rising. Rain still falling heavily.

Farming operations will be greatly retarded, and it is feared much low land will have to be abandoned.

Railroad communication between this city and Mobile, and between Selma and Meridian, has been suspended.

LOUISVILLE, April 24.—The Board of Trade to-day appointed several committees to thoroughly canvass the city for donations to the Louisiana relief fund. A considerable amount, already subscribed, will be forwarded at once.

MEMPHIS, April 24.—The Little Rock railroad is washed away near Greenville, stopping all communication. The extent of the damage is not known, but it will doubtless be impossible to repair the road until the flood subsides.

BOSTON, April 25.—Mayor Cobb to-day authorized the mayor of New Orleans to draw for $10,000 in aid of the Louisiana sufferers.

MONROE, LA., April 26.—The river rose a quarter of an inch last night, and the back water an inch and a half. The overflow in Washington street is to within three squares of the river. The river has been on a stand to-day, and very little rise in the overflow. The day has been fair and warm. There are apprehensions of a great deal of sickness.

Still no intelligence from either above or below. Rumor, however, reports the suffering as very great all along the river, from Ouachita down to this place, and from here to the mouth of Red river.

The railroad company have surrendered the mail contract. The telegraph lines are working to Shreveport, Camden and Delta, and form the only source of correspondence.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Rev. W. T. Boone, rector of the Church of the Ascension, whose refusal to bury Edwin Forrest, the actor, from his church called forth much criticism several years ago, announced yesterday that he intended to resign from the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and then gave, in a sermon, his grounds for this action and for his preference for the Reformed Episcopal Church.

Rev. John N. McLeod, pastor of the First Reformed Presbyterian church during the past forty years, died.

MOBILE, April 27.—The memorial exercises here to-day were witnessed by the entire community of the city and vicinity.

After Rev. B. M. Palmer, of New Orleans, the orator of the occasion, had delivered a beautiful and appropriate address, and as Admiral Semmes was about to unveil the statue, Colonel Wickersham, who was a Federal officer during the war, stepped forward and presented the admiral with a beautiful wreath of flowers, in the shape of a circle and cross, accompanied by the following note:

"This floral offering is tendered by the kindly and sympathetic feelings of surviving Federal soldiers resident in Mobile, who honor the brave and dead of the late war, and desire your acceptance of the same as an humble tribute to valor and unselfish devotion to a cause dearer than life. Fresh be the memory of those under the sod and those awaiting the judgment day—the one the Blue, under the other the Gray!"

Admiral Semmes accepted the floral tribute in a feeling address.

The statue was then unveiled, amid the booming of cannon. The guns were manned by the State authorities of Louisiana.

Everything passed off delightfully.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., April 27.—The Alabama is two feet above the high-water mark of July, 1872, and still rising, though slowly. The water lacks only two inches of being in the press-room of the Daily Times building, which stands sixty feet above low water. The river lands below Selma are submerged, doing great damage to cultivations and destroying crops. The oldest inhabitant never before saw three overflows in six weeks.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., April 27.—Another beautiful. Alabama river is high. No break in railroads. Trains running on time, and making connection.

The Confederate memorial celebration to-day was very imposing. The procession was immense at the cemetery and flowers were liberally strewn over the graves of the gallant dead. Business was suspended from three o'clock till night.

SAVANNAH, April 27.—The Chattahoochie has overflowed its entire valley. Considerable damage done.

POUGHKEEPSIE, April 27.—Trains are delayed by the storms. The snow is four feet deep in cuts.

VICKSBURG, April 27.—The store of Steele & Yoste, grocers, corner of Cherry street and the railroad crossing, burned at four o'clock this morning. Loss about $6,000. The building was insured for $3,200.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The President has proclaimed the ratification of the extradition treaty with San Salvador. The new postal treaty has been signed.

The following dispatch was received here to-day:

LITTLE ROCK, April 27, 1874.

To U. S. Grant, President:

On the nineteenth day of this month, as Governor of this State, I telegraphed you that there was an armed usurpation against the legal government of this State, and made requisition upon you for aid to suppress it and to prevent domestic violence. I have just now been advised that you never received the requisition. I now take occasion to say that an armed insurrection exists in this State against the lawfully constituted authority thereof, and, as the Legislature cannot meet until the eleventh day of May, I call upon you for aid to protect the State against domestic violence.

E. BAXTER,
Governor of Arkansas.

A similar call had previously been received from Brooks, claiming to be Governor, and two attorneys in his behalf reached here yesterday to urge a compliance with the call. Two attorneys dispatched by Baxter will soon arrive on a like errand in his interest. The question as to who is the actual Governor will be presented to the President, unless some other mode of settlement shall intervene before the matter is formally taken up for executive consideration.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 28.—To H. W. L. Lewis, Master of State Grange of Louisiana: By order of the executive committee I send you by express to-night $1,000 for the benefit of the suffering members of the order in Louisiana.

J. H. KELLEY,
Sec. of National Grange.

AUGUSTA, April 28.—Heavy rain to-day. Crop accounts discouraging on account of floods.

The corner-stone of Pio Nino College will be laid at Macon on next Sunday, with impressive ceremonies, Bishop Gross officiating.

CINCINNATI, O., April 28.—About $2,000 worth of provisions were shipped from here to-day for the benefit of the Louisiana sufferers. This is the first shipment, and it was purchased by the relief committee of the Chamber of Commerce.

MONROE, LA., April 28.—The river has fallen an inch and a half in twenty-four hours, and the water is receding slowly in the rear of the city. There was a light shower last night, but the weather is clear to-day.

The steamer Garry Owen, which left Camden at eleven A. M. yesterday, reports the river falling all the way down, and the highest water ever known above by two feet.

A planter living below reports thirteen miles of river front out between Morrison's and Cuba, but the rear all under water. Below Cuba reports all overflowed.

The mails for the East and West go by Shreveport.

BATON ROUGE, April 28.—Three hundred families in this parish are homeless from the flood.

BOSTON, April 28.—Contributions about $33,000.

LOUISVILLE, April 28.—The Louisiana relief committee collected $4,000, and are not through canvassing.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, April 23.—It was reported yesterday that the Franco-American postal treaty had been ratified by the French government. The report was premature. Negotiations are, however, progressing favorably.

LONDON, April 25.—Prof. John Phelps, the geologist, is dead.

MADRID, April 25.—Three million reals intended for the Carlists have been seized in Santander.

LONDON, April 26.—Advices from Constantinople are to the effect that the Suez canal difficulty has been settled by Mr. DeLesseps' acceptance of the tonnage rate prescribed by the International commission.

BERLIN, April 26.—The Emperor William in person closed the session of the Reichstadt yesterday with a formal speech of no general importance.

LONDON, April 27.—The whisky crusade was inaugurated at Manchester to-day. Several signatures to the pledge were obtained.

FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND RATIONS.—The government of the United States, through its military authorities, has responded liberally to the call of suffering in this State. The matter is fully explained in the subjoined correspondence:

OFFICE COMMISSARY OF SUBSISTENCE, U. S. A., New Orleans, April 24, 1874.

To William P. Kellogg, Governor State of Louisiana:

SIR—I would respectfully inform you that I have this day received telegraphic instructions from the honorable Secretary of War to procure and turn over to the relief committee, for sufferers recognized by you, five hundred thousand (500,000) rations of meat, bread, beans and rice, at the rate of twenty thousand rations daily. This will supply twenty thousand (20,000) persons for twenty-five days.

Please notify me of the names of the recognized committee, and where they are to be found.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. C. SULLIVAN,
Captain and C. S., U. S. A.

Balky People.

Passing along a country road, quite recently, we found a man, a horse and wagon in trouble. The vehicle was slight and the road was good, but the horse refused to draw, and his driver was in a bad predicament. He had already destroyed his whip in applying inducements to progress in travel. He had pulled the horse's ears with a sharp string. He had backed him into the ditch. He had built a fire of straw underneath him—the only result, a smashed dashboard. The chief effect of the violences and cruelties applied were to increase the divergency of feeling between the brute and his master. We said to the beswented and outraged actor in the scene that the best thing for him to do was to let his horse stand for awhile unwhipped and unconxed, setting some one to watch him while he, the driver, went away to cool off. We learned that the plan worked admirably; that the cold air, and the appetite for oats, and the solitude of the road, favorable for contemplation, had made the horse move for adjournment to some other place and time, and when the driver came up he had but to take up the reins, and the beast, erst so obstinate, dashed down the road at a perilous speed.

We know of pastors who have balky parishioners. When any important move is to take place, and all the other horses of the team are willing to draw, they lay themselves back in the harness.

First the pastor pats the obstreperous elder or deacon on the neck and tells him how much he thinks of him. This only makes him shake his mane and grind his bit. He will die first before he consents to such a movement. Next he is pulled by the ear, with a good many sharp insinuations as to his motives for holding back. Fires of indignation are built under him for the purpose of consuming his balkiness. He is whipped with the scourge of public opinion, but this only makes him kick fiercely and lay harder in the breeching-straps. He is backed down into the ditch of scorn and contempt, but still is not willing to draw an ounce. Oh, foolish minister, trying in that way to manage a balky parishioner! Let him alone. Go on and leave him there. Pay less attention to the horse that balks, and give more oats to those that pull. Leave him out in the cold. Some day you will come back and find him glad to start. At your first advance he will arch his neck, paw his hoof, bend into the bit, stiffen the traces and dash on. We have the same prescription for balky horses and men—for a little while let them alone!—Christian at Work.

Trying to Make Gold.

Bernard of Treves was born in the year 1406. His father left him in possession of a magnificent estate, but he was not contented with his wealth, and nourished the ambitious idea that he was destined to discover the secret, so long sought after in vain, of extracting gold from baser substances. His first experiments cost him two thousand crowns—a very considerable sum in those days; and he was speedily surrounded by knaves, who, pretending to give him information and assistance, lived on him, and cheated him out of large sums of money. One told him to try what highly rectified spirits of wine would do; another recommended alum and copperas; while a third informed him confidently that the mighty ocean was the mother of gold, and advised him to try sea-salt. Being now nearly fifty years of age, and as far from the great secret as ever, Bernard determined to travel. He went from place to place in Germany, France and Spain, seeking out all the alchemists on his way, and trying experiments of all kinds at their suggestion, but all in vain. At length a great genius took him in hand at Vienna, and so delighted him that they formed a close friendship. He was induced by this new friend to place a quantity of gold, with a collection of those substances which had proved so useless in his former experiments, into a crucible. This he did in conjunction with some other alchemists, and left the mixture three weeks; at the end of which period two-thirds of the gold had vanished, but nothing more satisfactory resulted. From Vienna he traveled to Rome, and from thence to Madrid, Gibraltar, Messina, Cyprus, Greece, Constantinople, Egypt, Palestine, Persia; then back again to Messina, France and England.

In his voyages, however, he succeeded only in spending his gold, the secret of making it being still hid from him. His journey to Persia alone cost him thirteen thousand crowns, and he at length returned to Treves to find himself little better than a beggar. His former friends refused to see him in his reduced condition. They said he was mad; so he hid himself in the Island of Rhodes, and lived there in great poverty.

At the end of a year a merchant who knew his family advanced eight thousand crowns on the last remnant of his once large estate. He immediately began his experiments again, and his last crown went into the crucible, never to return. It is recorded that in his penniless old age he made the discovery that the secret of philosophy is contentment with our lot. The highest form of philosophy is stated in the Scriptures: "Godliness with contentment is great gain."

WHAT THE GOSSIPS SAID.

Says Gossip One to Gossip Two,
While shopping in the town:
"Old Mrs. Pry to me remarked,
Smith bought his goods of Brown."

Says Gossip Two to Gossip Three,
Who cast her eyelids down:
"I've heard it said to day, my friend,
Smith got his goods from Brown."

Says Gossip Three to Gossip Four,
With somewhat of a frown:
"I've heard strange news—what do you think?
Smith took his goods from Brown."

Says Gossp Four to Gossip Five,
Who blazed it round the town:
"I've heard to day such shocking news—
Smith stole his goods from Brown!"

Watchman and Reflector.

The White Horse Donation Party.

The Advance tells a story of the early days of Chicago, the point of which must have been severely cutting to a prominent economist of that city, unless his cuticle was thicker than that of ordinary mortals.

The affair was known as "The White Horse Donation Party." An old white horse, familiar to the streets for his faithful services, had been turned out in mid-winter to die. He was picked up and cared for, and flaming bills and advertisements announced that a donation party for the white horse would take place at noon next day, on the courthouse square, by the flag-pole. A band of music animated the charity. The white horse, decorated as though he were a sacred animal of Egypt, received his benefactors, bringing bags and bundles and bales of all that was most toothsome to a horse epicure, and all the utilities and ornaments of a horse toilet, and over $200 in money. The gathering was large. A procession was formed, led by the music. The white horse did the honors. They halted before the store or office of the former owner and faced old whitey about, played a dirge, executed a grand profundissimo et fortissimo, struck up Hail Columbia, and marched on. It was one of those extemporaneous applications of lynch-law which could very nearly be codified under "heaping coals of fire upon your enemy's head." It suppressed the cruelty tendency for a long period more thoroughly than an anti-cruelty corporation could have done.

It is not a very singular association of ideas that a story of a horse should bring the itinerant preacher to mind, for the horse is generally connected with his work. Having a due estimate of the aptness of our readers for seeing through this white horse story a moral touching the superannuated minister, we leave them to do their own moralizing. For further instruction we refer them to First Corinthians ix, 9.—Christian Age.

The Sad Story of a Daughter of Thomas H. Benton.

The French cause celebre in which General John C. Fremont was the central figure, in connection with his railroad speculations, and the manner in which large numbers of Frenchmen were victimized thereby, will be fresh in the memory of your readers. General Fremont escaped the rigorous verdict of the French court by having made his way to this country. Intimately connected with General Fremont's schemes, and mainly instrumental in having them favorably introduced in financial circles in France, was Baron Gauldree-Boileau, for many years French consul in New York. It will be remembered that in the early days of the French republic Boileau left this city for France, to defend himself against the charge of being an accomplice of Fremont. He was convicted and sentenced to three years' imprisonment. The sad sequel to all this is as follows: The wife of Baron Gauldree-Boileau, daughter of Thomas H. Benton, of Missouri, died on the sixth of March, in a state of almost abject poverty, in a garret in Paris. Since her husband had been sentenced, about twelve months ago, by the Parisian tribunal, in consequence of his connection with General John C. Fremont's railway speculations, his unfortunate wife, with six children, whom he had left absolutely penniless, had lived in wretched quarters at Boulogne, where she was supported by the bounty of a friendly English family. Finally she removed to Paris, where M. Frederick Gaillardet, formerly editor of the Courrier des Etats Unis, of New York, who lived near her, was the only person to render aid. Being in very feeble health, she was unable to do much for herself, and both she and her children were subjected to the greatest privations. Moreover, the Parisian police molested the poor woman repeatedly by prying visitations, as is generally done in France toward the families of convicts. Grief and despair at last did their work, and she died broken-hearted.

When Marshal MacMahon heard of her sad end, and that six children were left helpless, he granted Baron Gauldree-Boileau a free pardon. The latter was beside himself with sorrow upon hearing the sad tidings, and at the latest advices from Paris it was feared that his reason would give way.

IF THE predetermination and immutability of God render it improper for men to pray, because their prayers cannot change his purposes, then the same things must render it equally improper for men to plow, sow, reap, or make any other effort for any end whatever. All these, without the divine blessing, will be in vain, and can no more change the purpose of God than prayer.—Timothy Dwight.

Incorporation

OF THE SCANDINAVIAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY OF NEW ORLEANS, LA., AUXILIARY TO THE AMERICAN SEAMEN'S FRIEND SOCIETY.

State of Louisiana.
Parish and City of New Orleans.

Be it known, That on this thirteenth day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four, and of the Independence of the United States of America the ninety-eighth, before me, Andrew Hero, Jr., notary public in and for the parish and city of New Orleans, State of Louisiana, duly commissioned and qualified, and in the presence of the witnesses hereinafter named and undersigned, personally came and appeared the several persons, residents of this city, whose names are hereunto subscribed, who severally declared that, availing themselves of the provisions of the laws of this State relative to the organization of corporations for literary, scientific, religious and charitable purposes, they have covenanted and agreed, and do by these presents covenant and agree and bind and obligate themselves, as well as all such persons who may hereafter become associated with them, to form and constitute a corporation and body politic in law, under the following conditions and stipulations, viz.:

First. The said corporation shall be known and designated, or styled and named The Scandinavian Seamen's Friend Society of New Orleans, Auxiliary to the American Seamen's Friend Society, and by which name, style and title the said corporation shall have and enjoy succession; for the full term and period of ninety years from and after the day and date of these presents, to contract, sue and be sued, to make and use a corporate seal, as well as change and alter the same at pleasure; to hold, mortgage, purchase, alienate and receive property, whether real, personal or mixed, but, however, of a value not exceeding three thousand dollars; and to make, enact and adopt, as also alter and amend, such rules, regulations, by-laws and ordinances as may be deemed necessary for the proper management, support and regulation of the affairs of said corporation.

Second. The purposes and objects of this corporation are declared to be the improvement of the social and moral condition or well-being of Scandinavian and other seamen while in this port, and to obtain, by purchase or otherwise, a commodious and conveniently located Bethel in this city, which, while under the control and management of the board of trustees of this corporation, shall nevertheless be free to seamen of all nations who may wish to worship God with them; also to secure the services of a missionary speaking the Scandinavian language, who shall have charge of all matters pertaining to the spiritual interests of the members of said society, and to furnish medical attendance to all seamen who may subscribe to the rules and regulations of the society, as well as to sustain a register's office, boarding-house, free reading room, and devise all suitable means to promote the temporal and spiritual well-being of Scandinavian and other seamen while in this port.

Third. The domicile of said corporation shall be the city of New Orleans, in the parish of Orleans and State of Louisiana, and citations and all other legal process shall be served upon the president of the board of trustees thereof.

Fourth. The affairs, business and concerns of said corporation, including the control and disposal of its funds, property and estate, shall be vested in a board of trustees, consisting of twelve persons, who shall be divided into three classes of four each, one of which classes shall hold office for one year, another thereof for two years, and the other thereof for three years; so that one-third of said trustees shall cease to hold office at the end of each and every year, commencing on and to be computed from and after the first Monday in April of the present year eighteen hundred and seventy-four. Said board of trustees shall fill all vacancies by ballot that may occur in their number, whether by expiration of term of office, or from death, resignation, absence or any other cause whatever, and at no time shall a majority of said board be of one religious denomination. Three of said board of trustees shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of any business, and the absence of any member thereof, without excuse, from the regular meetings of said board for six consecutive months, shall be considered equivalent to a resignation. Said board shall have its first meeting in the month of April of each and every year; select from their number a president, vice president, secretary and treasurer, and at all times may appoint such officers and committees as it may deem necessary. It shall have full power to make, enact and adopt, as well as alter and amend, at pleasure, such by-laws, rules and regulations as they may deem requisite for the management and government of the affairs and property of said corporation.

Rev. John Mathews, Rev. L. H. Pease, James B. Guthrie, John Rudner, W. H. Mathews, C. D. Seymour, Hon. Rufus K. Howell, William J. Johnson, John Nelson, Geo. Brewer, A. H. Nelson and William Wright, with Rev. John Mathews as president, William J. Johnson as vice president, L. H. Pease as secretary, and John Nelson as treasurer, have been chosen and selected as the first board of trustees of said corporation, and shall divide themselves into classes, and determine their respective terms of office, at their first regular meeting, the first class thereof to hold office until the first Monday of April, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-five; the second class thereof until the first Monday of April, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-six; and the third class thereof until the first Monday of April, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-seven.

This done and passed, in my office at New Orleans aforesaid, in the presence of George Cenas and Paul A. Conand, witnesses, both of this city, who hereunto sign their names with the parties and me, the said notary, the day and date aforesaid.

From the Work.

CLOVER HILL, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: When the Bishop was reading out the appointments, Clover Hill fell to my share—a very good share. Leaving my little family at my father-in-law's until I could look out a home for them, I proceeded to my new field of labor. I arrived on Sunday, the fourth of January; had sent an appointment in advance, but it failed to reach here. The people did not expect to get a preacher with a family; hence there was no home provided for me. I could find no one prepared to board us, neither a vacant house to rent, except one for which the terms were unreasonable. What was to be done now? The brethren chose to build a parsonage. True, the way looked somewhat gloomy at first, it being a very busy time with the planters; but they seemed determined to succeed, which was evidence that they were not willing to do without the gospel. The brethren met, and, after "counting the cost," subscribed largely themselves, and then with earnest hearts did they appeal to the friends of religion until they had secured, by subscription, the sum required to build the house. Colonel Zenas Preston, in the goodness of his heart, presented us with a beautiful lot on the south side of the town of Mayersville, the county seat of Issaquena county. The lot is large enough for a church-house and parsonage. We have a house at Clover Hill, two miles below, where the people have worshiped for several years, but it is inconveniently situated, and also too small. Our membership is quite small here, but still, with a little help from without, we believe we can erect a church-house, by and by, on the lot above mentioned. When we had so far progressed as to be sure that the house would be finished, by the consent of the brethren I returned, February 13, to my father-in-law's, in Scott county, to stay with my family until the house should be finished; but about this time the weather became very unfavorable—frequent heavy rains, high water, etc.—until the road became almost impassable. We had great difficulty in getting the lumber hauled; and though we had a good carpenter employed, who engaged to build the house for $75 (about half price,) the weather was such that he could not work regularly, and so the house progressed slowly, insomuch that I began to think it would be a failure, and had already applied to my presiding elder for a transfer to another circuit, when I was cheered by the reception of a letter stating that the parsonage was about ready. This was good news to one who was so much cast down as I was just then. We made ready, and on the thirty-first of March started for our new home, arriving here on Thursday night, April 2. Oh! what relief to find one's self comfortably fixed at home, after four months' wandering around!

And now, Mr. Editor, I wish every circuit that has no parsonage could peep in and see how comfortably we are fixed, and what a good house we have, that it might stimulate them to "go and do likewise." I trust that the good Lord will recompense this people for their kindness to me and my family, and that he will help me to be faithful in the discharge of my duty as shepherd of the flock. I would like to tell you the exact cost of the house, land, etc., but I am not prepared just now—will be by and by. Suffice it to say that we have a good home, among a good people, and are well cared for; no fears of the future, so far as support is concerned. We have no Sabbath school, but hope to have soon. There is a very interesting society of the Friends of Temperance here, doing great good. Upon the whole, it is a very interesting country. The land is rich. This place is about nine or ten miles below the line of Arkansas, on the opposite side of the river. We have a beautiful view of the river on one side of our house, and the little town on the other, and pleasant breezes constantly.

MAYERSVILLE, April 19, 1874.

A WELL-KNOWN Judge of the Supreme Court of New York often relieved his judicial remarks with a touch of humor. One day, during the trial of a case, Mr. Gunn was a witness on the stand, and as he hesitated a good deal, and seemed unwilling, after much persistent questioning, to tell what he knew, the judge said to him: "Come, Mr. Gunn, don't hang fire." After the examination had closed the bar was convulsed by the judge adding: "Mr. Gunn, you can go off—you can be discharged."

GREEN LEAVES.

The sweet leaves, the fresh leaves, the young green leaves,
The leaves in the sunshine growing,
While the martin twitters beneath the eaves,
And the cowslip bells are blowing!

The dormouse awakes from his winter sleep,
And the black merle pipes on the cherry,
And the lily-buds from their green sheath peep,
And maidens and men are merry.

With the fresh life-blood of the new-born spring
The elixir of love and pleasure;
When Hope on the threshold of life takes wing
To search for its golden treasure.

O, green leaves, O fresh leaves, O young green leaves,
When lovers in lanes are roaming,
Ye are dearer to youth than the rich red sheaves
That glow in the August gloaming!

For they tell, with their glorious spikes of gold,
Of a hope that has ripened to glory;
But green leaves whisper a hope untold,
And fond youth lists to the story!

Discipline.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of March 5 Dr. L. Pierce replies to me on the subject of church discipline, and I answer only that we may get [illegible] umn of the doctor's reply I have but few remarks to make.

We esteem the doctor true, honest and faithful to the church. We never accused him of "heresy." We acquit him of this charge, and only think him slightly mistaken as to what the General Conference and Discipline teach on this subject.

We never mentioned "Mr. Wesley" nor his "fundamental requirements," but wrote of New Testament and Methodist disciplinary requirements.

The doctor's word "simpering" means "to smile foolishly," but we will not return bad words, for we love him for his long, laborious "work's sake" for the church of God.

We do not wish the doctor "discounted down," but his extreme views we do hold at a discount.

But he thinks me an extremist. It may be so; but then between two extremes conservative men may find the right path.

Does the doctor really think there is a "dilemma" or a "postulate" in all of his long article?

Did we say: Keep those in the church who are "living in sin by choice?" All these quotations are from the doctor. But to the subject matter on which we honestly and kindly differ.

But why does the doctor ignore Scripture discipline? Were the disciples converted men when Christ chose them and walked with them for years? Were they all regenerate when they received the Lord's Supper? Think of Judas, and the kindness and forbearance of Christ to him because he was still "one" of them.

Did Christ excommunicate Peter for cutting off a man's ear? No; he reproved him. Did Christ cut him off because he even lied, cursed, swore and denied the Savior? No, not even then; but he looked upon him, and Peter went out and wept bitterly.

The above and similar ideas I pressed upon the doctor's attention. When he answers there is nearly a column of personal about me, but not a word about the primitive church.

But as to Methodist discipline. One of these Books of Discipline, issued in 1808, as a condition of reception into the church, reads thus: "A desire to flee from the wrath to come and to be saved from their sins." The italics are the Bishop's, who commended this edition to the church sixty-six years ago, and the Bishops (who knew what they were doing) were Bishops Asbury and McKendree. The Methodist E. Church was not then a society in the Established Church of England, nor in the Episcopal Church of or in America.

But in 1840 the General Conference adopted the following in reference to the reception of persons into the church: "And shall, on examination by the minister in charge, before the church, give satisfactory assurances both of the correctness of their faith and their willingness to observe and keep the rules of the church." Now by "correctness of their faith" we suppose the Conference to mean correctness of their creed; as: "Do you believe in God," etc.; and by "rules," the morals and usages of the church. And yet the doctor says that the General Conference, he thinks, in 1840, laid it down as an ordinance that from thenceforward no one was to be admitted into the church, or offered to the church by the pastor for reception into its fellowship, until he had, in all the prescribed inquiries, become satisfied of their regenerated state of mind and heart.

Now was this the original motion, of which the doctor says he was the author? If so, the General Conference must have so altered it, before they passed it, that the "original" and resultant or accepted one look very much unlike. But the doctor may have meant regeneration as a condition; and, if so, why did his resolution not say so? He knows how to tell what he means. And if the General Conference meant regeneration as a condition of church membership, it knew how to say it, and was honest enough to speak it out in plain language. So great a [illegible] a condition of church membership required a plain statement; [illegible]rence of 1866, in New [illegible]k plainly on this [illegible]oment at [illegible] day

Preaching to One Person.

MR. EDITOR: When I was appointed to the charge of Carrollton circuit, in Pickens county, Alabama, in the year 1842, William Vaughan, then just received on trial, was my colleague. He was a young man who had been raised in a frontier region, and had never had any educational advantages. He could barely read, but was an extraordinary man, possessing astonishing natural eloquence, and great power and unction in preaching. He came to my house, previous to the first round of appointments, on his way to the circuit. I told him to go and fill the appointments, and make appointments for me to succeed him; but he objected, saying that he preferred going in company with me, that the people might see him, and be able to [illegible] whether they would receive him. In his great diffidence he seemed to think it doubtful whether they would accept him as their preacher. I consented, and we started together. The first appointment was at a small church near Vienna, called Bethesda, about forty-five miles from Columbus. The weather was bad; it rained nearly all the first day. The next morning was showery, but we traveled in good spirits, having light hearts and peaceful consciences. On the morning of the second day, on our way to the appointment, which was at ten o'clock, I said to him that I would preach that day, and he must preach on Sabbath, at Emory chapel, which was the next appointment. He strongly objected, and insisted that I must let him preach that day, and I fill the Sabbath appointment. Finding him inflexible, I consented. When we arrived at the little church we found no congregation. The weather being so unfavorable, the people did not expect preaching, and did not come out. However, we alighted, hitched our horses to the saplings near by, took our saddlebags off and entered. After depositing our saddlebags and umbrellas at the side of the pulpit, we seated ourselves together on a bench, in front of the pulpit, and waited a few moments. When the hour arrived I addressed myself very gravely to him, saying: "Brother Vaughan, I reckon you had better commence." He turned his eyes upon me with a half inquiring, half imploring look, and, seeing I was in earnest, he remarked: "I—I believe I would rather you would preach." "O no," said I, "you preach to-day and I will preach on Sunday." "No," said he, "you must preach to-day and I will preach on Sunday." "Very well," said I, and arose and walked into the pulpit. I selected my hymn, and we sung it together. I then prayed and gave out my text, and preached nearly an hour. While I was preaching an old black woman came and sat on the door-step. I also saw one young man pass the door, about ten steps off, looking in, as if inspecting my congregation; but he did not come in. At the conclusion of my sermon I called on Bro. Vaughan to conclude. Said he: "Let us pray;" and he kneeled down and prayed one of his powerful prayers; after which I dismissed my congregation, and we rode off to our stopping-place. Bro. Vaughan said, after we left the church: "I believe that was about as good a meeting as I have ever attended. I felt as if there was nobody but God there."

My motives for preaching on that occasion were the following: 1. It was our privilege to be profited by the services, having a special promise of the presence of the Lord. 2. It was calculated to teach him not to despise the day of small things, and not to refuse to preach because but few attended his appointments. 3. It would teach him not to feel discouraged because of a small congregation, but do his duty, and leave the event to God. 4. The people in the neighborhood would be taught to have confidence in our punctuality in attending our appointments.

Before the close of that year Bro. Vaughan was the most popular preacher that had ever traveled the Carrollton circuit. And, so far from refusing him as their preacher, I told the Conference that I did not think any member of that body could get as many petitions from that circuit as Billy Vaughan.

Superannuated Preachers.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Spence, in the ADVOCATE of March 26, proposes to kill off the superannuated preachers, if nothing better can be devised for them by the next General Conference. This would be about as creditable to the church as to starve them, yet I think that body—the General Conference—can do something better for them than either. The question he propounds, "What ought to be done with them?" is important, and, I trust, will be duly considered in Louisville next May.

I have three propositions to make—one to the Conference, one to the pastors and people, and one to the superannuated preachers themselves—which, I think, would entirely remove the difficulty complained of.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Spence, in the ADVOCATE of March 26, proposes to kill off the superannuated preachers, if nothing better can be devised for them by the next General Conference. I. The Conference. Let it never be said: "There arose up a new king, which knew not Joseph."

In the third place, let the superannuated preachers not forget that the world moves. Times and peoples are constantly changing. Means and measures that were appropriate and successful fifty years ago may not always be so now. Besides, a pastor, standing in a different relation to the people, sees things from a different standpoint, and hence, perhaps, sometimes in a different light; and, being the responsible one before God and the church for the work, he dare not adopt measures which his judgment does not approve, however much he may desire to defer to the judgment of his older brethren. Superannuated preachers, though old, wise and good, are not infallible, else why complain of the Pope? Neither should they desire to destroy the individuality of the present active ministers and pastors. It is in the power of the superannuated preachers to greatly embarrass, cramp and hinder their younger brethren, or to facilitate their labors, encourage their hearts and sustain them in their work. Of course they all desire to do the latter, and it is only in accidental and exceptional cases that they do the former. The latter course will always secure larger Conference collections.

Support of Presiding Elders.

REPLY TO J. P.

MR. EDITOR: In your paper of the twelfth of February there is an article on the support of presiding elders, signed J. P., which requires some notice, as the writer tries to make the impression that presiding elders are not as well supported as circuit preachers are. On this subject he must be mistaken, and as evidence of the fact I wish to relate a circumstance or two. In a large and wealthy Conference in the South not long since, on a certain district, the stewards allowed the presiding elder a salary of $800, and the Annual Conference also allowed the same man, or made an appropriation of $400; and on one of the circuits in that district the circuit preacher was allowed a little over $500, and the elder and circuit preacher had families of the same size. Here, then, the presiding elder was drawing nearly $300 more than the circuit preacher, or in that proportion, and then had a missionary appropriation of $400 beside, while the circuit preacher was drawing no missionary money. More than this, the circuit preacher had to take much of his allowance in provisions, corn, meat, etc., at a high price, and pay over to the presiding elder his proportionate part of what was paid in in money.

The writer knows of a similar case in another Conference, where the presiding elder's claim is $700, and one of his circuit preacher's claim is $500, and their families are just the same. The circuit preacher takes much of his claim in provisions at a high price, and has to pay out of it to his presiding elder his pro rata share in money. Now, Mr. Editor, is this right? And if the facts could be known, perhaps in a majority of cases in the Southern Conferences something like a similar state of affairs exist. Now what does J. P. propose? Here is what he says: "We believe a better plan would be to do away with the whole plan which now exists, and levy a per cent. on the salaries of all the preachers on the district sufficient to meet the claim of the presiding elder." Now, then, what do you say to that, all you circuit preachers on all the districts? In the above quotation the italics are mine; but if I understand Bro. J. P. in the above statement, he means that the presiding elder's claim must be levied on your salary, and paid, whether yours is paid or not, even if his is larger than yours in proportion.

Now if Bro. J. P. could suggest some plan by which all of the preachers could be better supported it would be a good suggestion. But some of his insinuations seem to be a little unkind, as the following quotation will show: "Again, it often happens that a goodly proportion of the claim of the circuit is collected not only after the fourth Quarterly Conference, but even after the Annual Conference, and, thus collected and paid by the circuit, never gets to the recording steward's book, and the presiding elder rarely ever gets his pro rata." Now I suppose he means by that that the circuit and stationed preachers pocket and keep all that is paid after the fourth Quarterly Conference, and refuse or neglect to pay over to the presiding elder his pro rata. Now if that is not his meaning, what can it be? I am yours in Christian bonds, H. P. W.

MORRISTOWN, TENN., March, 1874.

Denominationalism.

MR. EDITOR: I see in the ADVOCATE of April 2 an article under the head of "Denominationalism," which puts me in mind of a sermon which has no Christ in it. The writer has not a word of Scripture proof to sustain his position, but refers to the government of the United States and individual States as analogous and satisfactory proof. He further says that, owing to the decline of denominational zeal, we may account for the present low state of religion. Just the reverse is my opinion. Denominational zeal has swallowed up Christian zeal—more regard for the name than the quality of the church. I predicate my hope of salvation upon the teachings of the Scriptures, and anything that has no scriptural authority I regard as trivial and speculative. "Search the Scriptures" evidences that everything needful in [illegible] our salvation may be found [illegible]. The present denominations [illegible] right, but there is certainly [illegible]ptural authority for them, and [illegible] cannot be of much import-

The fact that "the church exists different denominations" is [illegible] argument that it is right, unless [illegible]rized by the Scripture. Man [illegible] in sinfulness, yet the Scrip[illegible] informs us plainly and emphatically that it is wrong, and he is entreated, admonished and exhorted to "cease to do evil and learn to do well." I would that all true Christians be recognized everywhere alike, regardless of given names. I see no discrepancy made in the New Testament. All receive the same instruction, the same counsel, the same warning, and I may say the same doctrine. The human family is divided by the Scripture into two classes—the righteous and the wicked. I regard the first as members of Christ's church, and the latter as refusing to become members. Let the first come forth in her scriptural habiliments, "as clear as the sun, as fair as the moon, and as terrible as an army with banners," and I would not give a fig for denominational zeal.

Yours in love, A METHODIST.

The Nose.

This prominent organ, although a leading feature, yet few of us care to be led by it, except in the direction of a good dinner. This need not prevent us from pursuing it as a subject, showing wherein the importance of the organ is not duly estimated.

As a feature of the face it, more than any other, changes its character, although not so capable of expression as the eyes and mouth. Its ideal beauty varies with different races. The Africans of Sierra Leone prize the flat nose, and the Egyptian dotes on the veritable, pure and unadulterated pug. The Tartar races, having very small noses, consider them the very highest type of beauty. The most beautiful woman in all Tartary was considered so because she had only two holes where the nose ought to have been. There seems to be no universal standard of nasal beauty. The Romans adored the aquiline, the Greek the straight line; the latter, coming nearest our idea of the beautiful, is accepted as the standard in this latitude.

But there are other uses for the nose beyond its element of beauty or the reverse. The sense of smell is popularly supposed to be the only service it is called upon to perform, at least we should judge so from the number of open mouths we meet sailing along the streets. One of the main objects of the nostrils is for respiratory purposes. There is very little doubt that air passing through the nostrils is refined, purified and eliminated of all injurious gases, infection and dust before being permitted access to the lungs. It is very easy to see how habitual respiration through the mouth is not only unnatural, but productive of disease. More especially at night we should accustom ourselves to sleep with the mouth closed. All the energies of the system are then at rest, and its power of resistance at the lowest ebb. If the mouth be open the enemy is allowed to enter, and we may be sure he fastens upon the most delicate part of our organization.

In a recent lecture by Prof. Tyndall he demonstrates fully the danger of sleeping with the mouth open, a practice unknown to the lower animals. He says: "If I were to endeavor to bequeath the most important motto which human language can convey, it should be these words:

SHUT——YOUR——MOUTH.

"In the social transactions of life this might have its beneficial results, as the most friendly cautionary advice, or be received as the grossest of insults; but where I would print and engrave it—in every nursery and on every bed-post in the universe—its meaning would not be mistaken, and, if obeyed, its importance would soon be realized."—National.

Hair as an Index of Character.

Coarse black hair and dark skin signify great power of character, with a tendency to sensuality. Fine black hair and dark skin indicate strength of character, along with purity and goodness. Stiff, straight black hair and beard indicate a coarse, strong, rigid, straightforward character.—Fine dark brown hair signifies the combination of exquisite sensibilities with great strength of character. Flat, clinging, straight hair a melancholy but extremely constant character. Harsh, upright hair is the sign of a reticent and sour spirit—a stubborn and harsh character. Coarse red hair indicates powerful animal passions, together with a corresponding strength of character. Auburn hair with florid countenance denotes the highest order of sentiment and intensity of feeling, purity of character, with the highest capacity for enjoyment or suffering. Straight, even, smooth and glossy hair denotes strength, harmony and evenness of character, hearty affections, a clear head and superior talents. Fine, silky, supple hair is the mark of a delicate and sensitive temperament, and speaks in favor of the mind and character of the owner. Crisp, curly hair indicates a hasty, somewhat impetuous and rash character. White hair denotes a lymphatic and indolent constitution; and we may add that, besides all these qualities, there are chemical properties residing in the coloring matter of the hair-tube which undoubtedly have some effect upon the disposition. Thus red-haired people are notoriously passionate. Now red hair is proved by analysis to contain a large amount of sulphur, while very black hair is colored with almost pure carbon. The presence of these matters in the blood points to peculiarities of temperament and feeling which are almost universally associated with them. The very way in which the hair flows is strongly indicative of the ruling passions and inclinations, and perhaps a clever person could give a shrewd guess at the manner of a man or woman's disposition by only seeing the backs of their heads.—The Hair Markets of Europe.

I AM always afraid lest dogs should come to learn our language. If they ever do, they will cut us entirely. Everything seems clever and uncommonplace in a language of which you know but little, and that is why we appear such clever and interesting fellows to dogs. If they know our language well, would any dog sit out a public dinner? Would any dog remain in the nursery, listening to the foolish talk of nurses and mothers?—Arthur Helps.

Obituaries.

LLOYD MARTIN was born in Anne Arundel county, Maryland, on the fifteenth of January, 1816, and died on the seventeenth of December, 1873, in Summit, Pike county, Mississippi. He was the son of William and Harriet Martin. His parents made no profession of religion, but favored the piety of their children, and Lloyd in early manhood devoted himself to the service of God. His education fitted him for the calling of a teacher, and at the age of eighteen he entered upon the duties of an educator, which he followed to the close of his life. Eleven years of his early manhood he remained teaching in Maryland; then journeyed West, and finally South to Mississippi, and settled in Jefferson county. Here he married Levicy McNeil. While in Jefferson county he made for himself a good reputation as a teacher, maintained an unblemished moral character, continued an unfaltering course as a Christian, and secured the confidence of the people.

In 1872 he removed to Summit. For some months before his death his health was feeble and his strength gradually wasted away. Yet he did not seem to think his end was approaching, and pursued steadily his calling to within a few days of his death. His sufferings were not great—did not complain much of pain. He spoke calmly of his hope of a better life and of his trust in the Redeemer when, some time before his sickness, he was approached on the subject by his pastor. He was not demonstrative as a Christian, but was truthful, honest, pure—a good man and true. He leaves a wife, two daughters and three sons. The oldest son, though but about ten years old, was converted and united with the church about the time of his father's death. May the rest of the children follow his example and seek the way of salvation in their youth.

B. JONES.

LOUISA T. LEWIS, daughter of the late Hon. T. H. Lewis, and wife of Rev. C. A. Frazee, departed this life, in the full assurance of a blissful immortality, at the residence of her husband, in Opelousas, on the eighth day of April, 1874, in her forty-ninth year.

Her parents being members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, she was brought up in the fear of the Lord. Sister Frazee was awakened and joined the church, under the ministry of the late Rev. David Kinnear, in the year 1843, and was afterward converted while praying in her father's library. Her conversion was a genuine work, as was manifested through her whole after-life.

She was united in marriage to her now bereaved husband, and for a time her life and fortunes became identified with those of the itinerant ministry, as shared by him. Her kindly and affectionate nature, and cheerful and happy disposition, and especially her piety, peculiarly qualified her for her new position. Her loving and kindly spirit called forth a responsive sentiment in the hearts of nearly all with whom she came in contact. Few knew but to love her. Her presence was sunshine, and she made friends wherever she went. A kinder heart has seldom ceased to beat. She was a devoted wife, a tender and fond mother. Her religious life was generally quiet and peaceful, consistent and firm. Sometimes her soul overwhelmed with Christian joy and exulted in the divine love. Always there seemed evidence that her heart was stayed upon Christ in faith and love. In all relations of life she was true and faithful; yet, amid human infirmities and unworthiness, she relied only upon the merits of the Savior.

For eight years she was deeply afflicted, and for several months before her death she was wonderfully blessed, often urging her children, relatives and others to devote themselves to Christ and his church. During her last illness her mind was blessedly supported with the prospect of future rest and glory in the presence and enjoyment of her Lord. She bowed with submission to her heavenly Father's will in the painful separation of her family, saying: "The Lord's will be done." As her dissolution drew near she said: "I have no fear of death. It has lost its sting. O the name of Christ is precious?" She lay for some time in a state of great exhaustion and in the agonies of death, not able to articulate, but perfectly conscious. At length it pleased God to release her. The brittle thread was cut, and the spirit took its flight to the paradise of God, to be forever with the Lord. May the bereaved family meet her in heaven.

R. S. TRIPPETT.

SISTER JANE R. MCLEOD was born in Covington county, Mississippi, October 22, 1832. She was the daughter of Bro. William Loflin, who was well known to many of our ministers of the Mississippi Annual Conference as one of the early pillars of Methodism in this country. In the year 1838 Bro. Loflin, in connection with some other brethren, by his energy, devotion and liberality, founded old Santee church, where some of our oldest and most beloved preachers have labored in years gone by. Among others we can mention the names of Dr. Whans, Dr. Drake, Thomas Owens, Greene M. Rogers and J. G. Jones. The daughter trod in her father's footsteps. When quite a child she was so dutiful to her parents that her father claimed her as his favorite. In school she seemed to be a favorite with her teacher, and, according to her own statement, she was neither reproved nor punished by any of them. In 1844, while Bro. Shockley was in charge of this circuit, she regularly attended a Sabbath school at Santee church.

On July 31, 1851, she was married to Bro. H. A. McLeod, of this county. As a wife she was truly devoted to her husband. Her prudent management of household affairs, her uniform mildness of disposition and her ardent affection for her husband seem to have been prominent traits in her character. As a mother her solicitude for the welfare of her children was deep and earnest. She not only surrounded them with the incense of her prayers, the weight of her counsel and the influence of her example, but brought them, morning and evening, to her feet and taught them to pray, and we are happy to learn that her labor was not lost on them.

In 1842 she joined the church under the ministry of Rev. H. T. Jones. This was on probation, I suppose, for in a little more than one year afterward she professed religion under the ministry of Bro. Shockley, when she was about twelve years old. As a Christian, all who knew her seem to give their testimony that her life and conduct were blameless. This is no idle compliment, for she has been known to the people of this community throughout the whole of her life. Sister McLeod never would cherish malice against any one. The hospitality of Bro. McLeod's house was always open to the ministers of Jesus Christ. In this Sister McLeod always did her part in providing for their comfort.

She died March 28, between six and seven o'clock A. M., leaving behind her an affectionate husband, eight children, and numerous friends and relatives to mourn her loss. On the thirtieth of March she was buried in the family grave-yard, selected by Bro. William Loflin a short time previous to his death, where her father, mother and sisters were buried. Sister McLeod was born, lived and died within one mile of the same spot. All her acquaintances, so far as I can learn, consider her one of the best of Christians. She has left her seat at the fireside, but may the spirit of her piety still remain. Her seat in the church is vacated for a seat in the congregation above. Her labors, prayers and songs on earth are ended. Her voice is hushed in the stillness of the sepulcher. Her pious ashes, side by side with the ashes of her father, mother and sister, peacefully sleep in the grave. This reminds us of the changeless rest their spirits are enjoying together in paradise.

HENRY B. SMITH was born in the State of South Carolina in 1806; moved from thence to North Carolina, where he professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church; was there appointed class-leader and licensed to exhort; removed from North Carolina to Kemper county, Mississippi, in 1851; died March 28, 1874.

There is something gained, in a world of selfishness and sin like this, to have enjoyed the society and friendship of one in whom so many of the Christian graces abounded, whose piety had subdued nature's powers, and brought them into obedience to the will of Christ. Although, while living, a seeming ostentation would have grieved the spirit of this noble Christian man, yet it is not fit that we should permit him silently to pass from his place in the church below to his home in the church above. The memory of a character so consistent, a life so full of good works and godly counsel, ought to be preserved and cherished by the church. The subject of this sketch deserves a more extended notice than can be given in this obituary. Though "we all do fade as a leaf, yet the righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance."

Henry B. Smith is dead! Sad event to the bereaved wife, loving children and friends; sad for the community of Pleasant Ridge; sad for the church he loved so well and labored so faithfully to build up! He was a member of the church for over forty years, most of which time he was class-leader. He was a licensed exhorter at the time of my first acquaintance with him in 1866. Since my acquaintance, and especially as his pastor, I have had occasion to know his devotion to the cause of God among his people. At a time when nothing but untiring devotion could, by the blessing of God, build up the church, he took hold with a firm, trusting hand and saw the work of the Lord prosper. He thought, worked and prayed and enlisted others, as far as he could, in the good work. His faith in God was strong. As a strong man he did a great work with little noise. What he was to his community cannot be fully known here. He was a peacemaker; consequently a child of God. This was demonstrated in the varied fortunes which befell him in domestic and social life—in his zeal for the church, in his kindly offices to the poor, and in his hospitalities to those whose privilege it was to visit him, the gentle spirit which won the confidence and love of the young, and the meek remonstrance which checked the resentment of the old. In time of prosperity he indulged his benevolent disposition in generous giving. When war and adversity came, his lavish hand still bestowed as God gave ability.

He was frugal, thoughtful and prayerful in all life's relations. His exhortation was a direct appeal to the church to faithfulness, and to sinners to fly to the outstretched arms of mercy at once. His appeals to the throne of grace in prayer were often with great power, full of holy unction, often melting whole congregations into tears. For years his health has been giving way under the gnawing tooth of time and disease, until he was brought to the stormy banks of Jordan, looking over which he saw the promised land and rejoiced at the prospect of entering there. He has left his family a priceless heritage in his spotless character, the church an unanswerable illustration of the truth of religion, and the community the fruits of a well-spent life, while he has attained unto the "rest that remains to the people of God."

JAMES M. GANN.

KING LUDWIG, of Bavaria, while recently walking the streets of Munich, met a soldier with one arm and entered into conversation with him. The soldier replied abruptly, and then, learning who it was that had done him the honor to address him, made an apology. "How could it you did not know me?" asked the monarch. "How could I?" replied the one-armed hero; "you never come to the army, and I never go to the theater."

HE IS NOT HERE—HE IS RISEN.

Hallelujah! Jesus lives!
Life, immortal life he gives—
Conquered now are death and hell!
Jesus pierced them, and they fell!
Heaven and earth the conquest tell!
Jesus lives!

Hallelujah! See his tomb!
Victory-lights prevent the gloom!
All your tears they shine away,
Poor mourners for the dead to-day,
Look in here where Jesus lay—
Jesus lives!

Hallelujah! Seek no more
The Gone-to-Life at death's low door;
Now believe the joyful word
From the herald-angels heard—
Heaven and earth the tidings stirred!
Jesus lives!

Hallelujah! Then will I
Dread no more to death to die!
By his death my foes are slain,
From his grave I rise again;
Enough for me what faith makes plain—
Jesus lives!

Hallelujah! He is me
Life in death will surely be;
Joyfully I meet death here;
Christ, my life, will soon appear;
Faith looks up and sees him near!
Jesus lives!

Sadness of the Birds.

Is it true that

"In nature there is nothing melancholy?"

Mark that slender, graceful yellow warbler, running along the high oak boughs like a perturbed spirit, seeking restlessly, anxiously, something which he seems never to find; and uttering every now and then a long, saxious cry, four or five times repeated, which would be a squeal, were it not so sweet. Suddenly he flits away, and flutters round the pendent tips of the beech-sprays like a great yellow butterfly, picking the insects from the leaves; then flits back to a bare bough, and sings, with heaving breast and quivering wings, a short, shrill, feeble, tremulous song; and then returns to his old sadness, wandering and complaining all day long. Is there no melancholy in that cry? It sounds sad; why should it not be meant to be sad? We recognize joyful notes, angry notes, fearful notes. They are very similar (strangely enough) in all birds. They are very similar (more strangely still) to the cries of human beings, especially children, when influenced by the same passions. And when we hear a note which to us expresses sadness, why should not the bird be sad? Yon wood-wren has had enough to make him sad, if only he recollects it; and if he can recollect his road from Morocco hither, he may be recollects likewise what happened on the road—the long, weary journey up the Portuguese coast, and through the gap between the Pyrenees and the Jaysquivel, and up the Landes of Bordeaux, and across Brittany, flitting by night, and hiding and feeding as he could by day; and how his mates flew against the lighthouses, and were killed by hundreds; and how he essayed the British Channel, and was blown back, shriveled up by bitter blasts; and how he felt, nevertheless, that "that wan water he must cross," he knew not why; but something told him that his mother had done it before him, and he was flesh of her flesh, life of her life, and had inherited her "instinct"—as we call hereditary memory, in order to avoid the trouble of finding out what it is and how it comes. A duty was laid on him to go back to the place where he was bred; and he must do it; and now it is done; and he is weary and sad and lonely; and, for aught we know, thinking already that when the leaves begin to turn yellow he must go back again, over the Channel, over the Landes, over the Pyrenees, to Morocco once more. Why should he not be sad? He is a very delicate bird, as both his shape and his note testify. He can hardly keep up his race here in England, and is accordingly very uncommon, while his two cousins, the willow-wren and the chiff-chaff, who, like him, build for some mysterious reason domed nests upon the ground, are stout and busy, and numerous and thriving everywhere. And what he has gone through may be too much for the poor wood-wren's nerves; and he gives way; while willow-wren, black cap, nightingale, who have gone by the same road and suffered the same dangers, have stoutness of heart enough to throw off the past, and give themselves up to present pleasure. Why not? Who knows? There is labor, danger, bereavement, death in nature; and why should not some, at least, of the so-called dumb things know it, and grieve at it as well as we?

Why not? Unless we yield to the assumption (for it is nothing more) that these birds act by some unknown thing called Instinct, as it might be called x or y; and are, in fact, just like the singing birds which spring out of snuff-boxes, only so much better made that they can eat, grow and propagate their species. The imputation of acting by instinct cuts both ways. We, too, are creatures of instinct. We breathe and eat by instinct; but we talk and build houses by reason. And so may the birds. It is more philosophical, surely, to attribute actions in them to the same causes to which we attribute them (from experience) in ourselves. "But if so," some will say, "birds must have souls." We must define what our own souls are before we can define what kind of soul or no soul a bird may or may not have. The truth is that we want to set up some "dignity of human nature;" some innate superiority to the animals on which we may pride ourselves as our own possession, and not return thanks with fear and trembling for it, as the special gift of almighty God. So we have given the poor animals over to the mechanical philosophy, and allowed them to be considered as only mere cunningly-devised pieces of watch-work, if philosophy would only spare us, and our fine human souls, of which we are so proud, though they are doing all the wrong and folly they can from one week's end to the other. And now our self-conceit has brought its own Nemesis; the mechanical philosophy is turning on us and saying: "The bird's 'nature' and your 'human nature' differ only in degree, but not in kind. If they are machines, so are you. They have no souls, you confess. You have none either."

But there are those who neither yield to the mechanical philosophy nor desire to stifle it. While it is honest and industrious, as it is now, it can do naught but good, because it can do naught but discover facts. It will only help to divide the light from the darkness, truth from dreams, health from disease. Let it claim for itself all that it can prove to be of the flesh, fleshly. That which is spiritual will stand out more clearly as of the spirit. Let it thrust scalpel and microscope into the most sacred penetralia of brain and nerve. It will only find everywhere beneath brain and beneath nerve that substance and form which is not matter nor phenomenon, but the divine cause thereof; and while it helps, with ruthless but wholesome severity, to purge our minds from idols of the cave and idols of the fane, it will leave untouched, more clearly defined, and therefore more sacred and important than ever,

"Those first affections,
Those shadowy recollections,
Which, be they what they may,
Are yet the fountain-light of all our day;
Are yet the master-light of all our seeing;
Uphold us, cherish and have power to make
Our noisy years seem moments in the being
Of the eternal silence; truths that wake
To perish never;
Which neither listlessness nor mad endeavor,
Nor man nor boy,
Nor all that is at enmity with joy,
Can utterly abolish or destroy.
* * * * * * *
Then sing, ye birds, sing out with joyous sound,"

as the poet-philosopher bids you. Victorious analysis will neither abolish you, nor the miraculous and unfathomable in you and in your song, which has stirred the hearts of poets since first man was man. And if any one shall hint to us that we and the birds may have sprung originally from the same type; that the difference between our intellect and theirs is one of degree, and not of kind, we may believe or doubt; but in either case we shall not be greatly moved. "So much the better for the birds," we will say, "and none the worse for us. You raise the birds toward us; but you do not lower us toward them. What we are, we are by the grace of God. Our own powers and the burden of them we know full well."—Charles Kingsley, in "A Chorus of Birds."

Missions in Ceylon.

Ceylon, with its million and a half of inhabitants, one-fourth of whom profess Hindooism and three-fourths Buddhism (commingled with Brahmistic features such as caste,) has been for more than fifty years the scene of evangelical missionary labors, beginning with the English Baptists in 1813. But long before this time missionaries had been active in Ceylon. In the sixteenth century the Roman Catholics, through Portuguese influence, and especially by means of the intense zeal of St. Francis Xavier, converted vast numbers of the heathen Singhalese, many of whom remained faithful to their church during the time of the Dutch rule succeeding the Portuguese; so that at present there are said to be 150,000 natives professing Roman Catholicism in the two bishopries of Columbo and Jaffna. The Dutch, who in the middle of the seventeenth century supplanted the Portuguese, also made strong efforts to convert the natives from heathenism and Roman Catholicism to Protestantism, and with such nominal success that there were once 300,000 Protestants in Ceylon. Multitudes of these converts relapsed into heathenism, and now the remnants of the widespread Dutch missions are in the charge of the Church of Scotland missionaries. The evangelical missions, which during the last half century have been doing a more solid and spiritual work, numbered, in 1862, 15,273 converts, since which time they have all been steadily advancing, most of the societies having doubled the number of their converts. Recent reports from Ceylon give evidence of increase in native gospel work. The Missionary Herald, after recording conversions in four of the congregations of the American Board, gives an account of Sabbath services at Oodoopiddy, from which we make the following extract:

"At a quarter-past four it is a pleasant sight indeed to see the Christians, both male and female, going in different directions to preach the gospel—Mrs. Smith and one or two school girls in one direction, Miss Townsend and one or two school girls in another direction; Sarah and Susan, the two Bible women, in still another direction; and the other Christians doing likewise; while Mr. Smith has a meeting with the servants and with the children of Christian parents. So, in a single afternoon, we have generally eight or ten meetings in as many different places."

The same report mentions the conversion and baptism of the first Brahmin ever received into the church in Jaffna. His relatives instituted a funeral service for him as one dead. Passing from the mission of the American Board, which should be called the "Jaffna," rather than the Ceylon mission, as it alone of all the societies is confined to the belt islands north of Ceylon, we gather from the Missionary Record evidences of progress in the Jaffna mission of the Church Missionary Society. Fifty-eight candidates were confirmed at Nellore. A band of native Christian singers gave the missionaries the opportunity of addressing large heathen audiences at various places, while the especially bitter attacks of the Sivites (Hindoo reformers) on missionaries, native Christians and Christianity generally, showed that the power of the gospel was felt in Jaffna. The English Baptists have a number of missionary stations around Columbo, among the Singhalese (Buddhists,) who form the largest part of the inhabitants of the island. The Missionary Herald (Baptist,) in giving an account of the itinerant work of a native evangelist, mentions the conversion of a rigid Buddhist and man of rank. He had long been a seeker after the truth. On examination of his own religion he had found that Buddhism had borrowed much from Brahminism. Thinking that the latter might be better than his own Buddhism, he started out on a long journey to find a Brahmin teacher; and in the course of it came in contact with a Catholic priest, who gave him a controversial work against Buddhism and a prayer-book. Finding, however, that the opponent of Buddhism knew very little about it, he lost confidence in the priest and returned both books. But by this time he had learned that there were other Christians besides Romanists; and, after several futile attempts to communicate with them, he was at last able to buy a Bible from a Wesleyan missionary, with which he returned to his village, and from the unaided study of which he became a Christian. At this point the Baptist evangelist found him, "instructed him in the way of the Lord more perfectly," and on July 24, 1873, he was baptized in the presence of a large number of his Buddhist relatives and friends. The Wesleyan Missionary Society has by far the most extended work in Ceylon. From the Missionary Notices we draw the following statistics for 1873. In the two districts—the Northern or Tamil (Jaffna,) and the Southern or Singhalese—there are 38 circuits, 12 English missionaries, 33 native ministers, 49 catechists, 57 chapels, 89 other preaching places, 2,252 members and 506 on probation, and 7,623 scholars. "In no district in India has native agency been so successfully employed as in the two Singhalese districts. All the native circuits are making strenuous efforts toward self-support." Among the native Wesleyan pastors is Rev. David de Silva, who has distinguished himself as a writer and controversialist with the Buddhists, who, in later years, have been using, both with voice and pen, the weapons of European science and criticism against the gospel. Besides the societies above mentioned, the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel had, in 1868, a total membership of 7,419. Two races in Ceylon have not yet been reached by the gospel—the Moolmen (Arabs, probably,) who are Mohammedans; and the Weddahs, descendants of the aborigines of Ceylon, who occupy the lowest level of humanity, and who appear to have no institue of worship and no knowledge of a God.—Independent.

Bible Printing.

For more than two hundred years after the art of printing was invented no person was allowed to print anything in England without direct permission from the government. In 1586 a decree was made that no printing presses should be set up in any place out of London, except at the two universities. No book could then be published except by the Stationers' Company; but soon afterward special privileges were granted to other persons. One man was permitted to publish all the almanacs, another all the law-books, a third all the school-books and a fourth all the Bibles.

Most of these exclusive rights were abolished years ago. The one that actually lasted the longest was that which gave a monopoly of almanac publishing, a legal decision having put an end to it in 1775. The right, however, to publish Bibles is still allowed by law only to the Queen's printer and the University of Oxford. Although the law is a "dead letter," and has long been disregarded by publishers, yet for a great many years every violation of it was severely punished.

One result of the law was that the persons who had this privilege of printing the Bible abused it greatly. The copies they published were very carelessly issued, and some important texts were altered. The copy printed in 1653 contained the text: "Know ye not that the un-righteous" (instead of "righteous") "shall inherit the kingdom of God?"

The monopolists having the power to charge what they pleased, put the price so high that only the rich could buy a Bible. So there were few copies sold, and those were so badly printed that they were hardly worth having.

At last this unjust system was broken down. Thomas Guy, a shrewd book-seller of London, sent an agent to Holland, who bought good type and fine paper, and employed Dutch printers to put together well-printed Bibles.

These were carried to England and sold in great numbers at a low price. Other publishers adopted Guy's innovation, and the King's printer began to see that, like the Ephesian idol-makers, his craft was in danger. He went to law and followed the book-smugglers so sharply that they were obliged to discontinue the importation of the sacred book.

But Thomas Guy was not to be defeated so easily. He went to the authorities of the University of Oxford, and, by hard work, persuaded them to sell their privilege. Then he brought over to England Dutch workmen and type, and began to issue large numbers of excellent Bibles at a low price. The law was thus evaded, and it has never since been really enforced.

Yet such is the effect of custom that it is ten chances to one that if any reader of the Companion who owns a Bible printed in England, will turn to the title-page, he will find at the bottom words like these, "Oxford: Printed at the University Press," and below the words, "Cum Privilegio," Latin words, which signify that the University Press enjoys the privilege alone.

Of course all these Bibles are not printed at the University Press, but the publishers, in order to be strictly within the law, obtained the permission of the University.

It is interesting to know that Thomas Guy, who was the means of making Bibles plenty and cheap in England, acquired a very large fortune, and that he used it notably in founding a hospital in Southwark (now a part of London) that still bears his name.—Companion.

Scientific.

THE iron districts of Georgia are being rapidly developed, new companies with heavy capital having been recently organized to push forward the work.

IF WHISKY, diluted with seven times its weight of water, be treated with ozonized air, it will in a short time be entirely converted into vinegar. A single establishment in France has manufactured ninety barrels of pickling vinegar a day by this process.

THE London Chemical News gives a very interesting paper "On the Presence of Gold in Sea Water," by R. Sonstadt. The proportion of gold in sea water is stated to be less than one grain to the ton; consequently especial precautions are necessary to detect and obtain this very small quantity. The processes given are said, however, to be very satisfactory.

A CURIOUS deposit, composed almost entirely of pure silica, has been discovered in North Wales. It forms the bed of a small lake at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea, and is of volcanic origin. When properly washed and prepared it furnishes a powder, which is very finely divided and mixes freely with oils and pigments, and is worked with the greatest ease. When laid on it soon becomes hard, and presents a polished surface, which resists the action of acids and heat.

CONTROLLING SEX IN BUTTERFLIES.—In the American Naturalist for March Mrs. Mary Treat describes a number of experiments with the larvæ of butterflies, which go to show that sex is not determined in the egg of the insect, but depends upon the amount of nourishment furnished to the larvæ. Almost without exception those which were fed as long as they could eat, before going into the chrysalis state, proved to be females, while the half-starved and stunted larvæ became males. These observations are quite novel, so far as we know, and will doubtless require confirmation. Their important bearing upon embryological science is evident.

A RECENT paper by Dr. Liebreich throws light upon the origin of short sight. He demonstrates that the two evils of permanent short sight and curvature of the spine, both so much more frequent among the educated than the uneducated classes of society, are developed by the unnatural posture usually enforced in schools. During childhood the eye possesses a great power of accommodating itself to distance, and if in reading and writing the desks are so arranged that the eye, instead of being twelve to fifteen inches distant, is kept at seven or eight inches from the book or paper, the eye adapts itself to the near object, and permanent short sight is the result. Moreover, as the predisposition to the disease is hereditary, short sight is constantly on the increase in highly civilized countries.

SOMEWHAT less than two years ago a buoy was moored in Kealakekua bay. Recently the anchor was hoisted in order to examine the condition of the chain. The latter, which is a heavy two-inch cable, was found covered with corals and oyster shells, some of which were as large as a man's hand. The large corals measure four and a half inches in length, which thus represents their growth during the period of two years that the anchor and cable have been submerged. The specimens which we have seen show the nature of the formation of the coral by the coral-animals very distinctly. When taken out of the water it had small crabs on it. A question arises whether these crabs live on the coral polyps, or whether they simply seek the branches of the coral for protection. The popular idea is that corals are of extremely slow growth, yet here we have a formation equal to over seventeen feet in a century.

IS QUITO SINKING?—Unless it be in connection with an earthquake or a revolution—and to be sure they are pretty frequent in South America—one seldom hears of Quito, and to all appearance, if things go on as at present, there will some day be no Quito to hear of. According to the Ausland the altitude of Quito is rapidly diminishing. In 1745 La Condamine found it to be 9,598 feet above the sea; in 1803 Humboldt could only make it 9,570 feet. Again in 1831 Bonssingault, to his surprise, found it but 9,567 feet; in 1867 Orton discovered that it was but 9,520 feet; and in 1870 Stubel and Beiss could make its altitude above the sea but 9,536 feet, so that, unless some radical alteration takes place, its ultimate disappearance is only a matter of time. Altogether Quito has had a checkered time of it. A terrible earthquake in 1797 is said to have destroyed 40,000 persons; in 1811 some 300 of the juntas of Quito were slaughtered by the Spanish viceroys of Santa Fe, Bogota and Peru, and in March, 1859, another dreadful earthquake reduced the city to ruins. It must be confessed that Quito has nothing very cheering either in a prospective or retrospective glance.

AN IRISHMAN, on receiving the first wages in this country, asked his employer in what way he could send a pound of it to Ireland. He was told that he would get for him a bill of exchange, when he could inclose it in the letter he wished to send and post it. Pat's countenance fell, and he exclaimed: "It can't be done now; there's law agin it; for I see on all the street corners they've put a ticket up saying: 'Post no Bills.'"

THE ruins of old friendships are a more melancholy spectacle to me than those of desolated palaces. They exhibit the heart that was once lighted up with joy, all dump and deserted, and haunted by those birds of ill omen that only nestle in ruins. Campbell.

GRACE is a quality different from beauty, though nearly allied to it, which is never observed without affecting us with emotions of peculiar delight, and which it is, perhaps, the first object of the arts of sculpture and painting to study and present.—Allison.

THE Bishop of Treves, in Rhenish Prussia, has been arrested by order of government for violation of ecclesiastical law. Bismarck does not show any lack of nerve.

TEN of the Roman Catholic bishops of Prussia have signed a joint document, intended to be a fresh protest against the ecclesiastical laws, and also against the allegation that they are disloyal or rebel subjects of the State. They declare their love for their country, loyalty to the crown and their readiness to obey established authority. They recall to the recollection of the faithful the fact that over and above the stringent acts in force, others still more severe have been presented to the Prussian Chambers, and that these laws might have the effect of confiscating the property of the church and suppressing the whole ecclesiastical administration—the annihilation, in a word, of everything that constitutes the Roman Catholic Church in Prussia. The signatures to this protestation include the Archbishop of Cologne, the Prince Bishop of Breslau and the Bishops of Limburg, Paderborn, Mayence, Culm, Treves, Leuka, Fribourg, Ermeland, Munster, Hildesheim.

HIGH CHURCH.—The Church Journal defines the state of parties in the Episcopal Church. It classes them in four divisions: High Church, Low Church, Broad Church and "Catholic," and it says: "The 'Low' Churchmen, who were at one time the only other division known, are not numerous, and they are certainly not increasing. The 'Broad' Churchmen, whatever that title may mean, are absolutely, as a party in the American Church, without place or influence. The word represents a way of thinking, and not a 'party' at all." Of the "Catholic" party it also says: "The Ritualistic, advanced, or 'Catholic' party, as it calls itself, claims to be the legitimate outgrowth of High Churchmanship. This party hold that it is only lack of courage which keeps every genuine High Churchman from the confessional box, the worship of the host on the altar, the invocation of saints and the worship of 'Our Lady.' The 'Catholics' have only traveled farther on the road on which all High Churchmen are traveling."

OUTRAGE ON TRAVANCORE CHRISTIANS.—Another outrage on Christians in Travancore, Southern India, is reported. It seems that a few Christians, belonging to a village near Mavelikara, assembled in the house of a hospitable Syrian priest for the purpose of holding a prayer meeting. Among those present were a Brahmin convert, now an evangelist of the C. M. S., and his wife. This prayer meeting did not meet with favor in the eyes of the Nair population. A gang of Nairs surrounded the house, pulled down the gates, threw stones at the Christians while engaged in their devotions, and demanded the delivery to them (the Nairs) of the convert and his wife for the purpose of killing them. The Syrian priest, to his credit, declined to comply with the request of the Nairs, who vented their disappointment by hurling blocks of wood and stones at the inmates of the dwelling. Several of the Christians received severe contusions, but the convert and his wife fortunately escaped injury. The heathens at last retired, having previously brutally wounded a young man of their own band, and left him on the premises of the Christians in order to fix the crime on them.

RUSSIA.—Although news from Russia is so meager, and the government is so despotic and opposed to the labors of American missionaries in the country, says the New York Congregationalist, yet it is well known that there are large Protestant communities already formed, especially in those portions bordering on Turkey in Asia. There is great eagerness on the part of these people to learn the truth, for which they are subjected to terrible persecutions and trials at the hands of the government. Last spring the missionaries at Erzeroom, in Turkey, made an attempt to visit these brethren in Russia, but met with a serious hinderance in the outset from the refusal of the Russian consul to "vise" their passports, on the ground that he had orders not to "vise" passports of clergymen! The missionaries were obliged to content themselves with a visit to their station at Bayazid, and then attempted to reach Kars by the short route across a very small section of Russia, but they were compelled to turn back and take the long winter route. By maintaining the stations at Bayazid and Kars the missionaries have hope that they may in some way, at some time, be able to help Protestants across the line in Russia.—The Register.

THE famous concordat of 1855 surrendered to the Pope extraordinary rights and privileges; among others the following: Placing all public and private schools under the control of the bishops; giving the bishops power to appoint and remove the only persons allowed to teach theology; providing that none but priests should teach in the middle-class schools, and that the books of instruction be chosen by the bishops. There are eight universities in the empire, with more than 9,000 students. There are 125 theological seminaries, with 4,500 students. But as the Austrian bishops, by the acceptance of the Vatican Council, ceased to be national, placing their obligations to the Pope before their allegiance to the Emperor, the concordat has been formally abrogated. The Reichsrath has now decided that the theological college at Inspruck shall be broken up. The reasons assigned are that it is wholly in the hands of the Jesuits; is a nursery of Jesuitism for Austria, Germany and Switzerland; that as out of 200 students last graduated, 140 were foreigners, it is not right to impose upon Austrians the burden of supporting an institution which trains chiefly foreigners. Seven bishops have publicly protested.

THE London Missionary Chronicle gives an account of the missions of its society to the Metebele, who live on the Zambesi river, in Africa. Seventeen years ago Dr. Livingstone recommended the tribes on this river as a field for missionary effort. The London Society, whose stations far north of the Orange river were nearest to the Zambesi, responded to the call. Two missions were started in 1859—one to the Makololo, at Sinijanti, which was speedily given up, on account of the death of all the missionaries but one; and the other, further east, to the Metebele, at Inyati, which has continued to the present. The only advantage gained thus far has been somewhat of an advance in civilization, partly through the visits of travelers, but principally through the presence of the mission family, with the example of thrift and purity in its household arrangements. A few who have been servants of the missionaries have learned to read the New Testament, but in fourteen years not a single Metebele has been converted. In all this time the missionaries, though making continual visits to the villages, have been unable to gather any congregation of stated hearers, the uniform question being: "What will you give me if I come?" while the missionaries, taught by sad example elsewhere, have steadily refused to advance their cause by means of bribes. Although there are some thousands of children within three miles of the mission, it has been impossible to gather a school from among them. The very constitution of the tribe is dead set against the gospel. It invests the king with divine power; it makes war the chief means of enrichment, wives the most important element in personal property, and witchcraft the favorite means of getting rid of those who are hated. Seldom has the gospel found so hard a soil to cultivate. Nevertheless, both the missionaries among the Metebele and those at work in the neighboring tribes say: "Go on;" and the society has determined so to do by sending a larger force into the field, which, in view of its remarkable difficulty, deserves the special intercessions of all Christians. The present stations are Inyati, with two missionaries, and Hope's Fountain, fifty miles south of Inyati, with one.

"THE LIBERAL BAPTIST UNION" is the name of an organization which has recently been formed, having its headquarters in Brooklyn. Its object is "the promotion within the bounds of the Baptist denomination of Christian liberty in relation to the Lord's Supper." A circular has been issued by this Union, which states and argues the duty of toleration toward open communionists in a very forcible manner. Some of the strong points of the circular are quoted below: "We believe, first of all, that in the orderly development of the Christian life baptism is the first formal duty of every believer in our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; but we do not believe that this order of development is prescribed in the New Testament in such inflexible terms as to justify us in assuming the responsibility of prohibiting the participation in the Lord's Supper to accredited believers simply on account of their irregularity in the matter of baptism; neither do we believe that the participation in this service of members of Baptist churches with other churches is sinful." After asserting that the enforcement of restricted communion is an assault upon Christian liberty, and upon the Christian standing and privilege of other believers, the circular goes on: "We also believe that baptism sustains the same formal relation to other acts of associated Christian life that it does to the Lord's Supper. And if, therefore, it is wrong for the baptized to commune with the unbaptized, it is equally wrong to unite with them in the ministry of the word and other acts of worship; and to fellowship them in the latter, and deny them fellowship in the former, is an illogical discrimination and a gross violation of the very principle on which the plea for restricted communion is based." If any answer can be made to this statement, we should be glad to hear it. It is a point which we have urged more than once, and we never have got any response to it from the champions of close communion. The next point of the circular is that "liberty in the matter of the communion is a normal fact in the historic development of the Baptist denomination. The earliest formulas of our faith assert it, and the modern practice of restriction as a test of fellowship between the churches is itself an innovation on the ancient usage." In support of this assertion a quotation is made from the "Confession of 1689" of the English Baptists, which was adopted in this country as the "Philadelphia Confession of Faith." The quotation is as follows:

"Resolved, That in those things wherein one church differs from another church in their principles or practices, in point of communion, we cannot, shall not impose upon any particular church therein, but leave every church to their own liberty to walk together as they have received of the Lord."

Furthermore it is urged in the circular that restricted communion violates the law of Christ, because "Christ has unequivocally commanded that men should be baptized simply and solely on their declaration of faith in him; and it is, therefore, an act of defiance and rebellion against his authority, a disparagement of his saving grace, and an offense against the believing disciple to demand as an additional condition of baptism belief in a dogma not included in the terms of his own requirement." Other considerations, many of them familiar to our readers, are urged with great force. The men who are in this movement know what they are talking about and they evidently mean what they say. They firmly hold to "believers' baptism;" but they insist that it "is not and may not be made an invariable prerequisite to the observance of the Lord's Supper." For the purpose of securing that liberty within the bounds of the denomination in this country which is claimed and enjoyed by Spurgeon and Maclaren, and all the English Baptists, they have organized this Union and formed a central council of fifty.—Independent.

The Condemnation of the Devil.

That the sin of the devil, that by which he fell, was pride, a criminal ambition, a puffed-up and rebellious self-conceit, is generally conceded. The danger of employing novices in high and responsible positions, as pointed out by Paul, assumes that this was the cause of satan's downfall. "Not a novice, lest, being lifted up with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil." The admonition is for the sake of the church, as by the apostasy damage would come to the cause of Christ. The worst of all calamities is from wickedness rather than from lack of capacity. The admonition is also for the sake of the man. Injudiciously advanced and elevated, he is lifted up with pride, when, if more prudently dealt with, this rock of ruin would have been avoided. It is a poisonous infection not always confined to the young plants recently engrafted into the church and ministry, but usually the disease begins and becomes deeply if not incurably seated in the earlier years. A wicked ambition and an inflated self-esteem are a most repulsive and hideous blot and deformity in the character of those who are employed in sacred things. For a Christian "to think more highly of himself than he ought to think" places him on the extreme limit of infirmity, where a single step plunges him into an abyss which is nothing less than diabolical. Clever men may be vain, and their egotism may exhibit weakness rather than crime, but when lifted up with pride they pass from the fellowship of the Holy Spirit into the worst communion imaginable, even into the condemnation of the devil.

What led satan into this sin is beyond our knowledge, but Christian men may be spoiled by the folly of those who have their welfare at heart. A too rapid advancement in ministerial orders and in important appointments has been the undoing of many young men of fine promise. An indiscriminate and fulsome style of personal mention, the flattery of incompetent critics, and the overhasty action of those in authority, have helped to bring out and develop this evil leaven of the corrupt heart. Honored betimes with high places, petted and praised by the populace and the press, a wicked ambition springs up, and humility and meekness are withered and blighted by this breath of hell. And then if the sober judgment of the brethren detects the sad defection, or does not come up to the measure of the man's own conception of himself, what bitterness of spirit, and often malignant, is added to pride! That the church, through its authorized channels of power and election, may not ruin its own children we have the admonition: "Not a novice." But beyond the lesson of prudence and carefulness to the church and her authorities is the very solemn warning to Christians against a peculiar and damning sin. It is such a sin as the ministry is most liable to commit, because of the duties and responsibilities devolved upon it, and because its peculiar relations and influences open a door to its easy commission.

The man of shallow brilliancy and of popular gifts is liable to be overcome. Once thrown from his balance and made giddy by the lust of praise, he begins the fearful descent. Not the flippant and volatile alone, but men of rare and solid gifts and endowments are sometimes brought under the dark spell of this demoniacal possession. Rich in mind and strong in intellect, they become lost to all tenderness and refinement of soul, and make all ends secondary to the interest of self and the gratification of the desire for pre-eminence. Satan was probably the very first of created intelligences. In greatness of intellect, in magnitude of understanding, in reach and grasp of thought, he towered above the most if not all who were marshaled before the throne. Yet from this altitude of glory he fell. "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! how art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations!" The victims of pride among men are also found among the foremost, and those most capable of honoring and advancing the cause of Christ are degraded and ensnared by the foul and deceptive passion. This plague broke out among the apostles while they were attending the personal ministry of their Lord. James and John, with their mother, came in a stealthy manner, and doubtless with intent to forestall the rest, "desiring a certain thing of him." No wonder the ten were moved with indignation when they heard it. This sly and underhanded attempt to get the best places and the highest honors was too much; not that the ten were better, for nearly all coveted to be first, but these sons of Zebedee had taken an undue advantage. "Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?" was a question much in the thought of the disciples, and sometimes discussed among themselves when the Master was not at hand. When they brought this perplexing subject to him he exposed and rebuked "the thought of their heart." The kingdom must be received as a little child; 'he that would be chief must be servant of all, and "he that is least among you all, the same shall be great."

Here in the bud of the Christian church is this worm of perdition feeding, and the purest and chiefest of the apostles are infected. These men, it is true, had as yet carnal and erroneous conceptions of the kingdom, and the Spirit was not yet given. Still it is most suggestive, and the lesson should not be lost upon us, that the intimate companions of the Savior, the twelve whom he had chosen and ordained that they should be with him, were, until the Pentecostal baptism, more or less under this diabolical influence. The satanic and the Christly mind were in conflict, and the latter triumphed only after the Spirit of power and burning descended upon the church. Judas alone was sordid; perhaps none were in bondage to the lower appetites, but the desire to be greatest began to taint and degrade all. It was such a sin as angels could commit, and such as those most like the angels may fall into. The condemnation of the devil—that which fell upon the loftiest of the heavenly powers—is that which on earth is most apt to enter the holy places, and strike down those who are highest in the ministries and gifts of the militant church.

It is also an apostasy which may retain the odor and livery of sanctity, and is invested with the most potent attributes and facilities for mischief. It was the first sin known in the universe, and it has sent out into the provinces of God's empire a swarm of malignant agencies, scattering firebrands, arrows and death. The root of all moral evil, the very initial step in the horrid march of spiritual disaster, was this lifting up of pride in the heavenly places. Against this baneful passion inspired precept and history warn us, as it may overtake the man of God and despoil him of his character and strength, and as it may nestle and hide itself amidst the liveries and professions of the highest and hollest calling. Self-seeking ambition, with its attendant conceit and duplicity, is most repulsive to God, and leads the soul down to lower depths of degradation and misery than anything in the catalogue of guilt. The whole unfolding, however concealed, is wrapped up in this single germ, and all the dark and frightful amplifications of human corruption are but the full-blown flower of this plant of darkness.

The Right vs. the Wrong Way.

The trouble with men is that they reverse the order of things. The unchangeable and necessary rule is to do in order to know. The practice of men is to know in order to do. "If ye will do his will ye shall know," proclaims the great Teacher. But the world little heeds it; and house confusion, tumult and unappeasable anguish, mentally and spiritually, ensues. In the matter of faith, men seek by scientific demonstration to solve and clear away trouble. Whereas that which is thus solvable is not faith at all—in the very nature of things could not be. Faith proper brings a revelation of itself. It is a self-revealer. It is something that by searching cannot be found out. It would be strange folly in the mathematician to essay to know a demonstration without solving it—to know a result without first working it out. The folly is infinitely greater to essay to know God's will without doing it. As inextricable confusion would result in the first—no satisfaction ever attained—so in the last an inheritance of spiritual discomfort must be the only end attained.

This reversal of the order of things brings not only this positive and direct evil, but also a negative result. The pillar of clouds was light and comfort and hope to the one, and darkness and confusion and trouble to the other. The manifestations of God, in his judgments and providences, to the one must always strengthen and gladden the heart; to the other must necessarily produce the opposite effect. The one will pass through the Red sea dry-shod, while the other is overwhelmed in the flood. One comes to the contest with chariots and horsemen and drawn swords; whereas this armament only impedes progress and hastens destruction. The other, with an unadorned staff of faith, unfettered and free, makes a highway over the angry flood, and passes in safety from between the mountains—it may be true to find beyond bitter waters, hunger, thirst and armed hosts; but the simple means of deliverance are ever at hand. No ascending mountains or delving in the earth, or searching pages of antiquity and scientific lore to bring it up or down; or else in the meantime the impending danger would culminate in destruction. At once, with this difficulty the means are at hand. Men may easily perish while they seek, through actual test, the force and efficacy of prayer. They read the book backward. They commence at the wrong end to unwind the ball. In exact ratio with effort does the difficulty increase. They bind and fetter that which is the essence of freedom, and so cover from sight their own relief. They seek to discern by force of arms, by force of logic and science, that which can only be spiritually discerned. They forget that doing is antecedent to knowing—that in order to know we are to do God's will.

We are forced to the conclusion that all of turmoil in the scientific world—that this mighty clash of arms, heard from one end of the earth to the other—finds its solution in this. If men would be content to be but men, and not seek to be gods, the contest would end. We would not find nature and science and revealed religion harnessed in the stiff and cumbersome habiliments of logic. True logic itself, and true science, would then come out unfettered, and serve their proper mission. The strange vagaries of so-called wise men would not be limping about the world, disturbing the vision of the simple. But truly wise men would seek, by the light of his star, the cradle of the Royal Infant, and offer to him worship, and gifts of gold, and frankincense and myrrh. In the simple sentence, "If ye do his will ye shall know of the doctrine," there is more true wisdom, pure philosophy and real science than the world contains—ever produced or ever can bring forth. MR. EDITOR: The delightful weather continues. It is perfectly exquisite. I am gathering up strength to move out on my third round. Hope to see many souls converted and added to the church. "Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Would that I could realize it! Truly the "harvest is great." I have suffered from consecutive bad colds until I am enfeebled—now, I trust, to rally for the conflict.

This is a cosmopolitan population. Individuality is clearly defined. Every phase and semblance of religious belief and opinion is represented; also every shade and species of infidelity and skepticism is rampant. Bible Christians, and earnest, consecrated ministers have a tremendous work to do here. Most of the churches have organizations and church-houses, but all are weak. None are self-sustaining. Perhaps nearly every church built here was, in part, by means sent from the older States. Most of the ministers, if supported at all, get help from the East. The Methodist Episcopal Church South has a people and is a living organization; yet we are weak. Think of a district having not over six hundred members. We have but few churches. District school-houses afford a very cheap and convenient place of worship for all denominations. We hope to see this otherwise, and until it is otherwise we cannot prosper. Our ministry is very meagerly supported, and yet our preachers manage to live. The country is so abundant in provisions that there is no danger of starving. A few earnest itinerant preachers will find a promising field of usefulness here—those who can "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ," who can plant, organize and build up, whose work will be "confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." Such will find an "open door" of usefulness. Laymen and local preachers can come with the certainty of making a good living and being useful.

There are pious, religious people here, intelligent and true as anywhere. I find religion and religious people the same here as elsewhere.

While I would not for any consideration induce emigration to this country and have them dissatisfied, I honestly believe the condition and comfort of thousands would be improved and bettered by coming to this coast. Let not any come expecting to live and prosper without exertion or economy. Idleness and waste does not prosper in any country. Let every one be fully persuaded in his own mind.

I think this a very healthy country. The looks of the people indicate this. There are no local causes for sickness. Mountain air, pure and exhilarating, and a sea breeze from the Pacific ocean all the summer. Mrs. White's health has improved. The children are hearty and robust, and are most always hungry. Oregonians are said to be "such eaters!" and perhaps we are falling into line. If there is anything in good, wholesome, nutritious food—beef, pork, mutton, etc., with the very best of flour, fruits, etc.—making bone, sinew, muscle, and supplying nerve and brain power, certainly these people will be a superior race in a generation or two.

Lands in this great valley, near towns, seem high at from $20 to $100; yet when you consider that, in some instances at least, one crop will pay the price of the land, it is not high. There are plenty of lands in more remote valleys offered to settlers as homesteads. This valley is capable of sustaining a vast population.

The great expense of getting here will deter many from coming. Once here and settled, it is an easy country to make a living in. Emigrants can come from New Orleans to this place for $110 each. Express, first-class, $175. This is exclusive of incidentals. There is no great preference for the regular passenger express train from St. Louis to San Francisco, and by coming as an emigrant you save about $40. I think if I were coming again I would choose that.

I suppose I have written quite enough. I will, however, add that the profound peace and tranquillity we have here is quite in contrast with your condition. My heart bleeds at downtrodden, oppressed Louisiana. I scarcely ever see a negro here—occasionally one on a boat. There are quite a number at Portland. Their presence amounts to nothing. There are some Chinese, but not many. What security, what peace and quiet! There are but few Indians in this valley. They are harmless.

I shall be very much engaged for several months. I may not be able to write again soon. Persons who expect to come here, by writing to me, inclosing a prepaid, directed envelope or stamp, may expect a reply.

With my kindest regards to the brethren, I remain,

Affectionately, T. B. WHITE.

CORVALLIS, April 2, 1874.

The Sabbath.

There is one weapon which the enemy has employed to destroy Christianity and to drive it from the world, which has never been employed but with signal success. It is the attempt to corrupt the Christian Sabbath, to make it a day of festivity, to cause Christians to feel that its sacred and rigid obligation has ceased, to induce them on that day to mingle in the scenes of pleasure or the exciting plans of ambition, to make them feel that they may pursue their journeys by land and water, by the steamboat and the railway, regardless of the command of God; and this has done, and will continue to do, what no argument, no sophistry, no imperial power has been able to accomplish. The "Book of Sports" did more to destroy Christianity than all the ten persecutions of the Roman Emperors; and the views of the Second Charles and his court about the Lord's day tended more to drive religion from the British nation than all the fires that were enkindled by Mary. Paris has no Sabbath, and that fact has done more to banish Christianity than all the writings of Voltaire; and Vienna has no Sabbath, and that fact does more to annihilate religion than ever did the skepticism of Fredrick. Turn the Sabbath into a day of sports and pastimes, of military reviews, and of pantomimes and theatrical exhibitions, and not an infidel anywhere would care a farthing about the tomes of Voltaire, about the skepticism of Hume, the sneers of Gibbon or the scurrility of Paine. British American Presbyterian.

NEVER be sorry for any generous thing that you ever did, even if it was betrayed. You cannot afford to keep on the safe side by being mean.

IF THY conscience smite thee once it is admonition; if it smite thee twice it is a condemnation.

The Sabbath-Keeping Captain.

I once knew the captain of a sperm whaler in the Pacific whose name was Morgan. About ten days before sailing on his first cruise he happened to enter a chapel where a revival service was being held, and the result to him was eventful. Divine grace now wrought so wondrous a change in him that when he once more went to sea the old hands among his crew could scarcely recognize him for the same man. He who once never gave a command unaccompanied by an oath was now never heard to swear; and such was the force of his character and the power of his example that in a few months' time not a man of his crew dared to use a profane expression while within his hearing. The discipline of the ship was not a bit lessened, and every one was happier from the sobriety and good feeling of which the captain set an example.

His owner was a Sydney merchant, who had several vessels in the sperm fishery. The young captain had actually sailed for the fishing grounds, when one night, as he was reading his Bible in the cabin, he came upon the Commandments, and the question of lowering his boats on the Sabbath, should a whale appear in sight on that day, all at once started up in his mind. The words were not to be evaded: "In it thou shalt do no manner of work;" and he resolved to follow the divine command implicitly, although it was not without a great inward struggle that he did so. But as he thought of his officers and crew, who were not paid by wages, but by proportionate shares of the oil captured, he felt anxious. They might mutiny and resist him by force. He could only hope that the occasion might not arise; but if so—the issue was in the hands of God.

They reached their selected station, and many weeks passed without a sperm whale coming in sight. At last one Sunday afternoon, two hours before sunset, the longed-for cry of "There she spouts!—there again!" reached the deck from the lookout at the masthead, and instantly all was activity and bustle. Each crew sprang to lower its respective boat, and for one brief moment the young captain hesitated. It was but for one moment, however. As if spoken actually in his ear, he thought he heard clearly and distinctly the words: "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy!" and his own voice rang through the ship declaring that not a boat should leave her that day.

The scene which ensued—the amazement, succeeded by rage when they understood his motive, the violence and tumult—all may be imagined. But the captain was unmoved, and his courageous, undaunted demeanor at last quelled the riot; but not until he had promised them that he would give up to them from his own shares in future captures an equivalent for their loss of the present occasion.

"The owner will think nothing of losing his share, of course!" said his mate, who had been foremost in opposition, as he followed his captain into the cabin. "This will be the first and last vessel you'll ever command of his, at any rate! I'd like to have that agreement down in black and white, if you please, Captain Morgan, and so would the crew, and at once too."

The captain answered mildly, pointing out to the mate that any agreement executed on the Sabbath would be null in law, and promised to satisfy them on the morrow. There was sadness in his tones as he spoke, for Morgan felt the truth of what his mate had said, that no owner would ever give him a ship to command again.

The mate was a rough sailor, who had known his commander from boyhood. He felt touched with pity for one whose motive in thus acting he respected, and in his blunt way he apologized to the captain for what he had said about the shares:

"You see, Captain Morgan, I have a wife and five children to keep; and if Providence sends us a whale on Sunday, I take it as Providence means us to catch that whale—leastways that's my—"

The words were arrested on his lips, and he stood still and motionless, his eyes fixed intently on an object close before him. Morgan had thrown himself down listless after the fierce and turbulent scene he had just passed through, and had sat for some minutes brooding over the probable effect on his future prospects of that day's incident, and trying, in the strength of his newly-found hopes, to say: "Thy will be done." He had continued for some minutes thus, when a sudden exclamation roused him:

"Captain Morgan! Come here quick, sir, please! Look!"

And the mate pointed at what had arrested his attention; while an expression of alarm, mingled with astonishment and incredulity, overspread his features as he actually saw the mercury of the barometer rapidly falling lower and lower as he stood. Morgan jumped up and looked, and both bounded on to the deck to summon the crew. Well was it for that crew that none of them had left the ship in her boats, for in half an hour all were engaged in a desperate life-and-death struggle, which taxed every energy, and demanded the utmost efforts of every individual on board.

For three days they scudded before the hurricane; and when it had passed by they found they had been driven some hundreds of miles beyond the bounds they had set to their cruising-ground; but, to their intense delight, they discovered that part of the ocean to be in reality one of the best fishing-grounds possible.

Scarcely had the weather moderated when they found themselves in the midst of a whole "school" of sperm whales, and two were secured. Hardly had these been "tried out"—i. e., rendered into oil—when more were seen; and, in short, so fortunate were they that, instead of two, or even three years (the usual time taken to fill a good-sized ship) Captain Morgan's vessel returned to Sydney in ten months! Thus the captain's firmness in acting up to his convictions of duty, instead of causing him loss, actually had a contrary effect; and his owner was so pleased at his speedy return, with so rich a cargo, that he told him he might lower or not when he pleased.

Scripture Confirmed.

A very interesting lecture on "The Scriptures Confirmed and Illustrated by Modern Travel" was recently delivered by the Rev. J. W. Bardsley, of Liverpool, England. The lecturer stated that, although the open Bible was the secret of England's greatness, there were many who strove to undermine its authority, and "who denied the power thereof." After reading some extracts from the "Secularists' Manual," the speaker urged that it was the duty of all true Christians to embrace every opportunity of defending the Bible, and of showing that to it they owed their social and religious blessings. Let them look at France, whose decline during the past few years had been so rapid. To what was that decline owing? One of the first acts of the government upon its restoration to power was to appoint a committee to inquire into the cause of the Communist outbreak, and the committee reported: "It is owing to the fact that the spirit of religion has been banished from our system and education." The lecturer then proceeded to give his hearers some proofs of the authenticity of the Bible which had come under his own observation while traveling in the East, and quoted the passage from Exodus which narrates the turning by Moses of the waters of the Red sea into blood. The great feature of Egypt was the Nile, whose origin was lost in obscurity, and whose waters before discharging themselves into the Mediterranean divided into seven mouths. It had a very sweet taste; but God, by the mouth of Aaron, declared that the Egyptians should loathe to drink of it. The streams and pools referred to in Exodus were the seven mouths of the river, and it was also well known that the Egyptians who were accustomed to preserve their water in "vessels of wood and stone" would be reduced to great straits if that supply was turned into blood. This, he contended, proved that the story must have been written by some one well acquainted with the country. One of the tasks of the children of Israel while in Egypt was that of making bricks, the chief ingredient of which was stubble. Now, if they took a brick from one of the pyramids and examined it with a microscope, they would find abundant traces of straw. The life of Joseph offered another instance. They were told in the Bible that when Joseph was sent for in haste from prison he shaved himself. The Egyptians observed it as a religious rite to shave their faces continually, and although the summons was so urgent, yet Joseph shaved himself before obeying it. Passing on to Babylonian history, the lecturer pointed out that Daniel was to be appointed the "third ruler" in return for a service which he was to perform. Documents had recently came to light which proved that at the siege of Babylon Belshazzar's father, who was king, went out to meet the enemy, and, being beaten, was forced to flee. Thus it was that Belshazzar was on the throne who offered to make Daniel "the third ruler." He could not have made him the second, because he himself was only reigning pro tem., so to speak, in the place of his father who was a fugitive. Other illustrations from the Old Testament were given, after which Mr. Bardsley turned to the gospel, and referred to Christ's sermon on the "bread of life" in the synagogue at Nazareth. He explained that it was customary for each synagogue to have a distinguishing feature, usually a vine-tree sculptured on the wall. At Nazareth, however, the symbol was a pot of manna, and bearing in mind the fact that Christ usually chose the subject of his discourse from the surrounding object, his reason for selecting the "bread of life" was obvious. Having described in glowing terms the rites of a Jewish service and a celebration of the Passover which he witnessed on Mount Gerizim, the lecturer apologized for leaving Jerusalem in the back-ground. There was so much to interest them in the ancient city that to dilate upon its beauties would occupy the whole night, but he thought they might close the proceedings by singing the beautiful hymn "Jerusalem, my happy home."—Church and State.

DR. CANDLISH IN DEATH.—"Pray for me," he said to one at his bedside when his end was drawing near, "that I may have a more lively sense of Christ's presence and salvation. And yet," he added, "I would only ask for that if it be God's will, for I am satisfied. I have never believed in frames and feelings as grounds of confidence. I am not much concerned about feeling my personal interest in Christ. I know that my Redeemer liveth. That is enough for me." His words to Dr. Buchanan, about the same time, were these: "I would fain have had a more vivid and realizing sense of eternal things—of sin and salvation and of the great coming change; but I am resting on the word, which is abiding and sure; I am resting on Christ and him crucified." On yet another occasion, when speaking of his approaching decease, he said with the same naturalness: "It is hard to realize the entire break between this life and the future. When I try to think of it I always find myself still taking an interest in the ongoings of the world and of the church after my death—looking on at my own funeral, and so on—but I cannot realize an entirely new scene. There is so little revealed in Scripture, except that it is to be 'with Christ,' and I just think of him. On still another occasion he said: "This is the beginning of the end, and we must look it in the face; but I can look forward to it, not with rapture—no! not anything like that, but I know whom I have believed."

Sir Samuel Baker's Expedition.

He has done for Egypt, in the Nile valley, as much or more than Sir Garnet Wolseley is required to accomplish for Great Britain in Ashantee. He had a worse territory to push through, and the slave-traders appear to have been as dangerous enemies as the Ashantees. He had not, indeed, to cut a road, but he had to cut a channel for a steamer through a region where the Nile loses itself in a vast marsh, penetrable only by the light boats of the slave-traders, who were everywhere ready to descend on any scattered party. This marsh stopped him for a season, and even then it took him four months to drag his steamer, baggage and ammunition through the deep slush and rank vegetation, till at last he reached Gondokoro, only to find every man's hand against him. The hostility of the slave-traders he expected, for everywhere, at the cost of ruining whole provinces, they were accumulating wealth; but he did not expect to find the negroes interested in the traffic, or to hear a negro chief, after condemning the trade, offer to sell his own son in exchange for a spade. The negroes, in fact, seem to have regarded their children, women and followers as articles of commerce, and were only enraged because traders took them without any compensation. The explorer's first step was to establish order, which he did by first defeating the Bari tribe, and then summarily crushing an incipient mutiny in his own force by leading his followers suddenly against the enemy, whom they pillaged of all their corn. This restored his prestige, and he reached Fattiko, where, on a plateau four thousand feet above the sea-level, with an average temperature of seventy-five degrees, he hoped to establish the center of his authority. It was necessary to push forward, however, if he was to put down the slave-trade, and, with only four hundred men, he pressed southward, took a town of eight thousand men, defeated the King, who had just celebrated his accession by burying all his relatives alive, and, after seven days of incessant marching and fighting through long grass, where the slave-holders' followers concealed themselves in a kind of endless ambuscade, arrived at a territory governed by a friendly chief named Rionga, who "exchanged blood with him," and would have passed on still farther, but that he heard the slave-traders were attacking Fattiko.

Selecting forty picked men, and arming them with the Snider, he instantly turned in his tracks, and reached Fattiko just in time to attack a force of two hundred and seventy slave-hunters, who were, as usual, utterly crushed by the Snider, and fled, leaving a hundred and forty-one dead on the field, and $30,000 worth of ivory. From this moment the slave-traders appear to have recognized their master, for they disturbed the country no more.

Sir Samuel set up a regular government, demanded a revenue of a measure of corn per mensem for each household, which was regularly paid, and so completely established his authority that he thought he might leave; appointed an Egyptian colonel as his substitute, and so delighted the Viceroy with his narrative that he has selected another Englishman, Colonel Gordon—"Chinese" Gordon—to succeed to the Pashalic, and with additional powers and forces to consolidate the new acquisition.—The Spectator.

NEVER!—So people say to themselves, forgetting how short their never is. Never! we say; an image of all eternity makes us reel as it dazzles before us; but never is not an eternity—only a poor little life wearing away day by day, hour by hour. Seventy or eighty years and our never is over with us.—Miss Thackeray.

SOCIABLE.—A sociable will be held in the Algiers Methodist Episcopal Church South, Fifth District, on the evenings of the sixth and seventh of May. There will be sacred music in the church, and at the close refreshments will be served in the basement. Price of admission, twenty-five cents. The refreshments will be dispensed at inviting prices.

All good and zealous Methodists, as well as all other earnest Christians, who favor the extension and building up of a branch of the Protestant Church in Algiers, and would bestow some little encouragement upon the efforts of the ladies of this church, who have always been its willing and true-spirited workers, are earnestly requested to give them some assistance toward relieving the church of its present financial embarrassment. The regular Canal street steam ferry will convey any and all, who can possibly make it convenient to answer the call, across the river safely and expeditiously.

THE NEWS from Spain is very conflicting. Catholic France sympathizes with the Carlists, and the news from the seat of war reaches us via France. No doubt but that the Carlist treasury is constantly replenished from that exhaustless source supplied by Peter's Pence.

THE PEOPLE of God will notice with pleasure that the whisky crusade has also been inaugurated in England. King Alcohol must look to his laurels. Christians everywhere are beginning to see that he is one of their worst enemies.

THE SUBSCRIPTIONS for the relief of those suffering from the flood in Louisiana amount to date (April 28) to $49,708.65. Well done!

Opium-Smoking.

Much has been written by learned authors of Europe in relation to the terrible effects of opium-smoking. American writers have also composed voluminous papers upon the same subject. In all instances China is spoken of as that place where the practice most prevails. Perhaps the Americans who have written so much in relation to the matter are not aware that in New York, the empire city of their country, there is situated an opium-smoking saloon which, for dirt, squalor and sliminess, can well rank with the most frequented dens of Canton.

In Donovan's lane, a miserable little alley opening from Baxter street, a room is kept particularly and solely for the service of opium smokers. It is conducted by a withered old wreck, who, although only forty years of age, by his inveterate use of drug, has the appearance of being at least seventy. The room, if it can be called such, is about twelve feet long by six wide; a slanting board shelf is fixed lengthwise to one of the walls. This is long enough to allow a man of small stature to lie at full length, but no more than four persons could lie on it at a time. It is upon this that the opium-smokers recline when indulging their terrible longing. The place was visited a few evenings since, and was found occupied by two Chinese, one of them a very old man, and the other a youth, who stated that he had just been discharged from the United States steamer Juniata, upon which he had served as officer's steward. Both were smoking opium.

Many persons suppose that opium is used in the same way that tobacco is. This, however, is a mistake. Tobacco can be smoked standing, walking and at business. The opium-smoker always lies down when indulging his habit, and gives all his attention to the process of inhaling the fumes of the drug. Before opium can be used by the smoker it has to be prepared most carefully by persons skilled in its concoction. It is reduced from a solid to a liquid form by boiling with a small quantity of water, and when ready for the pipe looks like a thin paste, or thick, muddy molasses. The opium pipe consists of a reed about an inch in diameter. The aperture in the bowl which admits the drug is not much larger than the head of a pin. One hundredth part of an ounce is all that can be smoked by a beginner. Old debauchees, however, can use from a quarter to a third of an ounce daily. Tobacco-smokers always emit smoke from their mouths, but an old opium-smoker invariably blows the fumes through his nostrils, and very often absorbs them in his lungs. A tobacco pipe can be lighted easily by a match or a coal of fire, but the opium pipe must be lighted with great care, and always by the steady flame of an oil lamp. The small opening in the bowl is held in the flame, and the light is drawn into the reed. After the opium is ignited the process of smoking is a very short one; only one or two whiffs can be taken, and in this way, lighting and smoking, scores of persons, inhabitants of this city, spend hour after hour, never ceasing until they drop off into the death-like stupor which is the aim of all opium-smoking.

Inveterate smokers live for nothing but the gratification of their appetites. When it cannot be satisfied they suffer tortures of the most horrible character. Those persons who become addicted to the use of the poison seldom live to be more than fifty years of age; most of them die within five years after they have reached that stage in which they can consume a third of an ounce a day. The Chinese in this city admit that the effects of the drug upon the human frame are ruinous in the extreme; they argue, however, that all nations indulge in some dissipation; the Americans, they say, drink whisky until they are drunk, and they ask, if this be so, why is it wrong for a Chinaman to become senseless with opium. Those who live in New York are, with few exceptions, devoted to the practice of opium-smoking, and, what is far more terrible, a large number of young white girls residing in their neighborhood are rapidly becoming addicted to the same vice. They live with the Chinese when they can find no other home, for although the people of their own race close their doors against them, they are always welcome at the firesides of those to whom they sell their souls for the sustenance of their bodies.—New York Times.

INTERESTING ORIENTAL DISCOVERY.—It has been the good fortune of Mr. El Kery to discover a record kept by the priests of the Samaritan synagogue at ancient Sychar, that reaches back hundreds of years before Christ. It contains a record of interesting events connected with the synagogue, and was always kept by the leading priest.

It occurred to Mr. El Kery, who is a native of Samaria, educated in England, and now a missionary physician there, to search this record. He argued that so great a religious commotion as was occasioned by Jesus' visit to Sychem would arouse the anger of the priest, and he accordingly should find some bitter record in this ancient register. He ascertained that the priest in Christ's time was named Shatleer. On examining the record he did not find what he expected, but instead of it the following statement: "In the 19th century of my priesthood, and the 4,281st year of the world, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Mary, was crucified at Jerusalem."

This discovery was made last April, and is a wonderful testimony from an unexpected quarter. Canon Tristram, who entered Moab on the south last winter, tells us in his "Land of Moab" that he has identified Zoar and the Castle Machæus, in which John the Baptist perished.

A WRITER has calculated that, as the average area of the human mouth, when open, is about four square inches, the combined mouths of the twenty thousand singers of the Boston jubilee formed a cavity of over seven hundred square feet.

A Young Lady's Reasons Against Dancing.

1. Dancing would lead me into crowded rooms and into hours, which are injurious to health and usefulness.

2. Dancing would require me to use and permit freedom with the other sex, of which I should be heartily ashamed, and which I believe to be wrong.

3. Pious, devoted Christians and good people in general disapprove of dancing, and I think it is not safe to set myself against them. If a thing be even doubtful, I wish to be on the safe side.

4. Dancing has a bad name, and I mean to study things that are pure, lovely and of good report.

5. Dancing is generally accompanied by drinking; and I see drinking produces a great deal of evil.

6. I am told that dancing is a great temptation to young men; and I do not wish to have anything to do with leading them astray.

7. There are plenty of graceful exercises and cheerful amusements which have none of these objections connected with them that lie against dancing.

8. Dancing unfits the mind for serious reflection and prayer; and I do mean to do nothing that will estrange me from my God and Savior.

9. Dancing will not prepare me to meet Jesus in the judgment; and I would not dare to have him find me in the ball-room or at a dance when he comes.—Young Pilgrim.

A YANKEE MONARCH.—An American named Pease has quietly taken possession of an island in the Pacific, where he has raised the American flag. The island is one of the Bonin group, of which the San Francisco Bulletin says: "They were uninhabited until 1826, when a settlement was made by some sailors. In 1853 Commodore Perry recommended them as an available depot for the steamers which he thought would some day ply between Japan and California. Subsequently Pease visited the islands and took possession of the largest, called Peel Island. He commenced raising sheep, and has become prosperous by trading them off in Japan. Mr. Pease, who is flying the stars and stripes, is ready to make a formal surrender of his right, title and interest to the people of the United States for a suitable consideration—amount not stated. It is not known whether Japan assumes any sovereignty over the Bonin islands, but it is intimated that if the United States desire them, no objection would be raised by that government."

THE OLD MAN who was captured in Utah a few weeks since, and placed in jail in Salt Lake City under suspicion of being Bender, Sr., has been identified through photographs of him sent to Kansas, the scene of his and his horrible family's atrocious deeds of blood.

BE CONSTANT in what is good, but beware of being obstinate in anything that is evil; constancy is a virtue, but obstinacy is a sin.

TO THE SUFFERERS

WITH RHEUMATISM.

In view of the numberless sufferers afflicted with this painful malady, I feel induced to offer to the public my "ANTI-RHEUMATIC MIXTURE," which medicine proves to be the only successful remedy in this line, for it always gives instant relief, and in most cases cures permanently.

During the last fifteen years I have cured thousands of people, in this State and city, of this dreadful disease, with this medicine; and, what astonishes most, the patient recovered by the use of a single bottle of it. This medicine cures nothing but Rheumatism, and should the patient not recover by using the first bottle of it, that patient is not affected with Rheumatism at all. This being the first time of making my discovery known to the public after fifteen years of most successful results, I hope the sufferers will take advantage of this rare remedy, and by doing so add their names to the thousands already cured by it.

ROXBURY, MASS.

DEAR MADAM: The reputation of the Medical Discovery in curing all kinds of Humors is so well established, by the unanimous voice of all who have ever used it, that I need not say anything on the subject, as the most skillful physicians and the most careful druggists in the country are unanimous in its praise.

In presenting the Medical Discovery to your notice, I do it with a full knowledge of its curative power in relieving all, and curing most of those diseases to which you are unfortunately so liable. That most excruciating disease to an affectionate mother,

Nursing Sore Mouth,

is cured as if by a miracle. Your own temper is restored to its natural sweetness, and your babe from short and fretful naps to calm and sweet slumbers; and the Medical Discovery becomes a fountain of blessing to your husband and household. In the more advanced stages of it extends to the stomach, causing

Dyspepsia,

which is nothing but canker in the stomach; then to the intestines and

Kidneys,

creating a sinking, gone feeling, and an indifference even to the cares of your family. Your stomach is your food distresses you, and you can only take certain kinds, and even of that your system does not get half the nourishment it contains, as the acrimonious fluid of the canker eats it up; then your complexion loses its bloom and becomes sallow or greenish, and your best day is gone. For want of nourishment your system becomes loose and flabby, and the fibers of your body become relaxed. Then follow a train of diseases which the Medical Discovery is peculiarly adapted to

Cure:

Palpitation of the heart, pain in the side, weakness of the spine and small of the back, pain of the hip-joint when you retire, irregularity of the bowels, and also that most excruciating of diseases,

The Piles.

How many thousands of poor women are suffering from this disease and pining away a miserable life, and their next-door neighbor does not know the cause. I wish to impress on your mind that good old proverb: "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." In you have both the preventive and the cure, with this great and good quality: that it will never, under any circumstances, do you any injury.

No change of diet is ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one tablespoonful per day; children over ten years, dessertspoonful; children from five to eight years, teaspoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day. Yours truly, and 1y DONALD KENNEDY.

Hearth and Home.

Annie's Dollar.

"What is the matter with my little girl?" asked Annie's papa when he came home in the evening and found her sitting wonderfully quiet by the fireside.

"O papa! papa!" she cried, jumping up gleefully, "Lonie has the dearest, sweetest little rocking-chair you ever did see, and her papa gave it to her," and Annie's blue eyes looked so pleadingly up into papa's that he smiled.

"Let me see," said he, with such a pleasant face that Annie's heart thumped hopefully; "I think we might be able to obtain that chair."

"Darling papa," cried Annie, dancing with delight.

"Not so fast; there is a little work of self-denial for my little girl to do first."

"Oh!" sighed little Annie, sadly drooping her head at the very idea, while the chair seemed far away just then.

"It is not so dreadful, little puss," said papa smiling kindly. "Just suppose that my little girl saves up all of her cents and five-cent pieces which are given to her until she has one dollar; I will then add the rest, and we will buy the chair, eh?"

"Why, papa, who couldn't do such an easy thing?" and Annie laughed quite contemptuously.

"I am not so sure that my daughter will be able to do it. That is what I wish to test," and papa shook his head very provokingly and discouragingly.

"Oh! I'm sure, dear papa, that I will be able."

"Let us see the difficulties first, little Miss Self-denial. There is Mr. Bonbon's shop, then comes Mr. Banana, then Mr. Story-book—"

"You think me no better than Greedy George, in the little book," and the red lips pouted indignantly.

"Time will be the best judge," answered papa, shaking his head very thoughtfully, as if he understood more about the trials in the way than anybody else.

Annie was determined to let her father see that she could save up her five-cent pieces; so she began industriously to do so, gathering every little gift of money together in a little paper box. Every day the little savings were counted over and over, and every day saw some self-denial practiced in order to heap the pile. And you, my little readers, who love sugar-plums, oranges and good things generally, will understand how difficult a matter it was.

At length there lay the whole dollar. It was on Saturday afternoon that Annie first made the discovery. O the bliss, the anxiety for papa to come home! Annie capered about like a frisky kitten, and peeped out of the door some half a dozen times. At length in walked her father, and he was quite as much pleased as was Miss Annie herself, although he bore his share of the joy more quietly. Nothing could be done on Saturday night, of course, so Annie was obliged to wait until Monday morning, which—"O dear!"—seemed away off.

When Annie returned the next day from church she was not so joyous as in the morning, and her mamma, observing her demure manner, asked what was the matter.

"O mamma! Miss S., my Sunday school teacher, told us a story about a poor orphan, and whom the Sunday schools of the different churches are going to educate. She wants one dollar from us to begin with. Mamma, what must I do? I want my chair so, so much! O dear!" and Annie sighed very bitterly.

"My daughter must do as she thinks proper," replied mamma. "To deny one's self for the good of a fellow-creature is nobler by far than all the self-denial one may practice for one's own interest."

"Miss S. says that too; but it is very hard to do, mamma."

"There is no merit in what costs us nothing," said mamma.

That afternoon a modest little figure glided up to Miss S. after service and slipped a dollar timidly into her hand. "This is for the poor boy," whispered the faltering little voice of the giver, as she gave up all hopes of her chair.

Mamma had told papa all about the great struggle that was going on in Annie's heart; so after tea he called her to him, and, seating her on his knee, asked: "When does my little girl want the chair? Shall I send it home in the morning or afternoon?"

"O pa! I have no dollar; it is gone," and Annie's chest heaved with emotion, while her lip trembled and the big tears would come in spite of everything. "The poor boy has got it."

The head was down, by this time, on papa's shoulder, while it was very hard for him, big as he was, to keep from crying himself.

He kissed her tenderly and said: "I am proud of my child—proud to find that a child of mine can make such a noble sacrifice for the happiness of another. She will have the joy and peace of an approving conscience, as well as the chair too. I give you the chair as a reward."

"You don't say so, my dear pa!" and the tears were replaced by the sunniest smiles, and a brighter heart or happier, sweeter face than little generous Annie's would have been hard to find that night.

Annie never rocks in her pretty oak chair but she thinks of the dollar, the poor orphan, and how her little mite is helping to make him happy in time, and perhaps all through eternity.—Christian Banner.

A GOAT FOR A BIBLE.—A Dutch missionary, who is working among the Hottentots in Namaqualand, South Africa, has written a letter thanking the Bible Society for sending Bibles and Testaments to the people in his district. But he prefers that they should give something in return for the precious volume. He thinks that old and young value a thing more if it costs them some trouble to get it, or if they pay a little, at any rate, toward the expense of it. The poor people in England and other countries bring their pennies and their shillings to pay for the Bible, and why should not the poor Hottentots give something? But what have they to give? That is the question.

One young man said to the missionary: "If you will let me have a Bible I will do three days' work in your garden." To this the missionary agreed; and, as he considered the young man's labor worth a shilling a day, he paid three shillings to the Bible Society in the name of his voluntary workman.

Four other people brought goats, worth four shillings apiece, and two brought lambs, worth three shillings each, and for these they got Bibles.

In the Sunday school, when the missionary said that there were Bibles to be bought, one said: "I have a goat; I shall buy a Bible for myself;" another said: "Grandfather must give me a goat to buy a Bible with;" and another said: "I will run and ask my father for a goat." Thus were the goats turned into Bibles.—Missionary Advocate.

"KNOW IT."—A gentleman, to show a young friend who had studied geography several years, something about the shape and motion of the earth, took up an apple and illustrated the scientific fact. His young friend looked at the apple and at the gentleman a few minutes with great interest and said: "Why, sir, you don't mean that the earth really turns round, do you?" He replied: "But did you not learn that several years ago?" "Yes, sir," he responded, "I learned it, but I never knew it before." In Christianity sometimes it is as in this case of geography. Some essential principles are learned from the catechism, repeated over and over, sung, admitted, professed; but all the while these very things are not experienced. It is the Christian's privilege not only to learn, but to know; and not only to know, but to enjoy. The best of all is to know and to do the will of God.

Farm, Garden and Household.

TO BANISH FLEAS AND LICE.—Pennyroyal, a common weed in pastures and meadows, is very offensive to fleas, lice, flies and musquitoes. To use it advantageously, take lard and rub or grind it with a mulier on a smooth, flat stone, slate or piece of marble, with the dried or green plant leaves, stems and blossoms, until well mixed. Let it stand twenty-four hours, melt at a low heat and strain. With this anoint the ears and neck of an animal, or the perches and nests of poultry which may be infested. A small quantity may be rubbed under the wings of a hen with a brood of young chickens. A few drops of the oil of pennyroyal in sweet oil, rubbed on the face, neck and hands, will keep off musquitoes, however thick they may be. A good night's rest may be secured in the worst infested woods or swamps where these insects or black flies do most abound by the use of this mixture. Keep it out of the eyes, as its presence there is not agreeable.—Hearth and Home.

POTATO GRAFTING.—The grafting of potatoes has recently been recommended to be introduced for the eventuality and purpose of combining the good qualities of two different sorts into one. Select of the potatoes which have your preference the very best and soundest specimens; cut out in a careful way, with a pen-knife, the buds or eyes; cut them out about one inch deep and one-half to three-fourths of an inch diameter, in the form of a pyramid—i. e., that the hole in the potato runs in to a point on the end or inside; then take of the other potato a piece, if possible, with from one to three buds or eyes; fit and tie up with a (bass) string in the quickest possible manner. To fasten the inserted piece more effectually, a hair-pin may be put in from each side. Potatoes grafted in this manner should be, as soon as this operation is perfected, placed in damp ground and well covered up. If the cuts grow out—that is, if the two different pieces join—the operation is a success.

ALFALFA HAY FOR HOGS.—It is a strange-sounding proposition to feed hogs with hay, but we have experience in this line, and however strange or odd it may seem, it is, notwithstanding, a fact that hogs will not only eat alfalfa hay, but that they will do well on it. We first discovered the fact by throwing a lot of alfalfa chaff, from which the seed had been cleaned, over to some hogs for a nest, when, to our surprise, they devoured it with as much greediness as they would so much oats or barley. Our own experience and observation since has proved to us that good alfalfa hay, with plenty of water, will keep hogs in a good growing condition all through the winter. They may be foddered in the same way you would fodder sheep or cattle, but if cut up with a cutting machine, and wet before feeding, they will eat it cleaner and do better on it.—Sacramento Union.

SMOKED MEAT.—How often are we disappointed in our hopes of having sweet hams during the summer. After carefully curing, and smoking and sewing them up in bags, and whitewashing them, we find that either the fly has commenced a family in our hams or the choice parts around the bones are tainted, and the whole spoiled. Now this can be easily avoided by packing them in pulverized charcoal. No matter how hot the weather, or how thick the flies, ham will keep, when packed so, for years. The preservative quality of the charcoal will keep them till the charcoal decays. Butter put in clean pots and surrounded by pulverized charcoal will never become rancid. The recipe is simple. Try it.—New York Christian Advocate.

BANDS FOR GRAIN.—It has hitherto been the custom in France to use in the harvest-field for sheaves, bands prepared from rye straw, and sold at fifty francs per one thousand. But these rarely served beyond a single season, and suffered also from the attacks of rats and mice. The plan at present coming into favor is to use bands made of tarred cord, with a light wire hook at one end and a series of knots at the other, to bite into it. These sell at the rate of fifty to eighty francs per one thousand, hold good for four years, and, after binding the sheaves, are used to bundle the straw when threshed. A binder, it is said, executes three times more work by having the bands prepared.

THE NOBLESSE PEACH.—The Noblesse is one of those old varieties which have not yet been surpassed by any of recent origin. It is of the richest and highest flavor, and, being entirely white at the stone, is quite desirable for canning. It is a handsome fruit, of a pale greenish white, marbled and spotted with two shades of dull red in the sun. The flesh is juicy, and melts and separates freely from the stone. It ripens in August in our climate. The tree is a moderately vigorous grower with us. The variety originated in France.

PEAR BLIGHT.—The Norfolk Virginian publishes the following:

"Mayor Ludlow has achieved great success in treating diseased fruit-trees, pears among the number. His remedy is within the reach of all classes, and consists of boiled linseed oil, applied copiously to the affected parts. Some of the cures effected by him have been little less than marvelous."

LOAF CAKE.—One pound sugar, one pound butter, two pounds flour, half pint yeast, one pint milk; put half the sugar, half the butter, all the milk in the sponge at night with some flour; add the rest in the morning, with a teaspoonful of saleratus, and eggs and spices as much as you like. Let it rise in the tins before baking.

TO CHECK potato rot in potatoes, after they are stored, it is recommended to store them in a dry place, and expose them, from time to time, to the fumes of burning sulphur. It will prevent further infection, without injuring the potato.—Rural New Yorker.

GINGER SNAPS.—One cup each of lard, sugar and molasses, a tablespoonful of ginger, a teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a very little water, a pinch of salt. Mix stiff, roll thin.

AN OUTGROWTH of OTHER DISEASE.

Catarrh sometimes exists alone, but is more frequently a symptom of other diseased conditions. The following letter explains it:

COLLINGWOOD, ONONDAGA Co., N. Y., January 25, 1872.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, BUFFALO, N. Y.—Dear Sir: Allow me to give you a brief history of the effect of your medicine, called "Golden Medical Discovery," in my case. I am now in my seventy-fourth year, and naturally of firm constitution. Within the last few years, from over-exercise, I have been afflicted with a complication of diseases almost incredible to relate. In the first place Catarrh, to a degree that to me it seemed that my voice passed out at the ears, to which was added its natural ally—Bronchitis; to which, at no great length of time, were added Neuralgic pains in the head and shoulders, and bloating of the lower limbs, the most of which was superinduced by a torpid state of the liver. I had the advice of several eminent physicians, and tried almost every known remedy for such complaints without relief. A rapid loss of strength and waste of flesh reminded me that I could not long withstand the combined force of disease which was fast bearing me down. I gave up all business, made my will, had my grave-stone placed in position and lettered, except date of exit, and resigned myself to my couch to await events. Not long after this I saw your advertisement and procured your remedies. I am now on the second half dozen bottles of Golden Medical Discovery; have a good appetite; have gained fifteen pounds of flesh; no more talk out of my ears; no more bloating of the limbs; can walk two or three miles with ease, and feel that you have given me a lease of ten or fifteen years, subject, however, to the ratification of the Court above. That you may live long, to do good to suffering humanity, is the sincere wish of Your unknown friend, LUTHER COLE.

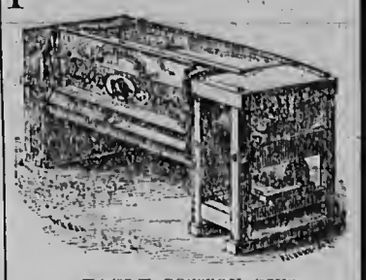
IMPROVED



EAGLE COTTON GINS.

The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. It has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinders of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only a ten-inch cylinder and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in larger-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand friction gins.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the twenty-fourth instant:

Louisiana and Mississippi	bales...	2,068
Arkansas		200
Total		2,424

On Saturday, with the return of fine weather and light receipts, the demand improved, and although factors assumed renewed confidence, and were more stringent in their pretensions, yet nearly 2,000 bales changed hands during the morning, partly at previous rates and partly at an advance of ⅛@⅛c., after which the 12:22 P. M. telegram from New York, reporting an advance of ⅛c., buyers came forward with a still better spirit, and the advantage was even more on the side of the factors, most of the sales showing an improvement of ⅛c., while the entire business summed up the liberal amount of 7,700 bales. On Monday the market opened under the favorable influence of an advance of 1-16d. at Liverpool, where the sales were put down at 15,000 bales, and factors generally adhered to their previous pretensions, or asked still higher rates, which buyers were unwilling to pay. The business summed up 4,850 bales. Among the sales we noticed unmerchantable and inferior at from 6¾ up to 10c., low ordinary at 11⅛c., ordinary at 13⅛c., ordinary to strict ordinary at 14c., strict ordinary to good ordinary at 15⅛c., good ordinary at 15⅝c., low middling at 16⅛c., high style do. at 17c., and middling at 17⅝c. On Tuesday, with nothing to stimulate the demand except the falling off in the receipts compared with last year, and an advance of about 2-16 ₰ cent. in foreign exchange, and the offerings being light and poorly assorted, the movement was inanimate throughout the day, and the sales were confined to 1,850 bales. Most factors held their stocks with unabated firmness, but there being no competition among buyers, prices were occasionally accepted, showing a falling off of a fraction from previous rates, and in several cases offers were accepted which had been previously refused.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 14,500 bales, against 10,250 for the corresponding time last week and 20,750 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 1,133,672 bales, against 1,115,235 bales to the same date last year, and the increase in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 323,652 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 74,502 to Great Britain, of 108,457 to France and of 124,156 to other foreign ports. TSVILLE, May 2.—About twenre delegates arrived last night, were in attendance upon the ng of the General Conference Methodist Episcopal Church to-day.

er prayer by Dr. Lee the comon rules made a report recomding the adoption of the same as were in force in the Confer- of 1870, which was concurred th slight changes.

The standing committees were then agreed upon, with the addition of a committee on temperance and Bible cause.

Dr. McFerrin, missionary secretary, presented a voluminous report. The total amount of contributions and donations, bequests, etc., from June 1, 1870, to April 16, 1874, amounted to $394,466. The expenses for the same period amounted to $14,399, a little less than four per cent. of the cost of the whole machinery.

A communication from Rev. J. W. Lambuth, of Shanghai, reported that the confidence of the Chinese in their false gods had been shaken, and many cities in the interior, in which, a few years ago, foreigners were not allowed to enter, were now occupied by missionaries. He asked for more help to that mission.

Most of the Protestant pulpits in this and the neighboring cities will be filled to-morrow by members of the Conference.

CINCINNATI, May 2.—Roman Catholic archbishops are arriving to-night from all parts of the United States to attend the convocation next week. The object of the convocation is not promulgated, but it is supposed to be for the purpose of considering the advisability of increasing the number of archbishops.

A thousand dollars' worth of provisions were purchased by the Louisiana relief committee to-day. Boxes to receive contributions to the relief fund will be placed in all places of amusement some night the coming week, and at the churches on Sunday, May 10.

LITTLE ROCK, May 3.—Both parties are receiving reinforcements, and have sent about an equal number home. The ex-Confederate soldiers hold generally aloof.

The agent of the Associated Press claims that some one has attempted to assassinate him.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Judge Rose, special delegate from Governor Baxter, who had been in Washington for about a week, acting in conjunction with Congressman Willshire, and Messrs. Pike and Johnson, counsel and representatives for Baxter, left Washington to-night for St. Louis; thence to Arkansas, having submitted the Baxter side of the case to the President and Attorney General Williams. The judge received a telegram from Little Rock, stating that Baxter had nothing to do with the arrest of the two judges in Argenta, and disavows all responsibility for it.

ST. LOUIS, May 4.—A special to the Democrat from Little Rock says Judges Searle and Bennett, of the Supreme Court, were arrested last night, on their arrival by the Memphis train at Argenta, opposite Little Rock, by Captain Williams, acting under the orders of Governor Baxter.

The judges refused to be arrested without the proper authority, whereupon Captain Williams made a signal, and a band of armed men entered the car with cocked revolvers, and Searle and Bennett were forcibly taken from the train, and up to the time the dispatch was received had not been heard of in Little Rock.

The Supreme Court was to convene in Little Rock to-day. Judge Stephenson, also of the Supreme Court, was on the train, but it seems his presence was not known, else he too would have been arrested. The affair has created great excitement in the Brooks camp, and serious trouble is apprehended unless Colonel Rose interferes for the relief of the judges.

LOUISVILLE, May 5.—Nothing but routine business done in the General Conference to-day.

The only notable event was the address of Dr. Lovick Pierce, the oldest minister of the church, who gave some details of his long life, and stated he had some measures of importance to present. On motion it was resolved that Dr. Pierce be allowed to speak at any time, the rules to be suspended for that purpose.

FOREIGN.

MADRID, May 1.—The government is sanguine that Bilboa will be relieved by Marshal Serrano's army this week.

Information has been received here of the defeat, in the province of Tarragona, of a body of Carlists two thousand strong by a force of national troops numbering only nine hundred men.

The Republicans have lately defeated and dispersed several bands of Carlists in Arragon and Albacete.

BERLIN, May 3.—The Emperor of Russia and Grand Dukes Alexis and Constantine have arrived in this city, on their way to England.

SHANGHAI, May 3.—A serious riot has occurred in the French settlement at this place. A mob of Chinese made an attack upon the residents in that quarter, and sacked and burned several of their buildings. The police, in order to quell the disturbance, fired on the rioters, killing several of them. Tranquillity has been restored, but an uneasy feeling prevails.

The Chinese assign as a reason for their attack that the French were constructing a road which interfered with their cemetery. There have been no disturbances in English settlements.

MADRID, May 4.—Marshal Serrano entered Bilboa on Saturday. There is great rejoicing here over the deliverance of the city. On Saturday evening there was a general illumination. The municipality have sent congratulatory dispatches to Marshal Serrano and General Concha.

Small detached parties of Carlists are surrendering to the Republicans, but the main body of insurgents have retreated in great disorder in the direction of Guipuzcoa.

An attempt was made yesterday to assassinate Senor Pi y Margall. The man, who is as yet unknown, fired twice at him without effect, and then shot and killed himself.

Additional dispatches from Bilboa state that bodies of Carlists still continue to surrender to the Republicans, in the hope of receiving amnesty. Bilboa is already beginning to resume its usual appearance, and trade is reviving. The obstructions which were placed in the river Nervion below the city, to prevent the approach of the government war vessels, have been removed. The man who attempted to assassinate Pi y Margall was an insane priest, who had been confined in the lunatic asylum, but had recently been discharged.

LISBON, May 4.—Much joy was manifested by the citizens of Lisbon over the entry into Bilboa of the Republican troops. Crowds of people, headed by bands of music, paraded the streets, shouting: "Bilboa and Liberty."

MADRID, May 5.—The main body of the Carlists is at Ripoll, under Prince Alphonse. Don Carlos is at Buranzo. Marshal Serrano is expected at Madrid on Saturday next.

The inhabitants of Bilboa were without bread during the last week of the siege.

The Republican troops have been victorious in several skirmishes in Andalasia, Valencia and Newcastle.

BERLIN, May 5.—The Czar yesterday received visits from Generals Von Moltke and Manteuffel. Prince Gortschakoff held a conference with Prince Bismarck.

The betrothal of the Russian Grand Duke Vladimir and the Duchess Marie, of Mecklenberg, was promulgated yesterday.

The Power of Imagination.

Alexander Dumas published some time ago, in a daily Paris paper, a novel in which the heroine, prosperous and happy, is assailed with consumption. All the gradual symptoms were most touchingly described, and the greatest interest was felt for the heroine.

One day the Marquis de Dalonleu called on him.

"Dumas," said he, "have you composed the end of the story now being published in the ——?"

"Of course."

"Does the heroine die at the end?"

"Of course, dies, of course, dies of consumption. After such symptoms as I have described, how could she live?"

"You will have to make her live. You must change the catastrophe."

"I cannot."

"Yes, you must; for on your heroine's life depends my daughter's!"

"Your daughter's?"

"Yes. She has all the various symptoms of consumption you have described, and watches mournfully for every number of your novel, reading her own fate in your heroine's. Now, if you make your heroine live, my daughter, whose imagination has been deeply impressed, will live too. Come, a life to save is a temptation—"

"Not to be resisted."

Dumas changed his last chapter. His heroine recovered and was happy.

About five years afterward Dumas met the marquis at a party.

"Ah, Dumas!" he exclaimed, "let me introduce you to my daughter; she owes her life to you. There she is."

"That fine, handsome woman, who looks like Joanne d'Arc?"

"Yes; she is married and has four children."

"And my novel four editions," said Dumas; "so we are quits."

SOME VARIETY OF EYES.—Birds of lofty flight, as the condors, eagles, vultures and carrion-seeking prowlers of the feathered race, have telescopic vision; and thus they are enabled to look down and discover their unsuspecting victims. As they approach noiselessly from above, the axis of vision changes, shortening, so that they see just as distinctly within one foot of the ground as when at an elevation of one mile in the air. This fact explains the balaneing of a fish-hawk on its pinions half a mile above a still pond, watching for fish. When one is selected, down the savage hunter plunges, the focal axis varying as the square of the distances, giving the hawk a distinct view of its intended prey always. As they ascend, then the axis is elongated by a curious muscular arrangement so as to see far again. Snails have their keen eyes at the extremity of flexible horns, which they can protrude or draw in at pleasure. By winding the instrument round the edge of a leaf or a small stock they can see how matters stand on the opposite side. The hammerheaded shark has its wicked-looking eyes nearly two feet apart. It can bend the thin edgings of the head on which the organs are located so as to examine the two sides of an object the size of a fully-grown codfish. Flies have immovable eyes. They stand out from the head, like half an apple, exceedingly prominent. Instead of being smooth hemispheres, they have an immense number of facets, resembling old-fashioned glass watch-seals, each one directing the light directly to the optic retina. That explains why they cannot be approached in any direction without seeing what is coming. Dr. J. C. Smith.

From the Work.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed the second round of quarterly meetings on the Fort Smith district, Arkansas Conference, and gladly report some signs of life and prosperity in the church within our bounds. Revivals have been enjoyed at several places, souls have been converted and members received. Money matters are very slow and dull in this country. A few new churches have been built and dedicated. Our people in the city of Fort Smith are building a good parsonage. Here also we have a good male and female high school, under the superintendency of Rev. S. H. Babcock, who is to be aided by a lady of high qualifications and much experience. Our district high school enterprise at Boonville, Scott county, Arkansas, is receiving special attention. We have just closed a preachers' meeting at Charleston, Franklin county, Arkansas, which was very interesting, and I hope will result in great blessings to all who attended. We have sold more good books the past winter than for years. We hope to do our full measure of duty in sustaining our beloved church in these lands. H. M. GRANADE.

FORT SMITH, ARK., April 18, 1874.

DEMOPOLIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE. Mr. Editor: This conference met in Gainesville, Alabama, April 10, and adjourned on Saturday, April 11.

Bishop Marvin was present and presided. Seven of the twelve charges in this district were represented. Bad weather and high water prevented a full attendance.

The Bishop asked the preachers many questions, their answers to which showed a moderate degree of spiritual progress, but a deplorable condition of church finance.

The following persons were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: A. K. Ramsey, Hon. James Cobbs, C. C. McCall and William O. Monroe. Reserves: E. N. Kring and Dr. B. Hawkings.

The love-feast, on Sunday afternoon, was an occasion of deep feeling. At night the sacrament was administered to a large number of persons. It was impressive in the highest degree.

Bishop Marvin labored faithfully in the conference, and we hope did much good. He preached at every regular service from Friday until Tuesday, save one. It seemed to be no tax upon his mind or body. We would like to speak of him as a preacher and a bishop, but fear, lest we should offend his meekness as a Christian or his modesty as a gentleman. We love him for his simplicity and his godliness. He preaches to the heart and the understanding, not to the imagination. He seeks to do good, and not to be called great. His mission is to preach Christ and him crucified, and this he does. Long may he live to do good. A.

THE Lake Charles Echo contains the following:

Recently our town and vicinity have been visited by the Rev. Dr. J. B. A. Ahrens, pastor of the Dryades Street German church of New Orleans. The doctor came here by invitation from the Rev. William Lieser and the congregation under his charge, to dedicate the new and elegant church just finished by our German friends, and located near the suburbs of our town.

On last Sabbath a large congregation assembled to hear Dr. Ahrens at the new church, our German population being numerously represented.

The distinguished divine delivered an able and effective discourse on a subject appropriate to the occasion. At the conclusion it was announced that there was a deficiency in the funds to pay the debt incurred by the church, amounting to $300, and that, according to the polity of the church, this balance must be provided for before the dedication could be solemnized. The necessary amount was promptly subscribed on the spot by various members of the congregation, in amounts varying from $50 to $1. Thereupon the interesting and solemn ceremony of dedication took place, the pastor and officers and members of the church uniting in a declaration that henceforth the new church was dedicated and set apart to the public worship of God, according to the rites of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The ceremonial was deeply impressive, and the occasion altogether pleasant to visitors and profitable to the new church, in a material as well as moral point of view.

On Wednesday evening Dr. Ahrens occupied the pulpit of the Methodist church under the charge of the Rev. E. B. Foust, when, after a strong appeal from the speaker, a very handsome sum was subscribed for the purpose of completing that church. Dr. Ahrens' visit to our community has resulted in the promotion of good morals, and we trust that it proved sufficiently pleasant to him to induce him to repeat it soon. He is a gentleman of ability and cultivation, and while here he evinced the true evangelical zeal that should characterize ministers of the gospel.

MOBILE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.—Mr. Editor: The District Conference of Mobile district met at nine A. M., April 17, at St. Paul's, Mobile. Bishop Marvin presided over all the sessions. Bishop Keener came in on Saturday. The preachers were all present except Bro. Shaver, whose health is still very frail, and Bro. Stanley, who was kept at home by domestic affliction. Delegates were not present from some of the works, owing doubtless to the scarcity of money and the season of the year.

The reports were made in answer to questions put by the Bishop, and were full and detailed. They showed that the Sunday schools use the Nashville papers, the teachers labor to bring the scholars to Christ and attach them to our church. Few schools suspend in winter, and there is a growing interest through the district in this department of work. They show, too, that class and prayer meetings are numerous and well attended; the Bible extensively read, and church literature circulated; that finances are up to the demand in several charges—not quite up in two or three, and far behind in one (the St. Stephen's.) The conference by resolution expressed its regrets at this, and affectionately asked the stewards on that circuit to stir a little more actively in the matter.

The reports also showed that discipline is good on the whole, business and personal integrity of the membership generally being unexceptionable; that the children are generally baptized, and that there have been some good revivals and a number of accessions during the year.

After the churches in the city had been reported, Dr. Hamilton, presiding elder, stated that he had known Methodism here more or less intimately for thirty years, and he had never known it in a better, if indeed so good a condition as it is in now. The other stations and the circuits also were in an encouraging state; but the missions looked rather unpromising.

A committee was appointed to consider the propriety of establishing a district school in Mobile. (I hope that this project will come to something.)

A resolution was passed indorsing the Seashore camp meeting, and urging the preachers to attend and the members to camp during the meetings. (I hope this also will do good.) The rain, which was very heavy and almost incessant, interfered very much, and nearly ruined our missionary meeting. Bishop Marvin preached every night, going through rain. Bishop Keener preached on Sunday. Of course their sermons were excellent—full of thought given and thought suggested.

Saloon Signs.

There is another application, pertinent to the times, of the truth presented last week in the editorial on "Calling Things by Their Right Names." Why, but from an evil conscience, does the liquor business hide under euphemisms and pseudonyms? Take the lowest resort of drunkards in our cities, and who ever saw over the door any such truth-telling signs as "Groggery" or "Rum-Hole?" In every town, larger or smaller, one sees in flaunting letters, over every tenth or twentieth door on the business streets, the word "Saloon." If the stranger from Europe, not familiar with our language, should turn to "Webster's Unabridged" for the meaning, the only definition he would find would be: "A spacious and elegant apartment for the reception of company, or for works of art." He would imagine as perhaps to be a right royal and artistic set of people, until unfortunately he should open the door of one of these "saloons," and through the tobacco smoke should catch a glimpse of the bar and its customers. The fact is that the progress of temperance has made the liquor-venders and the liquor-drinkers ashamed of the appropriate names of their resorts. No one hears, in this country, of an ale-house, a porter-house, a grog-shop, a dram-shop, but only of restaurants, offices, saloons, sample-rooms, etc. It would be half the battle if we could compel the liquor-sellers to put up truthful signs; if, where there are license laws, a man was required by law to have in large letters, on the front of the house, "Licensed Liquor Store;" or the words: "Licensed to Sell Intoxicating Liquors!" Why not? It would be simply the statement of the truth; as when, in some States, we see signs: "Licensed to Sell Gunpowder." And it were no more than the truth, could the liquor-dealer be made to see, whenever he looked up to his sign, some such announcement as "Tippling Hall," "Drunkard's Resort," or "Gateway of Hell." But men hate to look truth in the face about their evil practices. In the old times, before the war, a Southern planter never used the word "slave," if he could avoid it. He spoke of his "boys," or, his "hands," or his "negroes" or "niggers," or "servants." The word "slave" made his conscience uneasy, and grated upon everybody's ears. And so it is with the liquor-dealers. Nobody likes to be a "rum-seller;" he prefers to be a "saloon-keeper;" and so we almost lose out of decent language and respectable associations the word which long was confined to palaces, and when we talk of a saloon, instead of imagining a state apartment of regal splendor, filled with men and women of the highest rank, we think of a tawdry or a dingy bar-room, where drunkards and tipplers congregate.—Advance.

MINGLE the fear of God with business. It will not abate a man's industry, but sweeten it. If he prosper, he is thankful to God that gives him power to get wealth; if he miscarry, he is patient under the will and dispensation of the God he fears. It turns the very employment of his calling to a kind of religious duty and exercise of his religion, without damage or detriment to it.

Rev. C. Chamberlin.

A special meeting of the official members of the Hazlehurst station, Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South, was called by the Rev. W. E. M. Linfield, presiding elder, April 4, 1874.

The presiding elder announced that our preacher, Rev. Corydon Chamberlin, had been transferred to the California Conference, and stationed in Sacramento City, and of course his labors would cease with and for us.

Upon consultation it was resolved that we acquiesce in this change, though we regret to lose a preacher with whom we are altogether pleased.

We tender to our Bro. Chamberlin assurances of our appreciation of his services as preacher and pastor, which have been to us both a pleasure and profit for more than a year. He leaves without complaint, as far as we know, have heard or believe.

We recommend him to the members and congregations of churches whom he may be appointed to serve in other places, and bespeak for him a cordial and warm-hearted reception, believing that he will prove himself worthy of the highest estimation which may be extended to him.

We also express our kindest regards for our Sister Chamberlin, and pray that husband and wife may be sustained in the trials now before them, and that they and their children may be preserved in the perils of travel to their distant home. May a favoring Providence attend them hereafter, and especially may our former preacher accomplish much good in the Christian ministry where he may go.

JOHN DUNNING, Prest.
C. A. REDDING, Sec.

At a special meeting of the Hazlehurst Sabbath school, Methodist Episcopal Church South, convened April 12, 1874, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, In the providence of God it becomes necessary for us to part with our pastor, who has been called to labor in a distant field; therefore,

Resolved, That we take this method of expressing our sincere appreciation of his labor of love among us. He has ever maintained a deep and abiding interest in the welfare of the school, and a tender love for the lambs of the fold, doing the work of a teacher as well as a pastor.

Resolved, That even while our hearts swell with sorrow at the thought of the loss about to befall us, we bow with submission to the will of our heavenly Father, invoking his benedictions upon our beloved pastor and his family through life, and his presence and grace in death.

Resolved, That the secretary be requested to furnish our pastor, the Rev. Mr. Chamberlin, with a copy of these resolutions, and forward a copy to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

R. H. CATCHING, Supt.
C. A. REDDING, Sec.

The Wesleyan Society of Hazlehurst have learned with much regret of the anticipated removal of our much-loved pastor and his wife, both honorary members of the society, to the far West, and desire to convey to them some faint idea of their sorrow at the prospect of their loss; therefore,

Resolved, That we, as a society, regard this loss as a personal sorrow, feeling, as we do, that they have filled a large place in our hearts.

Resolved, That the only thing which reconciles us to the transfer of our pastor to the Pacific Conference is the hope that his own and his wife's health may be fully restored by the change, and their lives spared many years to the church and their family.

Resolved, That we heartily commend them to the love and sympathy of those whom they go to serve.

MRS. E. C. NICHOLS, Sec.

THE NIGHT COMETH.—Is it possible to do too much for Jesus? Is there any danger that Christians will overtask themselves in the service of their Master? Ought we to impose any restraint upon ourselves when the Lord calls, lest in our zeal to follow him we overstep the limits of the strength which he has given us? Some of our modern writers even seem to think that the church needs to be cautioned lest its more active members abound too much in Christian work.

We do not believe that one Christian worker in a hundred breaks down from excess of work for Christ. Christ would have us feel that self-sacrifice is the law of Christian living, and that to work while the day lasts, doing all with one's might, should be the burden of every Christ-like soul. For the night cometh when no man can work.—Christian Treasury.

THERE are, no doubt, scientific men who, entering the very presence-chamber of the Most High, turn their back upon the throne; but there are others who, in pursuing their studies, feel themselves treading

"Upon the great world's altar stairs
That slope through darkness up to God;"

while others, again, believe that for a full conception of the universe it is necessary to gain ever a clearer insight into the action of physical laws, and at the same time to trace in them the thought, and to feel the presence, not of a great Unknowable, but of an ever-bountiful Father.

THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1874.

REMEMBER NOT THE SINS OF MY YOUTH.

Could I recall the years that now are flown
For evermore,
Revive my early visions long o'erthrown,
And hope restore,
How blest it were to mold my life anew,
And all my broken vows of youth renew!

Oh, were I once again but free to choose,
As in past days,
How oft the sun-lit path I would refuse
For sterner ways!
Content to turn aside from every rood
Save that which kept me in the smile of God.

But vain the dream; the strife is o'er with me;
Dark days remain;
I could not trust my heart if I were free
To choose again;
The dazzling morning might again deceive,
Life be mis-spent, and age be left to grieve.

I would not if I could, recall the years
That now are fled;
Their cares and pleasures, labors, hopes and fears
For me are dead;
I ask but mercy for the wearry past,
And grace to guide me gently home at last.

Good Words.

Family Service.

The church in thy house.—Philemon 2.

A halo of holy luster lingers around our often-frequented family altar, and forms brilliant spots, gleaming like beacons, on the dark wastes of the oblivious past. Here fond memory loves to dwell, and often in our musing hours the imagination basks with peculiar delight in the luster of these holy moments.

There are many lovely scenes connected with the family circle—displays of parental care, filial affection and reverence, and fraternal love, exhibiting for our admiration the various types of the morally beautiful; but around the family altar, where the godly father officiates as priest, offering up praise and adoration for blessings received, dedicating himself and his dependent little flock to the service of their God, and imploring a continuance of divine beneficence upon them; here, around the family altar, where infantile voices fearlessly join the song of praise, and stammering little tongues lisp responses to the simple service; here, where the maternal priestess breathes an earnest prayer for her cooing little dove, clasped fondly to her bosom, and feels a blessed assurance of divine circumspection—here are scenes that are far more than merely beautiful, but soar aloft into the morally sublime. We imagine that angels poise on noiseless wings to behold with seraphic admiration this little band of adorers, and listen with rapt delight to the simple song of praise that floats out on the cool air of the evening or the refreshing breath of the morn. From here the clouds of grateful incense rise, laden with earnest petitions, and float away toward the sky, piercing the vaulted heavens and surrounding the burnished throne of divine majesty on high. The anthem notes from some grand organed cathedral, which burst forth in such grandeur, and roll on with such majestic volume and power toward that throne, fall not with more power on the divine ear than does this simple song, though often feebly sung by stammering voices and lisping tongues. What union of thought! what union of feeling! what union of desire! and what union of faithful prayer! Beautiful the lesson read, earnest the prayer offered, and grand the simple song!

How can you neglect so great a privilege as this? Are you so ungrateful to your heavenly Father that you will not give him daily praise for daily beneficence? Will you not even ask for those daily blessings which he is so ready to give to those who ask, O "man most ingrate?"

At eve, when Sol, the servant of all, has finished his day's toil for you, and withdraws his fructifying beams, curtaining himself in the glowing folds of mist; when Hesperus, with modest union, the first of all the glittering gems that spangle the dusky robe of Night, peeps forth upon the twilight world; when the vesper hymns of nature are being murmuringly breathed by the soft southland breeze, amid the emerald-robed boughs that overhang yon rural cottage, and warbled by the pretty feathered songsters ere they fold their heads beneath their wings, and consign themselves in wistless slumber to the care of him who watches that not a sparrow falls to earth without his will; when the cares of the day are over, the darling pledges of your plighted love, with sunny ringlets, and sweet, angelic faces, bathed in loving smiles, or lighted with joyous glee, clamber with childish hilarity around you, ready to kiss you good-night, so expressive of the purest love from the purest hearts; when the loved partner of your bosom, smiling in queenly loveliness to greet your return from the toil of the day, comes in the noble grandeur of woman to share your disappointments and sorrows, as well as your joys; when thus all smile in praise to the blessing-giving God, how, oh! how can you, endowed with capacity to love, enjoy and praise, and bathed in these heaven-distilled dews of divine beneficence, withhold that adoration so justly due the majestic Donor? Can you refuse to blend your praise with that of adoring nature? Can you be so ungrateful, while all around you are continually reproaching your ingratitude? And then at "early morn," when has fled, and the broad glare of Sol's reburnished face illumes the orient, and paints a thousand miniature rainbows on the prismatic dew-drops that adorn exultant nature; when the mock-bird and his grateful associates warble their matins of praise; when all nature, now refreshed, swells, as it were, in exultation, then, oh! man, when you remember that perhaps amid the gloomy shades of night Death's ruthless hand passed near, and God's omnific power, restraining, shielded you and your loved little ones from that icy embrace; when you remember that

"Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep,"

"Fierce diseases wait around To hurry mortals home," and still another happy morn you and all of yours are spared; then, oh! then, can you refrain to join that choir of adorers, and send up your grateful song with theirs? When you behold your eastern "king of day" careering gaudily onward, with tremendous velocity, through the trackless fields of ethereal space, and remember that omnific power divine guides the mighty charioteer along the unblazed pathway of day, how can you, poor, powerless being, dare one hour to tread that pathway without imploring the same guiding hand and protecting power? Then, oh! soul-endowed man, praise your God. At eve and morn praise his glorious name and implore his beneficence. Pollok beautifully though erroneously speaks of this in Heaven:

"Daily, at morn and night, the multitudes
Of men redeemed, and angels, all the hosts
Of glory, join the universal song."

The poet just missed it in having that night there, for "there is no night there," but one eternal day exists. Another poet sweetly sings:

"No night shall be in heaven—no gathering gloom Shall o'er that lovely landscape ever come."

No, thank God! there is "no night there;" but, glory be to his matchless name, there is family worship there. Yes, there the mighty hosts of angels and of earth's redeemed, joined in one mighty family, eternally adore,

"And swell the rapture of the glorious song."

Family service is the fittest type of heavenly adoration we have. No well-timed choir's loud Te Deum, or organ's sublime tones, nor deep-voiced liturgies, with ready, full response, can present a sublimer type of heavenly adoration than the simple and oft-despised family service.

Then, oh! man, at morn or evening, "sing praises unto God, sing praises," And then in that celestial family, so grand, let us shout:

"Harp, lift thy voice on high! Shout, angels shout!
And loudest, ye redeemed, Glory to God!
Glory to God and to the Lamb! Amen.
Forever and forever more! Amen."

H. WALTER FEATHERSTON.

What Is Conversion?

It is not merely an outward reformation. It does not consist in the forsaking of sinful habits. The drunkard may leave his poison, the slave of fashion may leave the path of glittering folly, the profane may cease to use God's name irreverently, and they may be farther from God than before.

It does not consist in the discharge of moral duties. You may rigidly observe all these; the charitable may gorge the hungry, the rich man may come staggering beneath a mass of gold, each commandment that relates to the outward life may be observed in the letter; but it is of no avail.

It does not consist in having a profound knowledge of sacred things. Fallen angels have a far more extensive acquaintance with systematic theology than we can possibly have. You may have studied ecclesiastical history, you may be extremely orthodox, and, if asked, be prepared to adorn a professor's chair, and yet, like the Pharisees in olden time, be further from the kingdom of heaven than publicans and harlots.

It is impossible for an outward application to effect the change. In the midst of a large orchard there spreads a giant tree. You wonder how it came there, for it not only fails to bear fruit itself, but it drains its strength from the soil, and throws a dark shadow over everything around it. You order it to be destroyed. The sturdy woodman comes, and with his keen ax is about to deal stroke after stroke, until he cuts through its heart, and brings it crashing to the ground. But you smile at his folly, and say: "That is not the way to do it. You must cut off some of the longest boughs, then take the pruning-knife, and very carefully reduce the tree into symmetry. Having done this, you must weave beautiful garlands, and hang them tastefully around the tree. It will then look as lovely as if it had just been transplanted from the tropics. But it is only the beauty of decay—the beauty that introduces death. Your tiring and unreasonable mode of destroying the tree may be successful, but this is the more elegant way to destroy it." Will the use of these means destroy the tree? Certainly not. And you cannot realize a saving change by attention to outward means.

Conversion is a work wrought by the Holy Spirit in the heart of man. There is a mystery about this change—something which human reason cannot grasp of itself. Nicodemus felt there was: "How can these things be?" Perhaps during the delivery of Christ's midnight sermon the wind was sweeping past them, and he said: "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit." We know that God does work, but he doeth whatsoever he pleaseth, and in a manner which it is impossible for our limited minds to understand. Unlike the earthquake which shook the cave in which Elijah stood, unlike the fire that wrapt the whole plain in its blazing folds—the Spirit's voice in the unchanged heart of man is often like the still small voice which followed the thunder and the fire, when nature hushed, and the prophet held his breath to hear it. With what tenderness that voice speaks in a human heart out in the far country! What dost thou here, O wandering son of God? Why hast thou left thy father and thy home? Wouldst thou rather strive in rags, amid scenes of desolating famine, than wear robes, and be fanned by zephyrs amid the quiet beauty of Eden? Dost thou prefer the dry husks, and the company of brutish men, to the smoking feast and the fireside at home? Art thou happy amid all this rioting? The wanderer knows he is not happy, and the Spirit's voice, like a two-edged sword, pierces to the center of his heart. When the wanderer is prepared the Spirit leads him home. The Father imparts a smile and a kiss—the sinner is justified. The Father terms him son—the sinner is adopted into the divine family. The Father covers him with a beautiful robe; a ring flashes on his bony finger; sandals protect his worn and bleeding feet; the future, once crushing and black, is now radiant and hopeful again—the sinner is born of God. And with the witness of sonship in his breast, and the indirect evidence of it in the ripening fruits of the Spirit, he can look beyond the sky, and from a full heart exclaim: "Our Father." That is conversion. N. R. H.

The Inundation.

MR. EDITOR: The daily papers give, no doubt, full details in regard to the number and extent of the crevasses, and approximate the number of sufferers, but one who goes among the people sees far more of the destruction and misery. On my work there is one appointment as yet dry; the others are in the water. The houses look much like islands in the ocean. Some few families have moved, but many are unable so to do for the want of means. Are they not worthy of some help—enough, at least, to remove wife and little ones to a place beyond the flood? Every piece of floating timber is the resting-place of reptiles, and houses are no exception. Imagine yourself and family brought into close companionship with slimy snakes, whose fangs are filled with deadly poison, and, by the emotions which fill your mind, measure the feelings of these captives.

The means so generously furnished by those who dwell far away from the scene of disaster should be confided to men of high character, that no abuse in their distribution take place. Such has been the case already, and a repetition is not desirable.

Poultry has disappeared, many cattle have been swept away already, and more, for lack of food, will perish. Fields that smiled with the wealth of cane and corn adorning their bosom, now assume the appearance of inland seas, with here and there a spire of the harvest waving its farewell. The timid deer seeks the near companionship of his enemy—man—in his fear of the vast flood which drives him from his forest home. This is the picture of the day. But near by is seen the gaunt form of Want stealing surely upon many a human being; and close after him may be seen the ugly minen of Disease in every form, gloating over the harvest in view.

With the land impoverished to the lowest point, and the loss of stock and implements added, what is there in the future of many, very many, of these sufferers to relieve the dark picture? Without means, credit gone, tools and cattle lost, is there not a crushing burden on the heart of many a father, and darkness over many an anxious mother? "The Lord sitteth upon the floods," and to him alone can we look for help in this great hour of need. Individually I am powerless to do, for there is not even a nickel in the treasury. Mentally I am anxious to do; what contracted limits! May those who have means feel the full weight of the divine utterance: "It is more blessed to give than to receive;" and may their liberality pour consolation into many a troubled spirit.

The vast area between this place and Centerville, on the Teche, will in a few days be conquered by the waters. Ten parishes are afflicted by the Morganza and Hickey breaks. The destruction caused will never be correctly estimated. The future destiny of many of the sufferers will be entirely changed, so far as local habitation is concerned. May it also lead to that better change, which recreates a man after the model of Christ. M.

Baptism Prior to Conversion.

MR. EDITOR: Much is being said and thought of on the subject of eligibility to church membership; especially so since we are favored with the profound utterances, through your own columns and the Nashville Advocate, of Dr. L. Pierce. The doctor's views are ably maintained. But may I ask attention to the following reflections? 1. No one can be regenerated without the baptism or power of the Holy Ghost. 2. No one can become a Christian without regeneration. These are immutable facts.

Now, then, can any one be baptized with water, and thus be taken into the visible church, without first receiving the inner or spiritual baptism as a sine qua non? No, if Dr. Pierce is correct. Let us now turn to the eighth chapter of Acts, and follow Philip on his way from Jerusalem to Samaria, preaching Jesus and the resurrection. The Samaritans believe Philip baptizes them. Query: Are they now in the church? Yes; or baptism is not the initiatory rite. The apostles at Jerusalem hear of Philip's great revival, and send two of their number down to Samaria. They lay hands on these same baptized persons, and they receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost, without which conversion is impossible. So they joined the church prior to conversion. So did John Wesley, and so have thousands more.

Yours truly,

GEORGE W. GRAVES.

SPRINGFIELD, TEXAS, April 20, 1874.

MOTHERS' PRAYERS.—A lady prayed for her daughter thirty-nine years without receiving any answer. At length she came to die. Her death was the means used for her daughter's conversion. The daughter became a most eminent Christian, much used in the turning of sinners to Christ. One hundred American students who were converted met together to speak of their conversion. Ninety of them traced their blessings to their mothers' prayers. At another meeting in England nearly one hundred who had been blessed of God said they had praying parents to pray for their children; the majority of the petitions began: "A mother asks prayer," etc.; only one or two: "A father asks prayer," etc. Many a one has learned of late the blessing of having a praying mother. We trace every blessing to God's fathomless grace. Still he is pleased to use means, and he says: "For all these things I will be inquired of." Christian mothers, pray on. God answers prayer.

"I'M the page that's always red," said the boy in buttons with carroty hair.

Holly and Mistletoe.

The holly was dedicated to Saturn, and its boughs were used on his festival, whence, it has been asserted, the early Christians derived the practice of ornamenting their dwellings with it during their own season of rejoicing; and hardly a church in England is to be found not thus decked. But within sacred walls the mistletoe is forbidden. Its associations with paganism and magic, with superstition and revelry, have banished its waxen berries to scenes of social and domestic merriment. "The new year is at hand, gather the mistletoe," was the cry that once rung through the land; and when the mystic branch had been cut, and the two white bulls that had never been yoked had been sacrificed, the branch was distributed. This process was rendered easy by the readiness with which the plant separates when gathering into joints like little bones. The mistletoe is found growing upon thirty-eight different kinds of trees in England, but very rarely occurs on those "needle-leaved," or upon the oak. An old manuscript in the British Museum, referring to the Hagg, in Berbyshire, records how: "Heare my Lord Fresheville did live, and heare grows the famous misselto-tree, tho only oake in England that bears misselto." This however, is not correct, as a few other instances have been observed. Gerard wrote in Queen Elizabeth's time: "Why that should have the most virtue that grows upon the oak I know not, unless because it is rarest and hardest to come by."

Two years later, in 1860, Parkinson observed, respecting the medicinal use of the plant: "The misselto of the oke is the best, made into pouther. It is fit to use forty days together, and with this caution, that the wood after it is broken from the tree does not touch the ground; which is to my minde too superstitious, as in the conceit also that it has power against witchcraft and the illusion of Sathan, and for that purpose use to hang a piece thereof at their children's necks." To this use Cole refers in his "Art of Simpling," 1656: "The rarest groweth upon the oakes, and is counted very medicinal; * * * which, if one hang about their neck, the witches can have no power of him." In Germany it bears the name of Mist-heyl, most heal, or healing, whence, apparently, our term is derived. The plant was considered a sovereign remedy for epilepsy, and an antidote to all kinds of poisons, and Sir John Coldbatch wrote in 1719 that the mistletoe must have been created "for further and more noble purposes than to feed thrushes, or hung up superstitiously in houses to drive away spirits." A Welsh writer in the last century inferred that it was the forbidden tree of Eden. Mistletoe grows abundantly in France and Switzerland, and is found in India and the Levant, and upon the old olive-trees in the Valley of Jehoshaphat. In Australia its habit of exhausting the life of trees on which it grows has caused it to be considered a vegetable vampire. The mistletoe was dedicated to Friga, the Northern Venus, and the mystic ceremonies still performed under its boughs at this season are traces of her worship.

Darwinism Not New.

A writer in the Jewish Messenger shows that the hypotheses of Darwin, with respect to evolution and development, were asserted by a Jewish rabbi, Joseph Albo, who lived at the beginning of the fifteenth century in his book "Ikkarim." The writer quotes a curious passage, as follows:

"In considering the forms of material beings, we find that they progress step by step to completion—that is, the later forms are more excellent than the earlier, as if matter develops in assuming the forms from the incomplete to the complete. For at first they assume the lowest form, then a higher, and in such a manner they rise up step by step from the incomplete to the complete. At first they assume the primitive form and rise up to stones, and the primitive forms are their inferior form; then they rise to the degree of living beings, and the plants are their inferior form; and then they rise to the degree of mankind, and there the living beings form the inferior forms. With these the creation ceased. And, as with motion, every former part of activity is a requisite for the following, so it seems to be the case with the material world, that the former is a requisite of the later. And, as with motion, the arrival at the point aimed at forms the cause of the partial movements, the beings rise from step to step until they reach the highest degree in man, and there they stop, as the end of the material beings. That matter moves from lower to higher is proved by the composition of bodies. The coral is a connecting link between inorganic beings and plants, and the sea-sponges, possessing merely the sense of feeling, are the connecting link between the plants and animals; and the ape is the connecting link between the different kinds of living beings and mankind."

ORIGIN OF THE WORD ACADEMY. "Academy" was originally the name of a public pleasure-ground, situated in the Ceramicus, or tile-field—a suburb of Athens, on the Cephissus. In the fifth century B. C. this land belonged to Cimon, the son of Miltiades, who beautified the grounds, gave free admission to the public, and at his death bequeathed them to his fellow-citizens. They became a favorite resort, and Socrates was wont to hold forth in this delightful place. Plato also taught his philosophy in its groves, and his school was hence named the Academic. As the Platonists were also called academists, so whenever an academist started a school he called it an academy. And in this manner the term came into general use as a place of higher instruction.

AS THE sun is reflected in a spring when it is clear and limpid, so God is reflected in the soul of man when it is pure and spiritual.

Obituaries.

MRS. MATTIE SUMWALT COOPER, wife of Edward F. Cooper, and daughter of Rev. Jefferson Hamilton, D. D., is no more. She was born in Mobile, Alabama, January 13, 1845, and quietly fell asleep in Jesus February 22, 1874. She was a loving, dutiful child, cheerfully submitting at all times to the authority and wishes of her parents. Their will was the law of her childhood. She was consecrated to God in her infancy, and reared in his "nurture and admonition." From her earliest consciousness the great truths of the gospel were impressed upon her mind, and shed their softening and elevating influence upon her heart. At the age of twelve years she was happily converted to God in Nashville, Tennessee. From this time forward her life became more real and earnest. While her heart-culture was never neglected, her mind received due attention and timely development. She graduated at the Centenary Female Institute, in Summerfield, Alabama. On reaching her maturity she became a noble young woman. Her person and dress were neat and attractive, her deportment in society was modest and womanly, and her life was molded by Christian truth and influence. She possessed a lovely feminine nature that drew toward her many friends, and these belonged generally to the higher walks of social and Christian life. Piety and purity were nursed by her presence, while all that was vile and low fled at her approach. She loved and honored her parents, and made their interests her own. For their views she had a most sacred respect, and over their declining years she spread the charm of her young, bright and hopeful existence. On the fifteenth of September, 1868, she was married to Edward F. Cooper, of Selma, Alabama. The man of her heart was in every way worthy of her, and their union promised to be one of more than usual happiness. Her husband, like herself, being warmly attached to the church, and zealous for its welfare, they drew to them the friends of the church. But it was as a wife that the dignity and exalted worth of our departed friend and sister shone forth in all their perfection. Her home was a scene of beauty and order—a religious center from which a holy light constantly radiated. There the prophet of God received a hearty welcome, partook of a generous hospitality, and had tendered to him the respect and reverence due to his holy vocation. She took a deep interest in all that appertained to the church, was a constant attendant upon all its means of grace, was a devoted friend to its music, its Sabbath school, its meetings for prayer. Often, when hardly able to walk, she was found in her place. The rewards of Christian, social and domestic fidelity were given to her; for she was happy, and shed forth the same feeling throughout her household and the circle of friendship in which she moved. Many prayers were offered to God that the happy couple might be spared to each other, their friends and the church; but disease laid its wasting fingers upon the fair form of the devoted wife. For months her health was not good, but she complained so little that nothing serious was apprehended. An increased spirit of devotion, a growing spirituality, was noticed by her family, but little did they dream her end was so near. It was hoped that medical skill, under the blessing of God, would restore the glow of health to the pale face and strength to the enfeebled body. But all hopes of recovery were soon to be disappointed, and the flame of mortal existence to be quenched in the cold waters of death. In hope of finding relief she visited her parents in Mobile, but neither the scenes of her early life nor the presence of sympathizing friends furnished relief. Her time had come, and the ties that bound her to earth were speedily to be broken. At times she seemed to improve. Two evenings before her death she walked to the adjoining room, seated herself at the piano, and began a plaintive air (she had a sweet, musical voice.) Her mother followed, when she raised her eyes and said: "Only to divert my mind, mother." A dear friend, who had scarcely left her presence for weeks, sat by her side, and together they played and sung, at the last verse of "The Holy City:"

"And what shall be my journey,
How long I'll stay below,
Or what shall be my trials,
Are not for me to know."

She, turning, said: "Isn't it sweet, mother?" The next evening as the sun was declining (the last sunlight of earth to her) the two seated themselves again. The last note and word sung was: "There is rest in Jesus, sweet, sweet rest." One hour later she was seized with spasms of the heart, which lasted through the night. As the light of the holy Sabbath dawned she said, in broken accents: "I cannot talk; lay me down." The mortal agony was nearly over, and, turning an anxious, earnest look on those who stood around, she closed her eyes forever on the light of this world, and in a moment opened them upon the radiant brightness of an eternal Sabbath in heaven. She was buried from the Franklin Street church, which was filled with sympathizing friends. An appropriate and touching address was delivered by the Rev. J. W. Rush. The choir sadly sung, "There is rest in Jesus," and the body, covered with flowers, was borne to its rest in the grave. A. S. ANDREWS.

MR. EDITOR: I am, as secretary of the Sunday school on the Milton station, Mobile district, Alabama Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church South, instructed to send you the inclosed for publication in the ADVOCATE. Bro. McMillan was a subscriber to the ADVOCATE, and well did he appreciate it, as I know from his frequent expressions. He was a good man. I have known him for twenty-nine years, and he has during all this time worked for Jesus and for the church of his choice; and a most efficient workman was he. When he died he was a class-leader, a steward, a trustee, and superintendent of the Sabbath school; also district steward, and a member of the last District Conference. He was the representative from this (Santa Rosa) county to the State Legislature, and was quite unwell most of the last session, and on his return home became too unwell to get farther than Pollard, Alabama, where he has a brother living. Here he became worse, and sent for his wife and one of his children. After this he became better, and his brother sent for his other two children, and hopes were entertained that he would recover; but at last the fatal hour arrived, and on the twentieth of March he passed away. His relations who conversed with him tell me that he said, in his lucid hours, that all was well with him as to another world. His wife says that not long before he died he seemed to be perfectly rational and calm, and, after feebly speaking with her, he seemed to be in a meditative mood, and all at once exclaimed, "Victory! victory!" and never spoke again, but passed away with a heavenly sweetness upon his countenance, and after death had a most natural and heavenly look. From our first acquaintance we became intimate and close friends, and have ever remained such. I loved him much and well. We have served in the Legislature together. He has served the Church and State much and well—no stain on his official character. Great is the loss of the Church and the State, and I might say the world has lost a worthy example. Yours truly,

JOHN CHAIN.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT TO JUDGE NEILL McMILLAN, Superintendent of the Sabbath School of the M. E. Church South, Milton, Florida, who died at Pollard, Alabama, March 20, 1874.

At a special meeting of the teachers and members of the Sabbath school, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The great and all-wise God, who doeth all things well, has, in the dispensation of his providence, removed from us by death our friend, brother and superintendent, JUDGE NEILL MCMILLAN; And whereas, As a feeble testimony of our love and appreciation of his sterling worth, be it

Resolved, That in his death our county has sustained the loss of our honest, upright representative in the State Legislature, our town a plain, free-hearted, benevolent citizen, our church and school a zealous and staunch member and officer, his family all that comprises a husband and father, and the world a noble man.

Resolved, That while we sincerely deplore his loss, we acknowledge God's justice and wisdom, and with meekness of heart submit ourselves and our grief to his holy will.

Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved ones our heartfelt sympathy, ever praying that the divine Comforter may abide with them; and that a copy of these resolutions be furnished them.

Resolved, That as an outward sign of our hearts' grief, and our profound regard for his memory, we will wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days; and request that this tribute be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

MRS. R. C. MARTIN,
MISS MARY E. BLATE,
MISS GEOR. D. FISHER,
JOHN W. FRATER,
WILLIAM F. MONROE,
Committee.

MARCH 20, 1874.

The Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, on the Milton station, Mobile district, Alabama Conference, in school session, on Sunday, March 21, 1874, appointed the foregoing committee to prepare and report suitable resolutions, to express the feelings and sentiments of the school upon the death of our much-beloved and worthy superintendent, and on the following Sabbath (March 29, 1874) reported the above preamble and resolutions, which were read to the school, and adopted by a unanimous rising vote. All of which I certify to.

JOHN CHAIN,
Sec. of Sabbath School.

Study Music.

The Advance thinks that among other studies ministers should cultivate a knowledge of music. It recognizes the necessity of a reform in singing in public worship, and urges pastors to learn how to conduct this valuable part of public worship on this wise:

"Pastors must be trained in this direction as rigidly and carefully as for sermon-making. In the ambition of seminaries to make preachers they seem to forget that a prominent part of the minister's work is to be a leader of worship. In 'schools of the prophets' great care is taken to teach the theologue how to interpret Scripture, how to think soundly and how to construct his religious oration; but not one of them takes the least pains to make him largely successful in conducting public prayer or public praise. Are these of too trifling importance to need preparation? Or is it supposed that each of these is like the boy's music—that it 'whistles itself?' Let it be remembered that the effectiveness of a good sermon is doubled by having all the other exercises interesting and inspiring, and it is diminished by half if these be languid, commonplace or discordant. And if the service of worship be such as to refresh and delight the soul, even a tame and imperfect sermon will seem more tolerable. But aside from this the intrinsic importance of the worship is such that no minister ought to be approbated to his work until he shows that he has given himself systematic and thorough training to fit himself for the successful conduct of public prayer and praise."

THE great ocean is in a constant state of evaporation. It gives back what it receives, and sends up its waters in mists to gather into clouds; and so there is rain on the fields, and storm on the mountains, and greenness and beauty everywhere. But there are many men who do not believe in evaporation. They get all they can, and keep all they get, and so are not fertilizers, but only stagnant, miasmatic pools.—Beecher.

SPRING.

"Come, gentle Spring! ethereal mildness come!"
Oh, Thompson! void of rhyme as well as reason,
How could'st thou thus poor human nature hum?
There's no such season.

The Spring! I shrink and shudder at her name,
For why, I find her breath a bitter blighter,
And suffer from her blows as if they came From "Spring the Fighter."

Her praises, then, let hardy poets sing,
And be her truthful laureates and upholders,
Who do not feel as if they had a spring
Poured down their shoulders.

Let others eulogize her floral shows;
From me they cannot win a single stanza;
I know her blooms are in full blow—and so's
The influenza.

Her cowslips slock, and lilies of the vale,
Her honey-blossoms you hear the bees at,
Her pansies, daffodils, and primrose pale,
Are things I sneeze at!

Fair is the vernal quarter of the year!
And fair its early buddings and its blowings;
But just suppose consumption's seeds appear
With other sowings!

For me I find, when eastern winds are high,
A frigid, not a generous inspiration;
Nor can, like iron-chested Chubb, defy
An inflammation.

Smitten by breezes from the land of plague,
To me all vernal luxuries are fables!
Oh, where's the "spring" in a rheumatic leg,
Stiff as a table's?

I limp in agony—I wheeze and cough,
And quake with ague, that great agitator;
Nor dream, before July, of leaving off
My respirator.

In short, whatever panegyrics lie
In fulsome odors too many to be cited,
The tenderness of Spring is all my eye—
And that is blighted!

Christian Perfection.

Q. What is Christian perfection?

A. The loving God with all our heart, mind, soul and strength. This implies that no wrong temper, none contrary to love, remains in the soul; and that all the thoughts, words and actions are governed by pure love.

Q. Do you affirm that this perfection excludes all infirmities, ignorance and mistakes?

A. I continually affirm quite the contrary, and always have done so.

Q. But how can every thought, word and work be governed by pure love, and the man be subject at the same time to ignorance and mistakes?

A. I see no contradiction here. "A man may be filled with pure love and still be liable to mistake." Indeed, I do not expect to be freed from actual mistake till this mortal puts on immortality. I believe this to be a natural consequence of the soul's dwelling in flesh and blood. For we cannot now think at all but by the mediation of these bodily organs which have suffered equally with the rest of our frames. And hence we cannot avoid sometimes thinking wrong, till this corruptible shall have put on incorruption.

But we may carry this thought further yet. A mistake in judgment may possibly occasion a mistake in practice. For instance, Mr. De Renty's mistake touching the nature of mortification, arising from prejudice of education, occasioned that practical mistake—his wearing an iron girdle. And a thousand such instances there may be, even in those who are in the highest state of grace. Yet where every word and action springs from love such a mistake is not properly a sin. However, it cannot bear the rigor of God's justice, but needs the atoning blood.

Q. What was the judgment of all our brethren who met at Bristol in August, 1758, on this head?

A. It was expressed in these words: 1. Every one may mistake as long as he lives. 2. A mistake in opinion may occasion a mistake in practice. 3. Every such mistake is a transgression of the perfect law. Therefore: 4. Every such mistake, were it not for the blood of atonement, would expose to eternal damnation. 5. It follows that the most perfect have continual need of the merits of Christ, even for their actual transgressions, and may say for themselves, as well as for their brethren: "Forgive us our trespasses."

This easily accounts for what might otherwise seem to be utterly unaccountable, namely: that those who are not offended when we speak of the highest degree of love, yet will not hear of living without sin. The reason is, they know all men are liable to mistake, and that in practice as well as in judgment. But they do not know, or do not observe, that this is no sin if love is the sole principle of action.

Q. But still, if they live without sin, does not this exclude the necessity of a mediator? At least, is it not plain that they stand no longer in need of Christ in his priestly office?

A. Far from it. None feel their need of Christ like these; none so entirely depend upon him. For Christ does not give life to the soul separate from, but in and with himself. Hence his words are equally true of all men in whatsoever state of grace they are: "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me; for without" or separate from "me ye can do nothing."

In every state we need Christ in the following respects: 1. Whatever grace we receive, it is a free gift from him. 2. We receive it as his purchase merely in consideration of the price he paid. 3. We have this grace not only from Christ, but in him. For our perfection is not like that of a tree which flourishes by the sap derived from its own root, but, as was said before, like that of a branch, which, united to the vine, bears fruit, but severed from it is dried up and withered. 4. All our blessings, temporal, spiritual and eternal, depend on his intercession for us, which is one branch of his priestly office, whereof, therefore, we have always equal need. The best of men still need Christ in his priestly office to atone for their omissions, shortcomings (as some not improperly speak,) their mistake in judgment and practice, and their defects of various kinds. For these are all deviations from perfect law, and consequently need an atonement. Yet that they are not properly sins, we apprehend, may appear from the words of St. Paul: "He that loveth another hath fulfilled the law; for love is the fulfilling of the law."—Romans xiii, 8-10. Now mistakes, and whatever infirmities necessarily flow from the corruptible state of the body, are no way contrary to love, nor therefore, in the spiritual sense, sin.

To explain myself a little further on this head. 1. Not only sin, properly so called—that is, a voluntary transgression of a known law—but sin improperly so called—that is, an involuntary transgression of a divine law, known or unknown, needs the atoning blood. 2. I believe there is no such perfection in this life as excludes these involuntary transgressions which I apprehend to be naturally consequent on the ignorance and mistakes inseparable from mortality. 3. Therefore sinless perfection is a phrase I never use, lest I should seem to contradict myself. 4. I believe a person filled with the love of God is still liable to these involuntary transgressions. 5. Such transgressions you may call sins, if you please; I do not for the reasons above mentioned.

Q. What advice would you give to those that do and those that do not call them so?

A. Let those that do not call them sins never think that themselves or any other persons are in such a state as that they can stand before infinite justice without a mediator. This must argue either the deepest ignorance or the highest arrogance and presumption.

Let those who do call them so beware how they confound these defects with sins properly so called. But how will they avoid it? How will these be distinguished from those if they are all promiscuously called sins? I am much afraid, if we should allow any sins to be consistent with Christian perfection, few would confine the idea to those defects concerning which only the assertion could be true.

Q. But how can a likeness to mistake consist with perfect love? Is not a person who is perfected in love every moment under its influence? And can any mistake flow from pure love?

A. I answer: 1. Many mistakes may consist with pure love. 2. Some may accidentally flow from it. 3. Pure love itself may incline us to mistake. The pure love of our neighbor, springing from the love of God, "thinketh no evil," "believeth and hopeth all things." Now this very temper, unsuspicious, ready to believe and hope the best of all men, may occasion our thinking some men better than they really are. Here there is a manifest mistake accidentally flowing from pure love.

Q. How, then, shall we avoid setting Christian perfection too high or too low?

A. By keeping to the Bible and setting it just as high as the Scripture does. It is nothing higher and nothing lower than this: the pure love of God and man; the loving God with all our heart and soul, and our neighbor as ourselves; it is love governing the heart and life, running through all our tempers, words and actions.—John Wesley.

The Art of Questioning.

A teacher's success depends, in a good degree, upon his skill in asking questions and in eliciting proper answers. Of course no true teacher will ask "leading questions"—that is, questions which will enable the pupil to guess the answer, or which require simply an affirmative or a negative reply. Many teachers are content with answers which are not answers to the questions asked, but to a related one, provided the answer given implies the possession of knowledge sufficient to give an answer to the question asked. Suppose the question is: "Do you know that Jones is a rich man?" Suppose the following answer given: "He may be a rich man; I sometimes think he is, and sometimes I think he is not." Most persons would think this a satisfactory answer to the question, because the proper answer can be inferred from it. The pupil should answer the question asked, not make a statement from which an answer can be inferred. The question first answered in the above supposed statement is this: "Is it possible that Jones can be a rich man?" The second question answered is: "What is your opinion respecting the questions whether Jones is a rich man or not?" Neither of these questions was asked. The question asked was: "Do you know that Jones is a rich man?" The proper answer is: "I do," or, "I do not." Suppose the question is: "What do you think respecting the prospects of a war with France?" Very possibly the reply may be: "Some think there will be war, and some think there will not be war." The question is not what some people think, but what the person addressed thinks.

It may be said: You are contending for mere verbal accuracy. The questioner wants to know the state of the pupil's mind in respect to the question; so that he learns that the form of the answer is not important.

We must not overlook the importance of verbal accuracy. Accuracy of thought is not separable from accuracy of expression. No one has full possession of an idea till he can express it with exactness. The phrase, "I know it, but I can't say it," is in most cases untrue. It is just because the person does not know it exactly that he cannot say it. He may know something about it, but if he knows it he can say it. An exception must be made in favor of those elementary truths known only in consciousness and incapable of definition. Verbal accuracy not only conduces to accuracy of thought, but is also conducive to the habit of veracity. Habits of careless statement often lead to false statement. It is important that we should always speak the exact truth. To this exactness of expression is necessary.

Let us notice the habits which answering the question asked, and no other one, has a tendency to form. First, the pupil, knowing that his answer must be given to the question asked, will pay attention to that question. Here is an exercise tending to form the habit of attention—a habit which underlies the formation of all other mental habits, and is second to none in importance. In the next place, the meaning of the question must be clearly seen. The pupil cannot answer a question unless he understands it. Hence, if he is required to answer it, he will try to understand it. This has a tendency to form the habit of seeing things clearly. In the third place, there will be an effort at accurate expression. The form of the question will determine the form of the answer. Suppose the question to be: "Near the close of what century was America discovered?" If the pupil should say, "America was discovered in 1492," he should be reminded that the question was not: "When was America discovered?" but: "Near the close of what century was it discovered?" "The fifteenth century," would be the proper answer. These may be regarded as little things, but the universe is made up of little things, and in nothing is attention to little things more important than in the work of education.—Sunday School Times.

Something for Preachers.

Preaching in the olden time consisted, for the most part, of exposition. It is not so now. Topical preaching, hortatory preaching, experimental preaching, and so on—all very useful in their way—have almost entirely displaced true expository preaching. This is to be regretted. Expository preaching is not now as common as it ought to be. We cannot expect to deliver much of the teaching of the Holy Scripture by preaching only from short texts, disconnected and taken away from the context, and holding them up at random. We want more interpretation, more bringing out of the real intent of the sacred writer, or meaning of the Holy Ghost.

Since proper expository preaching is so much neglected at the present time, there is the more need of commenting publicly upon the word of God. Each preacher should not only select and read portions of holy writ in the public congregation, but should also make it a rule to give running comments upon them. Thus this part of the service can be made exceedingly interesting and profitable.

The Rev. C. H. Spurgeon, of London, regularly comments upon his Scripture lessons, and attaches great importance to the practice. Some years ago he delivered a lecture upon the subject before the students of his pastoral college, which is now before us. The lecture is replete with wise thought and sober suggestion, and we shall do well to study some of the principal portions of it. We will give, partly in Mr. Spurgeon's words and partly in our own, some of the main points of the lecture.

It must be obvious to all that the public reading of the abstruse parts of Scripture is of very little use to the majority of people listening, unless it be accompanied by some suitable expository remarks. Some exposition is necessary. If but few explanatory words are thrown in by a judicious reader, it is wonderful how luminous obscure portions may be made. Two or three sentences will often reveal the drift of a whole chapter; the key of a great difficulty may be presented to the hearer in half a score of words, and thus the public reading may be made abundantly profitable.

Mr. Spurgeon says abundant evidence has come before him that brief comments upon Scripture, in the ordinary services, are most acceptable and instructive to the people. He has often heard from workingmen and their wives, and from merchants and their families, that his own expositions have been most helpful to them. They testify that when they read the Bible at home, in the family, the exposition makes it doubly precious to them; and the chapter which they had unprofitably read in course at family prayers, when they peruse it the next time, recollecting what their minister has said upon it, becomes a real delight to them.

Besides, if you are in the habit of commenting, it will give you an opportunity of saying many things which are not of sufficient importance to become the theme of a whole sermon, and therefore would probably remain unnoticed, to the great loss of the Lord's people and others. It is astounding what a range of truth doctrinal, practical and experimental holy Scripture brings before us; and equally worthy of admiration is the forcible manner in which that truth is advanced. Hints given in the way in which the word of God offers them are always wise and opportune; as, for instance, the rebukes which the word administers might have seemed severe, had they been made by the pastor, unsustained by the word and unsuggested by it; but, arising out of the chapter, they cannot be resented. You can both censure sins and encourage virtues by dilating upon the histories which you read in the inspired records, whereas you might never have touched upon them had not the chapter read brought the matter before you. If you want to make full proof of your ministry, and to leave no single point of revelation untouched, your easiest mode will be to comment upon Scripture habitually. Without this, much of the word will be utterly unknown to many of our people. It is a sad fact that they do not read so much as they should at home; many of the ungodly scarcely read the Bible at all; and if only that part which we preach upon be expounded to them, how little of the Bible can they ever know!

Let us try, then, by exposition, to give our hearers a fair view of the entire compass of revelation; let us take them, as it were, to the top of Nebo, and show them the whole land from Dan to Beersheba, and prove to them that everywhere it floweth with milk and honey.—Evangelical Messenger.

CLOSET devotions are the precursor to family worship. Family religion underlies the commonwealth and the church of Christ. No Christian government, no healthy public conscience, no Bible philanthropies, no godly church life can exist without their roots beneath Christian hearthstones and family altars.

Japanese Sword Lore.

We find much to amuse us in a paper read by Thomas McClatchie, Esq., before the Asiatic Society of Japan in November last, and published in the Japan Mail, on "The Sword of Japan: its History and Traditions." From it we learn that "the sword has in Japan a history of its own, and has formed the subject of several treatises, written with the object of assisting the student of the art of fixing the date and maker's name of a blade, an art which apparently was a subject of great attention from olden times. Among these the principal works are the 'Koto Meijin,' or 'Collection of Names of Old Swords,' and the 'Shinto Bengi,' or 'Reference as to New Swords.' The former was compiled in A. D. 1791, by Kamada Saburodaiyu. The expression 'old swords' is explained as applying to those made before the eighth year of the period Keicho, or A. D. 1603, while all those manufactured after the same date are included under the heading of 'new swords.'"

A sketch is given of the origin of the sword. It is full of mythology and mysteries, and it is not worth while to repeat it.

"The names of noted smiths are many in number. The first who appears to be a really authentic personage is one Amakuni, who lived during the reign of the forty-second Emperor, Monmu Tenno (about 696—A. D. 707.) The four makers of swords who seem to be best known in Japan are Munechika, Masamune, Yoshimitsu and Muramasa. Of these Munechika is by far the oldest; he was born in A. D. 938, and his swords were famous from A. D. 987 downward. Masamune and Yoshimitsu acquired their renown toward the end of the thirteenth century, while Muramasa did not appear till nearly a century after them. These makers, as indeed all smiths of any note, had their own marks, which they engraved on the hilt of the sword, most frequently accompanied by a date; but as, of late years, the practice of counterfeiting the marks of well-known makers has been largely indulged in, these are not always to be depended upon. Muramasa was succeeded by his son and his grandson, who both bore the same name, and the latter of whom flourished in the early part of the fifteenth century. The blades turned out by this family acquired the unenviable reputation of being unlucky, and of frequently bringing their owners into trouble.

"The profession of the smith was deemed an honorable one, and those who engaged in it were generally men of good family. It is mentioned of the Emperor Gotoba Tenno, who succeeded to the throne in 1184, that not only did he 'give directions to the noted smiths of the various provinces and make them forge, but also worked with his own hand.' In later years the famous smiths received from the court an honorary rank, which was in proportion to the renown they had gained.

"It is a common thing to see engraved on a sword the name of the maker with the title 'kami' of such and such a 'province' appended. To these names a date is generally added, while on the other side of the hilt is occasionally written a motto or a verse of poetry, some of which are rather curious. Subjoined are a few of these, selected at random:

"'There's naught 'twixt heaven and earth that man need fear who carries at his belt this single blade;' again: 'One's fate is in the hands of Heaven, but a skillful fighter does not meet with death;' and again: 'In one's last days one's sword becomes the wealth of one's posterity.'

"Apart from these mottoes it was a common custom to give names to famous swords. 'Little Crow' was the title of one in great repute in the Taira family, while in the house of Minamoto there were two hereditary swords named 'Higekiri' and 'Hizamaru.' The two latter names arose from the circumstances that when these swords were tried on two criminals sentenced to decapitation, one cut through the beard of the victim after severing the head from the body, while the other also divided the knee. The historian Rai Sanyo narrates the fact that the forging of these two swords occupied the smith for a period of sixty days.

"To clash the sheath of one's sword against that belonging to another person was held to be a grave breach of etiquette; to turn the sheath in the belt, as though about to draw, was tantamount to a challenge; while to lay one's weapon on the floor of a room, and to kick the guard with the foot in the direction of any one else, was a deadly insult, that generally resulted in a combat to the death. It was not even thought polite to draw a sword from its sheath without begging the permission of any other persons present. The decay of the practice of wearing swords is certainly a hopeful sign of more intelligent and orderly times."—Methodist.

THE man who answered an advertisement to the following effect says his curiosity is satisfied:

"If you would learn how to make home happy, send a postage stamp and twenty-five cents to P. O. box No. —, Cincinnati."

He did send the necessary cash, and soon received the answer:

"If you are as big a fool as we think you must be for giving us your money, you can make home happy by leaving it and going West by yourself."—Hearth and Home.

GET to the roots of things. The gold-mines of Scriptures are not in the top soil; you must open a shaft. The precious diamonds of experience are not picked up in the roadway; their secret places are far down. Get down into the vitality, the solidity, the veracity, the divinity of the word of God, and seek to possess with it all the inward work of the blessed Spirit.—Spurgeon.

Religious Intelligence.

THE special mission building fund of the Free Church of Scotland has now reached the sum of $184,000.

A NEW translation of the Old Testament is about to be made into the Northern and Central India.

THE American Bible Society reports the receipt of $110,775.21 from the various States of the Union during February, as the result of the sales of books.

IN seventeen years Spurgeon has received 13,000 persons into his church, erected 36 chapels in London, and supplied the same with ministers trained in a college of his own founding.

THE number of Congregationalists in the United States is 318,916; scholars in the Sunday school, 371,110. The increase of Congregational churches in England and Wales, the past year, was 300.

CHRIST CHURCH, Chicago, formally reorganized as a Reformed Episcopal church, electing vestrymen and wardens. Bishop Cheney will continue in charge of the church, as heretofore.

THE Old Mariners' Presbyterian Church Sabbath school, of Philadelphia, has nearly completed its fifty-fifth year. It is the intention to celebrate the event by publishing a history of the school.

THERE are more than sixty thousand churches in the United States, and about three thousand Roman Catholic churches. These are facts to think of when estimating the power of religion in this country.

THE missionary society of Batavia, Java, is showing some degree of activity. A seminary has been projected for the education of native teachers and evangelists, and a yearly income of $9,500 has thus far been secured.

THE annual meeting of the American Tract Society was held in Washington on Sunday, April 5. Judge Strong, of the United States Supreme Court, presided. Receipts for this year were $566,629; expenditures, $561,710.

MORE than $79,000 has been subscribed in Boston toward the projected building for the Young Men's Christian Union. This enterprise is, for the most part, conducted by Unitarians, yet no sectarian test is required for membership.

THE whole number of Old Catholics in Germany is estimated by the Merkur as 92 separate congregations, and over 50,000 souls, with 41 priests. This account does not include the large number of scattered sympathizers with the movement.

THE Methodist Episcopal Church has among the Indians 17 missionaries, 1,516 members, 469 probationers, 24 local preachers and 13 churches. Its mission work among the Indians is distributed as follows: 4 stations in New York State, 3 in Michigan, 1 in Wisconsin, 4 in Oregon.

AT SATARA, in the Mahratta mission field, the missionary's wife has been able to gather heathen women of every caste, and even Mussulmans, into her sewing class. Having by this means interested them, she closes her meeting with a hymn and a talk about Christianity.

HAMILTON MURRAY, who was lost on the Ville du Havre, left by his will the sum of $20,000 to the Philadelphia Society of Princeton College. The purpose of this society is to foster religious influences among the students, and to promote labor for the salvation of those who are strangers to Christ and his salvation.

THE Mennonites of Russia, numbering 80,000 souls, are coming to this country, in order that they may have liberty of conscience. They do not believe in war. As Russia has refused to exempt them from "soldiering," they come to us. No grander exodus in modern history is known. They are coming for a principle.

THE lesson committee of the International Sunday School Convention has adopted a course of lessons for 1875. The first six quarters are devoted to the books of Joshua and Judges, and the last two are upon the Gospel of John. The lessons, it is said, will be used by most of the Protestant schools of Great Britain and Canada.

THE Wesleyans at Macclesfield, England, have laid the corner-stone of a new chapel, which is intended to cost about $35,000. It is fifty years since the last Wesleyan chapel was built in this memorable locality, and this occasion was one of great rejoicing. A similar enterprise has been initiated at Otley, an old center of Methodism, and at about the same cost.

THE Church Journal calls for the revival of discipline in the Episcopal Church, and affirms that while the clergy are closely guarded by the canons, and sharply watched by the bishops and the people, the laity are left very much to themselves. The editor says: "We are like all the rest. We are practically without any lines between the church and the world as a matter of life."

AT A conference of Baptist missionaries, recently held in Calcutta, a missionary from Eastern Bengal spoke of a movement there, initiated by a native who has a number of disciples. They read the Christian Scriptures, and make the apostles and the early Christians their models. They discard the use of medicines, and seek the cure of sickness by prayer to Christ. One of them refused to eat animal food on the ground that he would thus offend the prejudices of Hindoo brethren and transgress St. Paul's precept.

RETIRED INCUMBENTS IN NORWAY.—In the church system in Norway there is an arrangement whereby a clergyman past work may retire with a superannuation, which is charged against the income of his successor. There is also a widow's glebe attached to each glebe, so that, on the death of a rector, his wife is not, as in the English Church, driven from her old home without any place of shelter. These provisions tend to prevent the scandal too often seen in other churches, of ministers clinging to their post long after the power to perform their duties has ceased.

DEAN STANLEY is about to give a further illustration of the charity which is one of his distinguishing characteristics by allowing a memorial [illegible] honor of the founders of Methodism, John and Charles Wesley. The sculptor is Mr. Adams Acton, whose work consists of medallions of the two brothers. At the base will be a bas-relief representing John Wesley preaching on his father's tomb in Epworth church-yard. Around him will be grouped about fifty figures, most of them portraits of living ex-presidents of the Wesleyan Conference, and of other distinguished members of that body.

THE Jansenish Church of Utrecht, it is said, has determined to make a complete separation from the Roman Catholic Church. It has been accustomed to make official notice to Rome on the election of its highest ecclesiastical officers; but will hereafter dispense with this ceremony. The Pope's last fulmination against the Old Catholics no doubt has brought this about, as a mere matter of self-respect could hardly do otherwise. It is said also that it will adopt the name Old Catholic, and make common cause with Bishop Reinkens and his followers against the arrogance and pretensions of the papacy.

BISHOP FOSTER, at the recent meetings of the Pittsburg Conference, propounded the question, Why is not the world converted? and suggested that the proper answer would be: "Because the church does not want it to be." As an illustration of the comparative indifference of professing Christians to the spiritual wants of mankind, he quoted the statistics of the Pittsburg Conference, which show that the missionary collections for the past year have averaged a little under fifty cents per member—that is to say, the Methodists within the bounds of the Pittsburg Conference have an average of about fifty cents' worth of desire, to the member, for the world's conversion.

ITALY.—On Tuesday, November 28, an American Episcopal Church was organized in Nice, to be under the charge of Rev. Dr. McVicar. A letter was read from the Bishop of Pennsylvania, authorizing the formation and establishment of an Episcopal Church at Nice, then followed the reading of the canons by which it would be governed, and the articles, the first of which gives it the name of "The Church of the Holy Spirit." The following is a list of the warden and vestrymen: General James Watson Webb, of New York, warden. Vestrymen—W. W. Vesey, United States consul at Nice; Louis McLane, Maryland; W. A. DuBois, M. D., Connecticut; George Tiffany, Rhode Island; G. Lemercier, Nice.

METHODIST CHURCH CONFERENCE. The annual meeting of the New York Conference of the Methodist Church, representing the non-episcopal section of Methodism in this country, was held last week in the Graham Avenue church, Brooklyn. The Methodist Church—contradistinguished from the Methodist Episcopal Church—has had 29 Annual Conferences in this country and an aggregate membership of 140,000. Each circuit or station is entitled to a representation by its pastor and one lay delegate. There are forty-eight churches and stations in this Conference. The Conference extends over a great area, and takes in Long Island and other parts of New York State, New Jersey, parts of New England and Pennsylvania.

BISHOP KINGSLEY'S MONUMENT. A monument is about to be sent from New York to Beyrout, Syria, to be erected over the grave of Bishop Kingsley. It is of Quincy granite, and will stand twenty-two feet in height above the foundation. The stone bears the following inscriptions: "Rev. Calvin Kingsley, D. D., Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Born in the State of New York, United States of America, September 8, 1812. Died in Beyrout, Syria, April 6, 1870, while making for his church the first episcopal tour around the globe. May his tomb unite more closely Asia and America." The opposite side of the stone reads as follows: "Erected as a tribute of affection and esteem by order of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

IT IS SAID that next to Pope Pius the Ninth there is no dignitary in the Roman Catholic Church more influential than Father Johannes Beckx, general of the Society of Jesus; and for this reason the people of Rome call the holy father the "White Pope," and General Beckx the "Black Pope." The ramifications of the order all converge into the hands of this one man; his subtle brain directs all its movements; his iron will is an inexorable law to his numerous subordinates. At no time since the fall of Napoleon the First have the Jesuits exercised as powerful an influence at the Vatican as in the last few years, and this is due to the firmness and shrewdness of the general of the order. He is a profound scholar, an excellent organizer, a brilliant and trenchant polemical writer, and endowed with rare executive talents.

PERVERSIONS IN INDIA.—The Swiss Times says: "An Oudh paper announces that several Europeans in India have of late taken upon themselves the 'odious task of disgracing their native land and their religion.' Some of the more prominent ones referred to are curious. A Captain Rimington, of the Bengal army, suddenly deserted his regiment, at Lucknow, leaving no trace of himself. At last he was discovered in Benares, in the garb of a fakir. Another case is that of a woman, the wife of an extra-assistant commissioner, who embraced the Mohammedan faith. A still more remarkable conversion is that of a little girl who had hardly left school before she became a convert. A Mr. Marriott, a well-educated and intelligent man, was forced to take the step by 'absolute starvation.' Others turn Mohammedans from the most discreditable motives."

On the River.

Leaving New Orleans on Thursday, the twenty-third of April, we are nearing Louisville on Thursday, the thirtieth, and expect to be ashore in time for the opening day of the General Conference. The Bodmann is not a very fast boat, but the winds have been ahead most of the time, and the current always strong. On the Mississippi the terrible inundation was manifest whenever we looked out. It became heart-sickening and painfully monotonous—water, water everywhere. The richest and fairest sections of our lower coast covered, fences washed away, the canefields laid waste, and the harvest of the present year surely beyond hope. The prospect grows no better until we pass Memphis. Houses half submerged, levees broken, fields wholly or in part overflowed, cattle standing in the shallower places or huddled on some crumbling and precarious bank, and people paddling about in canoes, dugouts and on rafts, are scenes which present themselves constantly. It is pitiable to see the poor dumb animals reduced to skeletons and patiently awaiting their fate, but more than pitiable to think of the poverty and destitution of the thousands of people involved in this extraordinary calamity.

The flood seemed to give no sign of abatement until we reached Cairo. "Slowly rising," was the usual response to inquiries, and discouraging accounts from the river above. The Ohio, so far as we have gone, is by no means at high-water mark, and has fallen several feet in places. These high and solid banks about Owensboro and other points, which we have had in sight for a couple of days, make a Louisianian envious, and remind us, by way of contrast, of the low and deluged shores of our sadly afflicted State. Here in the Ohio we have bright but chilly weather, greatly in contrast with the softness and balm of our gulf coast. The forest-trees are showing some verdure, the buds are bursting forth into those sprays and tints of yellow green which precede the mature foliage, and the birds are just waking up to the loves and melodies of the new-born spring. The fields are arrayed in the living green of the winter wheat, the apple-blossoms give a bridal look to the orchards, while the wooded hillsides are gayly adorned with the snowy dogwood, and the purple of the ever-blushing and beautiful red bud. The plows are well started, and the farmers on the banks of the Ohio are preparing for the corn, tobacco and other crops which engage the husbandry of the country. Happy for them that they dwell among the munitions of rocks, and that their homes and fields and herds are above the floods of great waters.

Our steamboat life is quiet and without much incident. What we can see without, and the company within, and the pleasant refuge of books and meditation, are sufficient, however, to make up a pleasant week. Bishop Keener and wife are along, and we have been fortunate in having, in the main, an agreeable society in the cabin. As far as Memphis there were a number of devotees of the turf, who, with their horses, were just from the New Orleans races, and making a regular tour from point to point. They were a quiet set, and, for the most part, as grave as a Presbyterian synod. They seem to look upon their vocation as legitimate, and take a very business-like view of their peculiar pursuit. The horses, some thirty in number, were splendid animals, and ranged in value from $1,000 to as much as $15,000 apiece. The care bestowed upon the creatures, the vigilance with which they were guarded, the number of grooms, riders and attendants and trainers, were to us something new and surprising. The horse-race is to-day one of the most pernicious institutions in the world, and next to if not ahead of the lottery business as a means of dissipation and corruption. It is a stupendous organization for sport and gambling, with scarcely a single feature of utility to redeem it from unqualified reprobation.

With a large and somewhat miscellaneous assortment of passengers, there must be some gayety, of course. The violin and bass viol are in requisition every night, and after supper the spacious cabin is cleared for action. Up to a late hour the revel usually continues, and the dancers, young ladies and gentlemen mostly strangers to each other, exhibit great powers of endurance. The glowing hours are chased with flying feet, and we suppose every variety of the modern dance is engaged in. The round dance, we were informed, was by all odds the most popular and fascinating—a most indecent and evil thing, it would seem, but still indorsed and practiced by the fashionable world. That a refined and virtuous womanhood can tolerate it is inexplicable. Neither the teachings nor the discipline of the Christian Church should temporize with this monstrous indelicacy. But racing and dancing apart, our trip has been one of enjoyment, for within we have found some godly people, time for reading and rest, and the outer world of sky and forest and hills and towns to observe.

While waiting an hour or two at Memphis we were gratified to meet our whilom brother of the Louisiana Conference, Rev. S. B. Suratt, now of the Memphis Conference, and pastor of the Central church in the city of Memphis. He was looking immensely stout and well, and is doing a fine work. He informed us that he was in the midst of a most gracious revival—a work that was increasing daily in power, and that was arousing and shaking the entire city. This is well. While the General Conference meets to legislate, let the work of revivals be pushed throughout the connection. A revival, deep and universal, will do more than forty General Conferences to establish Methodism and to save the people. We could do without the Conference for years to come, but we must have revival power, and the church must seek and obtain the baptism of fire.

Pure in Heart.

There is much unprofitable speculation about religious doctrines and duties, much advocation of peculiar views and whims; but there is also a lamentable neglect of a thorough purification of the heart, in order to be sanctified fully and be made meet for the realms of glory. We do not lay ourselves liable to the charge of censoriousness when we say of the majority of professors of Christianity what the Lord said through Isaiah (xxix, 13) of the Jews: "This people draw near me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me."

The Bible declares positively that without purity of heart, without holiness, no one shall see the Lord. In conversion this holiness has its incipiency, and in sanctification its consummation. In conversion the soul is, like a block of marble, dug from the quarry of the world. To become a polished statue, a monument of grace, much toil, skill and devotion to the undertaking are necessary. God is the soul's sculptor; with the means of grace and his amazing love he finally accomplishes the task, namely: the restoration of the divine image. He who is "mighty to save" will, if the soul submits, save and purify it fully, finally. The flower is perfect in its kind; perfect is the sea, the sun—perfection is stamped on all. His handiwork is without tarnish; the whole material world is without "spot or wrinkle." And in this work of salvation from sin and purification of the heart should he be content with imperfection and succeed but in part? Man is not saved at all if not fully saved; not fully saved is man if his heart is not pure.

Our heavenly Father does not require impossibilities of us. He "knoweth our frame" and is fully cognizant of our deplorable condition. He has therefore introduced remedial means commensurate with the emergency. The Father gave his Son, the Son gave his life, his blood, that blood which cleanseth from all sin—sin of deepest dye, most damnable and innumerable. This blood can remove the last and least remains of moral pollution. The saints in glory had not only, according to Revelation vii, 14, washed their robes, but had also made them white in the blood of the Lamb. The acquisition of white robes, the perfect purification of the heart, is possible; for, though Paul declares that he had not, up to the time when he made this remark, been made perfect, adds, nevertheless, that he was following after. In other words, that he was making strenuous efforts to acquire the perfection which had been placed within reach. Would the apostle follow a phantom, an object which would forever elude his grasp?

The Holy Spirit resides and presides in every regenerated heart. As sole sovereign he swings his scepter over every faculty of body and soul. He banishes all disloyal elements, removes all opposition and enforces an entire conformation to his wishes. We can tell the character of the owner and inmate of a house from the external and internal appearance of the same. Thus the Holy Spirit cleanses and changes, enlarges and illuminates his residence—the human heart—until it bears his own pure and holy nature.

Pure in heart! One drop of ink in a glass full of water renders all the contents impure. So long as one sin is retained, fondled and caressed in the heart, and though that sin appear but a pigmy, it will render us unfit for heaven.

Jesus calls those blessed who are pure in heart. Our experience corroborates the truth of this declaration. We are blessed in the same degree as we are pure in heart. To be perfectly pure is to be perfectly blessed. Augustin has remarked: "The soul is restless until it rests in God." And we add: Man is not truly happy, the heart is not fully blessed, until it is perfectly pure. A.

German State Church.

The theory of religion through water baptism is likely to have a pretty severe test in Germany. Last September a law was passed which allows the several societies to control their own affairs. The law provides for the election of a church council, to be composed of the pastor and from four to twelve laymen, according to the number of the society. This council controls the internal affairs of the church, including the election of the minister himself. This latter function has hitherto been exercised by a general ecclesiastical college. The church councils in a diocese form a circuit synod, which meets once a year. The circuit synods in a province form a provincial synod, which meets once in three years. The provincial synods together constitute a general synod, which meets whenever there is any need. The delegates to these bodies are laymen and ministers in equal number. The delegates to the circuit synod are directly elected by the societies; delegates to the provincial synod are elected by the several circuit synods. But what with the privilege of electing their own ministers, and, directly and indirectly, their own delegates, the laymen of the church have now the determining voice as to the character of the State church.

Already an unexpected result appears. Everybody belongs to the church, for everybody has been baptized and confirmed. Women are not allowed to vote; but every man above twenty-four years of age, with trifling exceptions, can vote. For is not every man a Christian? has he not been baptized? etc. But now it begins to appear that, though they are all Christians, they are not all the persons to determine the character of a church. The mass of men in Germany do not go to church at all. A straggling congregation of women and children is all one commonly finds. The men are in the beer gardens or at work. And now this rationalistic, irreligious, materialistic mass is suddenly invested with power to determine who shall preach and what he shall preach. Evangelical Germany finds to its horror that it lies in the power of rationalistic Germany to banish the gospel from the pulpit, and fill it with men who shall echo its own sentiments. And it threatens to do it. Already they have taken possession of many churches; and, where they find a man who is mere or less in earnest, the remark is heard: "Hitherto he has preached to suit himself. Now he shall preach to suit us." That is the key-note of the campaign. Many and many an evangelical minister is expecting his dismissal. The church is frightened. Men like Tholuck declare that they see no hope in man. Another professor, and one whom no one would suspect of over-orthodoxy, said the other day: "I see nothing but the blackness of darkness before us."

And yet every friend of religion must rejoice in the crisis, and pray for the good work to go on. Baptismal religion has hung like a nightmare on the church for centuries. There is piety in Germany, as in Israel's darkest night there were seven thousand who had not bowed to Baal; but in general it is no exaggeration to say that real, vital religion is almost unheard of here. A form, a ceremony, without any effect upon heart or life, is the prevailing conception of religion. And this view has served to lull the conscience to sleep and render the heart insensible, until Christian Germany, which holds up its hands in horror at the fact that in America the mass of the people don't belong to the church, is in a condition little superior, so far as religion is concerned, to pagan China. Let the good work go on. Let rationalism take possession of all the churches. The sooner the better. That day the State church is doomed. The piety of the land will not endure it, and when once it is driven into banishment it will begin to grow strong again. Along with that "blackness of darkness" will come the shining of the everlasting stars, which never fail to come out when the darkness grows most dense. Indeed, a marked improvement in the direclness and pungency of the preaching of the suspected pastors is very evident, although the law only went into operation on Sunday 1. The piety of Germany is mainly of the pietistic order, and is strangely averse to action. It needs nothing so much as to be awakened from its dream of safety—its dream that Germany is necessarily religious because it has been baptized. In this respect the omens are propitious. It will be driven into conflict; and that means victory.

In spite of the forebodings of friends, the present crisis must be viewed as full of promise. The end of the conflict can hardly fail to be the overthrow of the State church, and the establishment of another on the basis of personal piety as the condition of membership; and not until this is done is there much hope for the restoration of Germany. One cannot conceive a finer example of the absurdity of baptismal regeneration. Allowing these regenerated people to take charge of their religious affairs threatens to drive religion out of the land; and yet they are all Christians.—Independent.

Amen.

Three Hebrew words—hosanna, hallelujah, amen—have, in their original form, maintained their place in the worship of the church of Christ. Their meaning is pretty well understood. Amen is correctly defined in Johnson's Dictionary thus: "A term used in devotion, by which at the end of a prayer we mean, So be it; and at the end of a creed, So it is." But, though the meaning of amen is known, its proper use is generally neglected. Amen was used as an audible expression of assent, on the part of the congregation, to the prayers and praises that had been offered. When David brought up the ark to the place he had prepared for it, and the singers sang the dedicatory psalm, we are told: "All the people said 'amen' and praised the Lord." When Ezra blessed the Lord in the audience of the multitude "all the people answered, 'Amen, amen.'" The doxology at the end of the fourth psalm is a testimony to this practice. "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel from everlasting, and let all people say, 'Amen.' 'hallelujah.'"—Psalms cvi, 48. This excellent custom was adopted in the Christian Church; for Paul, commending praying and prophesying in a language that could be understood above, speaking in an unknown tongue, asks: "Else when thou shalt bless with the Spirit, how shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say 'amen' at thy giving of thanks?" Hence we learn that the amen was pronounced aloud at the close of devotion in the primitive church, and Paul here sanctions the practice. And the old custom has more or less obtained ever since. We are told that in the day of Jerome it was usual "to close every prayer with such unanimous consent that the amens rung and echoed it through the church, and sounded like the fall of waters or the noise of thunder."

The all-important matter is that the amens should be uttered in spirit. Ever so distinct an articulation of the word, if it be but empty breath, is useless. I have seen it stated that the Chinese have no word for amen, but their parallel may be literally translated: "The heart wishes exactly so." And, whether we say amen or not, we want to feel that the heart wishes exactly so. It is a good thing to be able to say amen to our own prayers. As people sometimes write letters and then throw them into the fire—since for some reason or other they like not to send them—so people sometimes say prayers which have so little sincerity and heart in them that they cannot truly put their amen thereto, for their heart does not wish exactly so. It is well to be able to add our amen to the public devotions, prayers and praises that have been offered. To feel the amen is the great thing, for God looketh on the heart.

But the audible utterance of amen is much to be desired in our assemblies. In this matter our Episcopal friends are far better than we; and it does one good in a church to hear the amen pronounced aloud by many voices at the close of each prayer, though now, in many churches, by the miserable practice of intoning, they have spoiled it all by changing the deep masculine response into a mere petty sing-song. But in many of our places of worship you rarely hear an amen, except that pronounced by the minister. I grant that we who are ministers must bear a very large share of responsibility for the faults of the congregation. It is a very wise saying of some person that the only way for a minister to go on happily is to take the blame of everything that goes wrong to himself. But the neglect of the utterance of amen is certainly not in the catalogue of ministerial offenses. Go to any meeting where a number of our ministers are present, and you will hear them distinctly and emphatically say amen. Here, at least, there are examples to the flock, but the sheep will not follow them.

It may be asked: Of what importance is the outward utterance, if only we feel the amen? I reply that just as our souls would be incomplete without our bodies, so the spirit of worship is all the better for the outward embodiment. The loud amen rivets attention, deepens sympathy, and greatly encourages him who has offered the prayer. * * * *

The congregational utterance of amen is both scriptural and edifying. Why is it neglected? We sing:

> Angels descend with songs again,
> And every creature say amen.

A prayer follows, and at the close scarcely half a dozen besides the minister say amen. Some few do so in most of our congregations, to their honor be it spoken. And let me ask my readers, especially the deacons and leaders in our churches, if they think there is any force in the reasons that have been adduced, to resolve to break through the silent system, and distinctly say amen at the close of prayer in our assemblies, and others will soon follow their example. Certain am I that it would prove a great help to our devotions if, according to Scripture precept and precedent, our prayers closed with the unanimous and loud amen of the whole congregation. I close by asking my readers to practice the inspired injunction: "Let all the people say amen."—Correspondent of the London Baptist.

Austria and the Papacy.

The Prussian conflict is just now being repeated on Austrian soil. The government has so long yielded to the demands of the Romish Curia that it finds itself tied hand and foot by the power and assumption of the church, and has at last resolved to cancel the concordat in fact as well as in form, and introduced a new code of ecclesiastical laws, which will enable it to be its own master in some slight measure.

The spirit of civil liberty and independence of the State from the trammels of the church, so successfully cultivated by Maria Theresa and her son, Joseph the Second, disappeared entirely shortly after the Congress of Vienna, and in a little while the Jesuits and the officials of the papal See took full possession of the State. The revolution of 1848 so weakened the government that it was willing to accept almost any aid that would enable it to withstand the attacks of liberalism, and by 1855 was induced to make the concordat or papal treaty, whereby the ruling power was vested in the church rather than in the State.

In this measure the politicians deceived themselves, for the extreme tyranny thereby introduced into civil life by ecclesiastical interference exasperated, rather than allayed; but they, at least for a time, suppressed the unruly elements. The laws of marriage became ecclesiastical, rather than civil; the school was placed under the domain of the church entirely; the universities were given over to church control; and even the literature of the country was subjected to a clerical censorship. But this concordat did not bring the promised fruits; for the schools under the clergy paid not the least attention to scientific knowledge, and the priests, educated by the bishops alone, were steeped in fanaticism.

The government vainly tried to effect alterations in the concordat, but every project was rejected by the church, and, instead of an improvement, the syllabus of 1864 introduced the doctrines of the Middle Ages, which are so totally incompatible with the modern State. Aided by this instrument and the treaty itself, the church formed a State within a State, which led to a total abnegation of the civil power in the most important spheres of civil life. When the fundamental civil code of Austria of 1867 blocked out the modern State for the empire, the gap between this and the concordat became more patent, and the Austrian bishops took the part of Rome against their own country. They openly and secretly opposed the laws intended to fix the relations between the school and the church, and especially the ordinances concerning the different sects.

Then came the Vatican Council, at which the principles of the syllabus were made the laws of the church, and consequently of those States standing in relation to it by means of concordats. Austria protested against the syllabus and the dogma, but spoke to deaf ears, and her own bishops were degraded to the position of mere instruments of the Pope. She at last, in 1870, resolved to dissolve the concordat by imperial proclamation. But it was not so easy to do this, from the fact that it partook of the character of an international treaty and a State law, and its abrogation must therefore be followed by a new code in place of the one rejected. An effort was made to avoid this by special legislation regarding marriage and school laws, etc.; but these have all proved unsatisfactory, until now the Parliament is engaged on a set of laws which are virtually to form a new code in regard to all the matters controlled by the papal treaty.

And just here the Romish bishops, supported by Austria, and pretending to be her own loyal citizens, rise against her and sustain the pontiff in his claim to rule the church and the schools in Austria. For centuries the State has lived and ruled in such intimate connection with the church that a separation now is a very severe process, especially as the church has ever lent herself to the accomplishment of political aims. And naturally the laws which give the greatest offense are those referring to the appointments of bishops and priests, only with civil sanction, in places endowed and sustained by government. One paragraph, for instance, forbids the church to excommunicate a citizen because of the exercise of the right of suffrage in the sense of any political party. This, it will be seen, permits a man to vote as he pleases, and forbids the church to interfere with him in the exercise of this privilege. And again, a citizen has the right to be married by civil officers, if he so elects, without drawing on him the excommunication of the church. Another paragraph forbids the church to exercise corporal punishment for ecclesiastical misdemeanors. A monk who chose to turn Protestant, in a way in no wise conflicting with the civil law, was imprisoned in the cell of a convent for six months, alongside the cells of two lunatics, and just over the sewer, with bread and water. This could not be repeated under the above law.

But the bishops protest against the passage of this new code, and the Pope exhorts them to hold out against it, and refuse to accept it in their relations to their people, and therefore all the trouble of which we hear in the Austrian Legislature.

THE editor and Bishop Keener and lady, after a pleasant trip, reached Louisville on the first of this month. All in excellent health.

Death of Col. Nicholas D. Coleman

Just as our last edition was going to press the Vicksburg papers, delayed by the mails, came to hand bringing the sad intelligence of the death of Colonel Coleman, in his seventy-fourth year of his age, brother of Colonel Lloyd R. Coleman, of this city, and father-in-law of Rev. Dr. Smith, editor of the Southwestern Presbyterian, which occurred on the twentieth ultimo, at the residence of his son, in Vicksburg, Mississippi. We have had many reasons for being sincerely attached to Colonel Coleman, and feeling in his death a personal bereavement. Becoming acquainted with him at an age when kind and genial spirit impresses itself upon the heart, our youthful admiration and respect for the talented and accomplished gentleman ripened into veneration for the cheerful, trusting, gentle Christian. The deceased was a native of Cynthiana, Kentucky; graduated with honor both the academic and law departments of Transylvania University. By preference of his class he was selected as valedictorian on the occasion of his graduation, and was offered the chair of languages immediately afterward, but, preferring the profession for which he had prepared himself, he returned to his native village, where he commenced his professional career. Subsequently, representative in State and national legislatures, and constitutional conventions, there was ever recognized by observers, an incorruptible integrity and unfaltering fidelity to principle and the interests of his constituents. Perhaps the greatest material service during his residence in our State was as the prime mover in the Vicksburg and Shreveport railroad, for which he was instrumental in securing the charter, and was elected the first president of the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Texas Railroad Company. In this enterprise he became associated with the late lamented Dr. C. G. Young, whom he found a gentleman with traits of character much resembling his own, and a congenial associate in enterprise.

Colonel Coleman in his manners was courteous, genial, winning, frank and firm in maintaining and defending his views of right; but the grace of elegant and refined manners, the dignity which attaches to a life of unimpeachable rectitude as a public servant, and the evenly-balanced and beautifully harmonized attributes of character, which invested him with great personal magnetism, were all eclipsed by the beautiful Christian faith which, like the rays of a declining sun upon a cloudless horizon, tinges all with the hue of its golden baptism. He has seen a large family of brothers and sisters, all except one (Colonel Lloyd R. Coleman, of our city, referred to above,) pass beyond the vale, has buried several of his own children, lost two sons in the late war, and participated very largely in the misfortunes and disasters of his State in common with his fellow-citizens, but these only seemed to chasten and sweeten his spirit. In the last few months it was our privilege to visit him repeatedly. His conversation was "with grace, seasoned as with salt." The Presbyterian Church, of which he was a member, and the relatives have our sincerest sympathies.

Death of Rev. Dr. J. Spangler.

The painful intelligence contained in the following note from Rev. F. Mangum reached us just after our last issue had gone to press:

MR. EDITOR: I write you a line to inform you, and the church through your columns, that our esteemed and worthy brother, Dr. J. Spangler, a member of the Alabama Conference, died very suddenly, at one o'clock A. M., on the twenty-fourth of this month. His remains were decently buried in the city cemetery at this place, in the lot or inclosure of Rev. J. C. Smith.

Four of his children are here in an entirely destitute condition. Temporary homes have been provided for them, and they will be cared for until their relatives can make suitable arrangements for them.

Yours truly, T. F. MANGUM.
TUSKEGEE, ALA., April 27, 1874.

CORRESPONDENTS must have patience. Their communications will appear—some of them—but the next three or four issues will be filled almost entirely with General Conference matter.

THE subscriptions for those impoverished by the flood in Louisiana amount to date (May 5) to $80,637. Of this sum more than $30,000 was contributed by Bostonians.

THE communication from Thibodaux, signed "M," giving an account of the suffering in that part of our desolated country, will be read with much interest.

THE news from the General Conference up to the time of going to press is very meager. It is found in the telegraphic columns of the first page.

The Bible in My Trunk.

The conversation at the tea-table turned upon the propriety of praying before other persons, and some contended it was pharisaical to kneel down and say your prayers while others were in the room. A minister, who was present, related the following anecdote:

"When I was a young man," said he, "I was a clerk at Boston. Two of my roommates at my boarding-house were also clerks, about my own age, which was eighteen. The first Sabbath morning, during the three or four hours that elapsed from getting up to bell-ringing for church, I felt a secret desire to get a Bible which my mother had given me out of my trunk, and read in it; but I was afraid to do so before my messmates, who were reading miscellaneous books. At last my conscience got the mastery, and I rose up and went to my trunk. I had half raised it, when the thought occurred to me that it might look like over-sanctity and pharisaical, so I shut my trunk and returned to the window. For twenty minutes I was miserably at ease; I felt I was doing wrong. I started a second time for my trunk, and had my hand on my little Bible, when the fear of being laughed at conquered the better emotion, and I again dropped the top of the trunk. As I turned away from it one of my roommates, who observed my irresolute movements, said laughingly:

"'I say, what's the matter? You seem as restless as a weathercock!'

"I replied by laughing in my turn; and then conceiving the truth to be the best, frankly told them what was the matter. To my surprise and delight they both spoke up, and averred that they had Bibles in their trunks, and both had been secretly wishing to read in them, but were afraid to take them out, lest I should laugh at them. 'Then,' said I, 'let us agree to read them every Sabbath, and we shall have the laugh on our side.'

"To this there was a hearty response, and the next moment the three Bibles were out; and I assure you we felt happier all that day, for reading in them in the morning.

"The following Sabbath, about ten o'clock, while we were reading our chapters, two of our fellow-boarders from another room came in. When they saw how we were engaged they stared, and then exclaimed:

"'What is all this? A conventicle!'

"In reply I stated exactly how the matter stood—my struggle to get my Bible from my trunk, and how we three, having found we had all been afraid of each other without cause, had now agreed to read every Sabbath. 'Not a bad idea,' answered one of them. 'You have more courage than I have. I have a Bible too, but have not looked into it since I have been in Boston. But I will read it after this, since you've broken the ice.'

"The other then asked one of us to read aloud, and both sat and listened quietly till the bell rang out for church.

"That evening we three in the same room agreed to have a chapter read every night by one or the other of us at nine o'clock; and we religiously adhered to our purpose.

"A few evenings after this resolution, four or five of the boarders (for there were sixteen clerks boarding in the house) happened to be in our room talking when the nine o'clock bell rang. One of my roommates, looking at me, opened the Bible. The others looked inquiringly. I then explained our custom.

"'We'll all stay and listen,' they said, almost unanimously.

"The result was that, without an exception, every one of the sixteen clerks spent his Sabbath morning in reading the Bible; and the moral effect upon our household was of the highest character. I relate this incident," continued the minister, "to show what one person, even a youth, may exert for good or evil. No man should ever be afraid to do his duty. A hundred hearts may throb to act right that only await a leader. I forgot to add that we were all called the 'Bible Clerks.' All these youths are now useful and Christian men, and more than one is laboring in the ministry."—Church and State.

Death of Dr. Carlton.

We are sorry to hear of the death of the Rev. Thomas Carlton, D. D., the former able agent of the Book Concern in New York. This sad and unexpected event took place in Elizabeth, New Jersey, April 17. Dr. Carlton was a man of great financial ability and incorruptible integrity. The Western Christian Advocate says truly: "Dr. Carlton was one of the ablest financiers that ever gave his services to the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was generous and magnanimous to a fault. Through all the troubles connected with the Book Concern during the last quadrennium, and during the session of the last General Conference, while the subject was under consideration, he bore himself with a manly dignity and a quietness which, to most men, would have been impossible. To his widow, and to the other members of the family, all of whom we are happy to number among our personal friends, we extend our sincere sympathies in this great affliction." And so do we. Such a man was an honor to our common Methodism. We have seen no particulars of his death, but the Western Christian Advocate says: "On the Saturday previous to his decease he was attending to his duties as city treasurer. On Sunday he was taken ill, and for much of the time thereafter until his death he remained unconscious. His principal complaint is said to have been Bright's disease of the kidneys.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

MR. TALMAGE, in his Christian at Work, cannot approve of cremation, preferring to adhere "to the mode that was observed when the bones of Moses were deposited in Shechem." This remark will do to be quoted in the same paragraph with that of the New York Herald concerning Judas as the man who "after the cock crew thrice went out and hanged himself." Also with that of Mr. Edward King in his article in the May Scribner, about Jacob's "wrestling with the angel of prayer."

WE ARE too apt to think of how much Christ loved us when he was in the Garden of Gethsemane, and how much he will love us when we shall be received into his arms, but not enough of the love he has for us now. Christ loves us as much to-day as he ever did or ever will.—C. M. Morton.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, HAS discovered in one of our common pasture-weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,

FROM

The Worst Scrofula Down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder-humor.) He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind o Pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of boils.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst Canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all Humor in the Eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the Ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running Ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the Skin.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of Rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure Salt Rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of Scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

ROXBURY, MASS.

DEAR MADAM: The reputation of the Medical Discovery in curing all kinds of Humors is so well established, by the unanimous voice of all who have ever used it, that I need not say anything on the subject, as the most skillful physicians and the most careful druggists in the country are unanimous in its praise.

In presenting the Medical Discovery to your notice, I do it with a full knowledge of its curative power in relieving all, and curing most of those diseases to which you are unfortunately so liable. That most excruciating disease to an affectionate mother,

Nursing Sore Mouth,

is cured as if by a miracle. Your own temper is restored to its natural sweetness, and your babe from short and fretful naps to calm and sweet slumbers; and the Medical Discovery becomes a fountain of blessing to your husband and household. In the more advanced stages of

Canker

it extends to the stomach, causing

Dyspepsia,

which is nothing but canker in the stomach; then to the intestines and

Kidneys,

creating a sinking, gone feeling, and an indifference even to the cares of your family. Your stomach is your food distresses you, and you can only take certain kinds, and even of that your system does not get half the nourishment it contains, as the acrimonious fluid of the canker eats it up; then your complexion loses its bloom and becomes sallow or greenish, and your best day is gone. For want of nourishment your system becomes loose and flabby, and the fibers of your body become relaxed. Then follow a train of diseases which the Medical Discovery is peculiarly adapted to

Raw and Inflamed,

Cure:

Palpitation of the heart, pain in the side, weakness of the spine and small of the back, pain of the hip-joint when you retire, irregularity of the bowels, and also that most excruciating of diseases,

The Piles.

How many thousands of poor women are suffering from this disease and pining away a miserable life, and their next-door neighbor does not know the cause. I wish to impress on your mind that good old proverb: "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." In you have both the preventive and the cure, with this great and good quality: that it will never, under any circumstances, do you any injury.

No change of diet is ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one tablespoonful per day; children over ten years, dessertspoonful; children from five to eight years, teaspoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day. Yours truly,

DONALD KENNEDY.

They act very mildly, yet thoroughly restore the functional action of the Digestive Organs and the Intestines, and renovate the whole system, imparting a good appetite and healthy assimilation of food. The Child's Corner.

AN EASY RIDDLE FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

I'm in "bread and cheese and kisses,"
I'm in old ladies and young misses,
I'm in apples, peaches, pears and grapes,
I'm in bonnets, dresses, gloves and capes.
Now riddle me, riddle me right,
And see how plainly I'm in sight.

II.

If I should tell you I'm in a house,
And at the same time I'm in a mouse,
Wouldn't you stare?
If I should say I'm part of a hen,
And at the same time part of your pen,
Do you suppose you'd care?
I am in a house, in mouse, in hen, in pen,
I'm in a kennel, and I'm in a den,
I'm in fresh-water lake, and salt-water sea;
Riddle this right and you'll find me.

III.

Heigh-ho! Find me there;
Find me here, everywhere;
In your head, your eye, your ear;
In your smile and in your tear;
In your fingers, in your toes;
In your blessings, in your woes.
Riddle me now and see how true
Are the words I have spoken to you.

Greta and Her Ten Servants.

There was once a little girl who sat alone in a cold, dark garret and wept. She had neither father nor mother; she was poor and forsaken. But the sun, which was then setting, peeped forth from a cloud and spread a crimson light in the little attic. The door opened softly, and a little, bent old woman stuck in her head.

"Come in, aunty," said the little girl pleasantly.

"I am tired; may I sit on your little stool?" asked the old woman. "Will you give me something to drink, for I am so thirsty?"

The child took her little bowl of milk and gave it to the old woman. That was to have been her evening meal; but she was such a good little girl. When the old woman had drank the milk she seemed to become more beautiful and friendly; the sun shone on her silver hair and made her cheeks red. She sang softly to herself:

"But I would like to know Why you weep, little Greta!"

"Why," said the little girl, "I am so lonesome and have no one to play with. The watch-dog is so old and sensible, and the hens have their chickens to attend to. Nobody teaches me anything; I can do nothing for uncle's comfort; he goes to the ale-house, and when he comes home I am afraid of him; I may well weep. Often I am hungry. I am poor and have nothing."

"You have much that you are not aware of," said the old woman. "Will you believe my words? You have ten servants."

Greta made big eyes. She looked around her.

"See here!" said the old woman, taking her hand and pointing to the little fingers. "They are called Tummetott, Slickepott, Langeman, Gullebrand and Lillepyt. Have you heard anything new?"

Greta looked at her hand, and—was she dazzled by the sunlight, or how was it? It seemed to her that every one of her fingers was a little person with a little face. Tummetott was short and thick, looking meditative and wise; his neighbor had a pert and conspicuous appearance; and solemn Langeman was adorned by the old woman with a little silver helmet, and Gullebrand at his side was allowed to wear a little gold ring as a belt around the waist, and a silver shield. Lillepyt looked like a boy, and bowed, laughing.

"Can you say now that you have no servants, skillful and good, if you will only allow them to learn something? Only try."

Greta clapped her hands. The fingers now looked as usual, but the little thimble and sewing-ring still remained. The old woman kissed little Greta and went away.

The little girl ate dry bread and drank water; but when she looked at her hands she laughed at her small servants.

"Now you shall help me make uncle's bed!" cried she gladly, and they all hastened to lift the pillows and turn the coverlid, and Lillepyt did what he could.

That next morning, when Greta awoke, she told Tummetott and all his four companions to come and dress her and comb her hair. They had never done it so well before. Her hair shone like the cat's when he has just washed himself, and her shoe-strings were carefully tied. After she had said her morning prayer she ran out to meet her uncle. It snowed terribly, and the wind rustled the trees so that it looked as if they shook their heads at all who went by.

"Do not go to the village to-day, uncle," said Greta. "Stay at home with me. I have ten little servants who will get dinner for you."

"What is the child talking about?" said Uncle Lars a little testily. But he sat down to split kindling-wood, and then began to work on a fish-net which had long lain in the corner. But Greta ran to the hen and said: "Have you laid any eggs?" And the hen clucked contentedly. There lay a snow-white egg in the nest. Tummetott and Slickepott carried it immediately into the house, broke it into the bowl where the milk had been, and then Greta ran out and commanded her small servants to bind together a little whip. The tiny creatures worked so hard that they became red and warm, and beat the egg to a froth; and then Greta took a little flour and stirred it in, and some milk which she had got at a neighbor's. Ah! now the frying-pan stood on the fire, which blazed merrily; a little bit of butter was dropped in it, so that it sizzled. Yes, Tummetott, Slickepott, Langeman, Gullebrand were all good cooks, and Lillepyt served as scullion. What a hurry they were in! And how much they could do if they only tried!

There stood the dinner-table, spread with a coarse but clean tablecloth, smoking potatoes and a large herring, warm milk and the magnificent pan-cakes. Uncle was astonished at Greta. He ate right heartily, to her great satisfaction, and while she was clearing away the things she tried to think how she should be able to keep him at home, far from the wicked alehouse.

When it grew dark uncle took his cap, and Greta knew where he meant to go. She found his tobacco-pipe, filled it, lighted it, and then asked him coaxingly to stay until he had smoked it. Then she kindled a fire, seated herself on a stool at his feet and began to tell stories. At first he paid no attention; but soon he was amused and forgot himself for awhile in order to listen to the "silly talk." When he again made a motion to go she asked him to crack some nuts which she had got; she took down the old violin from the corner and begged him to play a little. He nnod up, kling! kling! until he himself was in good tune, and Greta saw with wonder how his Langeman and Gullebrand, and all their comrades, leaped about the strings and made such rapid motions to draw forth tunes. Greta herself now began to dance, and kept asking for more music until it became too late.

"It is scarcely worth while to go now," said he, half vexed, and laid down the violin. But it seemed right comfortable for him to sit at home in the quiet cottage when the storm raged outside. Oh, what a hurry the little fingers were now in to get supper ready, fondle her uncle, and make his bed! How glad little Greta was over her conquest and her ten tiny servants.

Greta became large, and her little hands could do more and more. She sewed and knit, she spun and wove so diligently. Such bright-scoured tins had no one else; such a white table and floor were not to be found in any other cottage. Her uncle had long since broken himself from going to the alehouse. He thrived in his neat, cozy house, where the industrious little girl bustled about so gladly.

"How can you keep things so nice, Greta, you who have no servant?" asked a rich peasant's daughter.

"Ah, I have ten!" said Greta roguishly. "They weave and spin, scrub and scour; they are never idle."

By and by a smart young peasant courted Greta, and then Gullebrand had a gold ring to wear. The same day the wedding was to take place the old woman came again, and had with her a thimble and a sewing-ring of purest gold; and, thus equipped, Langeman and Gullebrand moved still more handily. Greta thanked the old woman for her words about the little servants, and showed all the blessings they had brought to the house. She said to all poor little girls that they must not drop their hands, but try to see what they could learn to do. With aspiration in the heart, and the fingers set in motion, blessing is not far off.

Greta became happy and her home comfortable; the ten little servants worked there zealously, and when evening came they clasped each other mutely, and Greta thanked God for being able to work.—From the Swedish of Northern Lights.

Watching.

A general, after gaining a great victory, was encamping with his army for the night. He ordered sentinels to be stationed all around the camp, as usual. One of the sentinels, as he went to his station, grumbled to himself and said: "Why could not the general let us have a quiet night's rest for once, after beating the enemy? I'm sure there is nothing to be afraid of."

The man then went to his station, and stood for some time looking about him. It was a bright summer's night, with a harvest moon; but he could see nothing anywhere, so he said: "I am terribly tired; I shall sleep for just five minutes, out of the moonlight, under the shadow of this tree." So he lay down.

Presently he started up, dreaming that some one had pushed a lantern before his eyes, and he found that the moon was shining brightly down on him through a hole in the branches of the tree above him. The next minute an arrow whizzed past his ear, and the whole field before him seemed alive with soldiers in dark green coats, who sprang up from the ground where they had been silently creeping onward and rushed toward him.

Fortunately the arrow had missed him; so he shouted aloud to give the alarm, and ran back to some other sentinels. The army was thus saved; and the soldier said: "I shall never forget, as long as I live, that when one is at war one must watch."

Our whole life is a war with evil. Just after we have conquered it it sometimes attacks us when we least expect it. For example, when we have resisted the temptation to be cross and pettish or disobedient, sometimes when we are thinking, "How good we have been!" comes another sudden temptation, and we are not on our guard and do not resist it. Jesus says to us: "Watch and pray, that you enter not into temptation."—Parables for Children.

A CHILD KNOWN BY HIS DOINGS. Solomon said, many centuries ago, that even a child is known by his doings—whether his work be pure and whether it be right. Therefore, when you see a boy slow to go to school, indifferent about learning and seeking every opportunity to neglect lessons, you may take it for granted that he will be a blockhead.

When you see a boy anxious to spend money, and who spends every cent as soon as he gets it, you may know that he will be a spendthrift.

When you see a boy hoarding up his pennies, and unwilling to part with them for any good purpose, you may set it down that he will be a miser.

A FRIEND of the writer, just dead, would never tolerate evil speaking in his presence, always saying: "Don't take the judge's chair." Another, when evil is spoken against another, says: "Go on; I am ready to hear; only remember I shall go at once to the person and tell him all you say of him." Another used to exclaim: "Stop the trial till we send for the accused, and hear what he has to say for himself."—Newman Hall.

Polled or Hornless Cattle.

The following on the no-horned cattle, in the Country Gentleman, from the pen of Mr. A. B. Allen, of this city, will be interesting to many who have a penchant for this breed of cattle:

"From childhood up these gentle domestic animals have been great favorites with me, and I have often wondered why they should not also be the same with all lovers of choice, useful cattle, especially when we find them so kind and peaceable in disposition, so quiet and safe to handle, so hardy and thrifty, and, finally, so profitable to breed and rear. It seems surprising, when we seriously reflect upon this subject, that horned cattle should have been almost universally preferred to the polled by the stock-raisers of America. It is not so in Europe, but in many districts there quite the reverse. There is a prejudice in this thing among our countrymen which to me is unaccountable. I trust, however, that their good sense, and, above all, their best interests, will ultimately get the better of this, and that in a few years hence polled cattle may largely prevail among us over the horned.

"Polled, or what are provincially called muley, dodded, humbled and no-horned cattle, were early imported into North America, but, unfortunately, so far as I can ascertain, have never been kept distinct in any considerable numbers, except among the Scotch settlers of Upper Canada. They are consequently now found promiscuously mixed up with their horned congeners over the whole country, and, like them, are of all sizes, shapes and colors. As a general rule, those of the smaller size will pick up a living along the roadside, and on poverty pasture, where an ordinary horned beast would starve. To this hardy character they add that of quick feeders, and will thrive more rapidly on good feed than horned cattle usually do. The cows often excel in the dairy; the oxen work well when broken to the yoke, and make the choicest of beef when turned off to fatten.

"The best polled cattle I have yet seen in our country were of a bright, Devon-red color, and much like this beautiful race in style and form, though rather more compact and heavier in the body. We recollect them well as long ago as the year 1825, grazing within a radius of twenty miles or more around the city of New York. Soon after this their owner commenced crossing them with short-horned bulls of a milking family, imported by the late Mr. Charles Henry Hall, of Harlem, and others. This cross rapidly changed in color from pure red to red and white, a rich strawberry roan, and occasionally almost entirely white, with a slight flecking of red. They grew up to nearly the size of moderate short-horns, matured early, and were almost universally good milkers, and more easily and quickly fattened when dried off and fed for the butcher. If we had the sagacity to keep up this cross-breed we had accidentally made, and exhibited them for prizes as a distinct class (for example, as the Ayrshire are,) at our cattle shows and fairs, and made their great merits known to the public of the agricultural press, as the English would have done, we should ere this have possessed a well-established combined dairy and beef race of cattle which no other save the pure short-horn could have excelled. I can also say the same—excepting horns—of the cross made with short-horns on the large black and white Dutch dairy cows, imported many years since into the neighborhood of New York city."—New York Observer.

DESTROYING THE CANKER-WORM. Mr. Pratt, superintendent of the public grounds at Concord, Massachusetts, has for the past three years had charge of the noble elms which line the streets of the ancient and historic town. He has experimented carefully with printers' ink, by applying it in various ways to the fruit-trees, sometimes directly to the bark, then by daubing tarred or brown paper and winding that around close to the ground. He has found it completely effectual, and has had best success by merely smoothing the rough bark slightly with a drawing-shave, and then spreading the ink directly upon the shaved surface.

It does not injure the tree, and is not only much faster put on, but more efficacious even than the use of the tarred or sheathing paper, for there is then left no hiding-place for the moth.

The slightest contact with the ink is death to the insect.

After using the ink upon all trees, large and small, elm and apple, without any paper, and for a period of three years, he sees no injurious effect on any tree.—Horticulturist.

CREAM PIE.—Cover the pie-tin with a good crust, but not too rich; then fill with sweet cream; sprinkle generously with flour and sugar; cover with crust; bake quickly, and you have a pie fit for a king. To be eaten when cold.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION is very strongly recommended by the medical faculty, and is largely prescribed among their female patients. It is worthy of all confidence, as may be seen from the following testimonial:

ATLANTA, ILL., July 14, 1873.

DR. R. V. PIERCE, BUFFALO, N. Y.—Dear Sir: I have not words to express my gratitude to you for your advice and assistance in my case. There is not one who has used your medicines since they have been brought here but can say, with me, that they have been greatly benefited. Since I have been so helped by its use, six or seven around me left off all doctors and other medicines, and now use it in their families, after being cured of the same disease as mine. You do not know what a wonder it created in our city by its restoring my sister, which I wrote you about, for she had been under the care of three of our best doctors, but could not sit up but for a few minutes at one time. I begged of her to try your medicines, and before she had used half of the bottles she could go all around the yard, and has now just come home from a visit five miles away.

TO THE SUFFERERS
WITH RHEUMATISM.

In view of the numberless sufferers afflicted with this painful malady, I feel indebted to offer to the public my "ANTI-RHEUMATIC MIXTURE," which medicine proves to be the only successful remedy in this line, for it always gives instant relief, and in most cases cures permanently.

During the last fifteen years I have cured thousands of people, in this State and city, of this dreadful disease, with this medicine; and, what astonishes most the patient recovered by the use of a single bottle of it. This medicine cures nothing but rheumatism, and should the patient not recover by using the first bottle of it, that patient is not afflicted with Rheumatism at all. This being the first time of making my discovery known to the public after fifteen years of most successful results, I hope the sufferers will take advantage of this rare remedy, and by doing so add their names to the thousands already cured by it.

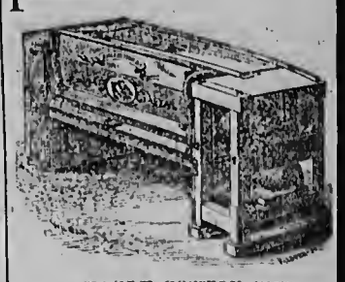
IMPROVED


EAGLE COTTON GINS.
The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans, and has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinders of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other cotton gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, as they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gin of other makers, who use only a ten-inch cylinder, and the same great advantage of the two-cornered cylinder in larger-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on hand in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Parties should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

THE CONVERSATION FAN.

THE LAST AND MOST ABSORBING SENSATION OF THE DAY IS, TO USE A THEATRICAL phrase, "a great take." Everybody, to be en regle for the season, and to avoid the proscription of imperious fashion, must have A CONVERSATION FAN.

No family circle is complete in social diversions and entertainments without one, and in order to enjoy the pastime it should be distinctly understood that the answers do not numerically follow the questions, but to spice the amusement an answer must be looked for that will afford a fitting response to an interrogatory.

Where a direct answer is not to be found to a direct question, it will be discovered that it furnishes the sequel to a sustained conversation, so that couples can carry on a tete-a-tete, which they may not wish to make audible, by silent indications of numbers.

THE CONVERSATION FAN

is an infallible remedy against dullness, breaking the spell of silence by a suggestive inquiry, furnishing congenial pleasures for an evening's entertainment, and opening up a novel and ingenious method of whiling away agreeable hours at home, in the promenade, at a party or private gathering.

ONLY TEN CENTS A FAN.

To be had at Harp's, Gresham's, Ellis & Bro.'s, Haley's, Kain & Co.'s, and all the Book Stores in the city, and at Piffet's, and issued by

On Saturday the market opened with nothing in the dispatches from Liverpool or New York to stimulate the demand. There was, nevertheless, a moderate inquiry, but mostly at prices ⅛@⅜c. under previous rates, while factors were unwilling to submit to any further decline in the medium grades, and evinced unabated firmness with regard to the better quantities, which continued scarce. Under these circumstances the only sale reported during the morning was 100 bales mixed cottons, at about previous rates, after which we noted further sales of 185, 105, 260 and 25 bales, making the trifling total of about 700 bales. The sales of good ordinary to low middling were reported to be at easier prices, without any quotable variation. A small lot of Liverpool middling sold at 17⅜c. On Monday the telegrams from New York and Liverpool not being of a tenor to stimulate the demand, and foreign exchange opening at a decline of 1-10 ₱ cent., we did not hear of a sale up to 12.30 P. M. There was, however, some inquiry, and brokers had made offers at easier rates, which they hoped would be accepted later in the day. The bulk of the business, which summed up 1,850 bales, was at prices which did not warrant any reduction in quotations, but with regard to barely good ordinary and the lower grades they met with more than usual neglect, and had such descriptions been pressed upon buyers they could hardly have been moved unless at a decline. On Tuesday factors evinced a disposition to meet the demand more freely, which imparted additional animation to the movement, and 3,250 bales changed hands at irregular and easier prices, requiring a reduction of our quotations to the extent noted in our remarks above.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 5,600 bales, against 14,560 for the corresponding time last week and 10,250 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile Florida and Texas, are 1,139,650 bales, against 1,135,167 bales to the same date last year, and the increase in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 308,210 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 93,107 to Great Britain, of 108,925 to France and of 128,743 to other foreign ports. News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

LITTLE ROCK, May 6.—The two missing judges, Bennott and Searle, escaped from their captors in Saline county last night, and arrived in the city to-day under a Federal escort, which went out last night and again this morning to look for them.

The judges of the Supreme Court (McClure, Stephenson and Searle) held a meeting to-day to hear the application for a mandamus to compel the State treasurer to honor the drafts of Joseph Brooks on the treasury as Governor. The matter was taken under advisement until ten o'clock to-morrow. The session was held at the State House. The constitution requires a full bench to do business. No lawyers were in attendance except those inside Brooks' line.

Baxter received one company of reinforcements to-night.

Matters are becoming more critical and complicated every day. The State House party have been engaged to-day in throwing up earthworks in the rear of the Benjamin block, just opposite to the State House. The same strictness as last night is observed in both camps.

To-night double sentinels surround the State House and the Anthony House, and it is with some difficulty that citizens can pass.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 6.—The municipal election to-day was one of the most hotly contested ever held in this city, and the vote was the heaviest ever polled, resulting in a victory for the Democrats and temperance party.

The Democrats elected nine out of thirteen councilmen, the council standing Democrats sixteen, and Republicans ten. The Democratic candidate for mayor was also elected.

This is the first time in eighteen years that this city has been under Democratic control. The temperance ticket was elected at Jeffersonville, Peru, Muncey, Waterloo, Anderson, Wabash, New Albany, Franklin, Angola, Madison and Crawfordsville.

JEFFERSON, TEXAS, May 7.—The Southern Baptist Convention organized to-day; about three hundred delegates present.

James P. Boyce, D. D., of Louisville, presided; Drs. Burrows, of Richmond, Jones, of Nashville, Crane, of Texas, Devatie, of Georgia, are the vice presidents; Messrs. Tuggle and McCall the secretaries.

PHILADELPHIA, May 7.—The contributions to the Louisiana sufferers reach a total of over $18,000.

LITTLE ROCK, May 7.—The Supreme judges, after marvelous adventures, came upon a squad of United States infantry under Lieutenant Morrison, who had been sent out to effect their rescue, if possible. Not recognizing the men, Bennett jumped from his horse and broke for the woods, and could not be found. After their true character was ascertained Searle and Sunmerhill were taken to the United States garrison and afterward to the State House. In about an hour Bennett was brought in by another squad of soldiers, who had been sent out to search for him.

CINCINNATI, May 8.—The committee appointed to arrange for the decoration of the soldiers' graves commenced work to-day. They have invited the friends of the Confederate soldiers buried at Spring Grove to decorate the graves of the latter.

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The court of inquiry have acquitted General O. O. Howard.

MOBILE, May 9.—The Mobile Fair Association closed its first exhibition to-day. It is admitted by all to have been creditable to the taste and liberality of the people and managers. During the five days, it is estimated, over thirty-five thousand people visited the grounds.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—At a very late hour last night a plan of adjustment for the serious troubles in Arkansas was telegraphed from this city to both the disputants for the office of Governor of that State. Their representatives and attorneys had been in session all day yesterday, and were also with the Attorney General, at his private residence, up to midnight last night discussing some method which would receive the approval of the general government.

It has now been agreed that both parties call a session of the Legislature to meet at Little Rock on the fourth Monday in May; each to make a special call; no opposition to be made by either party, and the Legislature to receive the claims of Brooks in opposition to Baxter; both parties to have a full hearing, and the Legislature to determine who received a majority in 1872. Both Governors are to disarm, with the exception of a body guard, and to abstain from all warlike movements and from all interference with each other or their adherents.

The Attorney General dispatched to both parties the telegram, of which the above is the substance, saying it was submitted for the approval of the contestants, and expressing the hope that it would settle the questions at issue.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The Star says that a dispatch has been received from Brooks in response to the telegram sent last night. Brooks declines to accede to the terms proposed.

The telegram was the subject of some discussion at the cabinet meeting to-day, and it may be that the President will feel called upon to decide definitely some time to-day in the contest.

The refusal of Brooks to accede to the request made by the President in the interests of peace will very likely lessen the communication with that party, and it appears very probable that the next advices from here may be sent to the United States forces at Little Rock, containing the decision of the government, and asking that all parties shall be made to respect it.

LITTLE ROCK, May 12.—Brooks still occupies the State House and surroundings. Whether he intends to vacate or not, under the President's instructions, is not known.

Both houses of the Legislature met this morning at the Ditter building. There were eleven senators and forty representatives present, lacking three of a quorum—one in the Senate and two in the House. It is generally conceded that there will be a quorum in both houses to-morrow.

The Baxter men are jubilant at the idea of Brooks having to vacate the State House.

The regulars yesterday took all the arms at the arsenal to pieces to prevent either Brooks' or Baxter's people from using them.

The clerk of the Circuit Court swore in the members of the Legislature.

FOREIGN.

MADRID, May 6.—During the bombardment of Bilboa by the Carlists one hundred and fifty citizens were killed and wounded by shells which fell in the city.

Serrano arrived here to-day. He was enthusiastically received. The streets and houses were decorated.

The government army is marching on Durango. Gen. Concha, with his command, was to leave Bilboa to-day. Bodies of Carlists are reported at Amescon and Estella.

LONDON, May 6.—The American Oriental Topographical corps, now in the Holy Land, have reached Jerusalem, after making several successful explorations in the vicinity of Mount Sinai. They report, as a remarkable fact, that they were detained by a heavy snow-storm, during two days, near the mount. The expedition will leave soon for Bashan and Moab.

MADRID, May 8.—The Republican troops have come up with a body of Carlists, under command of Don Alfonso, and defeated them with heavy loss.

LONDON, May 12.—A special dispatch from St. Petersburg to the Pall Mall Gazette says that the Grand Duke Nicholas, brother of the Czar, has been arrested, but on what charge is not known. His house was searched by the police. There is great excitement in St. Petersburg in consequence.

A Disease-Destroying Tree.

The following paragraph appeared lately in the Medical Times and Gazette, and has been copied into some of the daily newspapers:

"M. Gimbert, who has been long engaged in collecting evidence concerning the Australian tree, Eucalyptus globulus, the growth of which is surprisingly rapid, attaining, besides, gigantic dimensions, has addressed an interesting communication to the Academy of Sciences. This plant, it now appears, possesses an extraordinary power of destroying miasmatic influence in fever-stricken districts. It has the singular property of absorbing ten times its weight of water from the soil, and of emitting antiseptic camphorous effluvia. When sown in marshy ground it will dry it up in a very short time. The English were the first to try it at the Cape, and within two or three years they completely changed the climatic condition of the unhealthy parts of the colony. A few years later its plantation was undertaken on a large scale in various parts of Algeria. At Pardock, twenty miles from Algiers, a farm situated on the banks of the Hamyze was noted for its extremely pestilential air. In the spring of 1867 about thirteen thousand of the eucalyptus were planted there. In July of the same year—the time when the fever season used to set in—not a single case occurred; yet the trees were not more than nine feet high. Since then complete immunity from fever has been maintained. In the neighborhood of Constantine the farm of Ben Machydin was equally in bad repute. It was covered with marshes, both in winter and summer. In five years the whole ground was dried up by fourteen thousand of these trees, and farmers and children enjoy excellent health. At the factory of the Gue de Constantine in three years a plantation of eucalyptus has transformed twelve acres of marshy soil into a magnificent park, whence fever has completely disappeared. In the Island of Cuba this and all other paludal diseases are fast disappearing from all the unhealthy districts where this tree has been introduced. A station-house at one of the ends of a railway viaduct in the department of the Var was so pestilential that the officials could not be kept there longer than a year. Forty of these trees were planted, and it is now as healthy as any other place on the line. We have no information us to whether this beneficent tree will grow in other than hot climates. We hope that experiments will be made to determine this point. It would be a good thing to introduce it on the west coast of Africa."

The statement so given appears to require some modification. When mentioning that the tree in question has "the singular property of absorbing ten times its weight of water from the soil," we should have been told the length of time taken to perform the operation—a day, a week, or how long. All trees whatsoever absorb moisture from the soil, equal to their own weight in a certain period of time, some more than others, and the Eucalyptus globulus may in this respect only offer a more than usually favorable specimen. We wish the account given had been more precise, and, for practical purposes, more trustworthy. All trees not only absorb moisture from the ground, but are useful in drying up marshy places by means of exhalation. The fir tribe, being evergreen, are for the purpose invaluable. Exhaling from all points, they send off moisture into the atmosphere, where it is dispersed by winds, and which, when condensed by cold, falls down as rain. Hence plantations of firs not only dry the land, but beneficially water it; the two phenomena united being productive, less or more, of improved sanitary conditions. We shall be glad to hear on good authority that the Eucalyptus globulus, if planted in this country, will realize all that is said of its superior properties.—Chambers' Journal.

Books and Periodicals.

FROM the Southwestern Book and Publishing Company, St. Louis, Missouri, we have received the Southern Review, published under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and edited by that thorough and ripe scholar, the Rev. A. T. Bledsoe, LL. D. The work contains nine chapters, all full of richest thought and exhaustive information. The fourth chapter treats on "History of Infant Baptism." Armed with the facts elucidated in this chapter, we are amply prepared to discomfit all immersionists with their sophisms.

URIEL, OR SOME OCCASIONAL DISCOURSES. By Joseph A. Seiss, D. D.

In the discourse on "The Day of the Lord" occurs this eloquent passage: "That hour—the last—will be an hour of the night, both literally and figuratively. Night is the time when thieves work; and the statement is that he will come as a thief in the night. When the enembodied Word of God, at the beginning, first came into our world it was night, for darkness was upon the face of the deep; and that Word was, Let there be light, and there was light. When that same Word became incarnate, and was born into the world as a man, it was in the night—while shepherds were keeping watch over their flock by night. And so his coming in the great day shall also be in the night."

WHAT IS DARWINISM? By Charles Hodge.

We have perused this work with great pleasure, and quote one of the erudite author's closing remarks: "What is Darwinism? It is atheism. This does not mean that Mr. Darwin himself and all who adopt his views are atheists, but it means that his theory is atheistic—that the exclusion of design from nature is tantamount to atheism." We want all our friends to buy and read this book. Price, $1.50.

She says: "Invite half a dozen girls and boys to your house when your pa and ma are away; put a half dollar silver piece in a dish with molasses an inch deep in it, and offer it to the boy who gets it with his mouth. The more the boys who try to get it, the more fun there will be." That girl deserves a diploma.

Reports of Committees.

REPORT NO. I OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

After having carefully considered sundry memorials from the Kentucky, Mississippi and other Conferences, requesting that District Conferences be authorized to examine and correct annually the records of Quarterly Conferences, and inspect church registers, your committee recommend the following, viz.:

"That the recording stewards be required to send their records of Quarterly Conferences to the District Conferences annually for inspection; provided the Annual Conference shall so direct." And that this be placed in the Discipline, on page 53, under question 4, after paragraph 8.

Your committee also recommend that the following be inserted on page 49, just before paragraph 6:

"To appoint committees to examine Quarterly Conference records, when so directed by the Annual Conference."

Your committee have also considered a memorial, from the St. Charles District Conference of the Missouri Conference, asking that secretaries of District Conferences be allowed to hold office for the period of four years, and that each be ex-officio a member of his Conference during his term of office; and recommend that you do not concur.

Having likewise considered the resolution of the Holston Conference, instructing the delegates of said Conference to urge the General Conference to insert in the Discipline the "boundaries of the several Annual Conferences," your committee recommend that it be done.

A resolution of the Louisiana Conference, referred to your committee, requesting that the General Conference so amend the language of the General Rules of the "United Societies," organized by Mr. Wesley in 1739, on page 26, chapter 1, section 2, as that it shall be stated, in direct terms, that these are the General Rules of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, was duly considered; and we recommend non-concurrence.

A memorial from the West Texas Conference, relating to a change in the office of "baptism of those of riper years," requesting that the word may be put instead of "shall," on page 201, section 3, chapter 13, so that the parenthesis shall read ("or if he shall deserve it may immerse him in water,") has been carefully considered, and your committee recommend non-concurrence therewith.

Also a memorial from Cibolo circuit, West Texas Conference, asking that the minimum number of trustees be three instead of "five," has been considered, and we recommend that the language of the Discipline be so changed, on page 102, chapter 3, section 16, answer 3 to question 2, that it be made to read, "otherwise seven, five or three." Paragraph as amended: "3. Let nine trustees be appointed for holding church property, when proper persons can be procured; otherwise seven, five or three, who shall elect their own chairman, secretary and treasurer."

A paper from the North Georgia Conference, requesting that the following action of the General Conference of 1870 be put into the Discipline, viz., "that each Annual Conference elect a corresponding secretary to represent the Sunday school interests of that Conference to the Sunday school secretary elected by the General Conference" (Journal, page 216,) has been considered, and your committee recommend that the same be made answer 4, on page 114, chapter and section 5, and that the notation of answer 4 be 5.

Your committee have had under consideration the memorial from the Louisville Conference, asking that statistics necessary to the report in the General Minutes be categorically stated in the Discipline, and recommend non-concurrence. Also a paper from the same Conference asking for the same conditions to obtain in the selection of trustees for school property as exists in relation to church-houses, etc., has been considered, and your committee recommend non-concurrence.

A memorial from the Mississippi Conference, praying this body to restore question 2, section 15, chapter 2, edition of Discipline 1858, has been before us, and we recommend non-concurrence.

Your committee, having duly considered a memorial from the Virginia Conference, asking that the law governing local preachers be amended, recommend the following to be placed in the Discipline, on page 89, as the fifth answer to question 4, viz.: "A preacher receiving a certificate of location or of official standing, and failing to present the same to some Quarterly Conference within the period of six months from the date of said certificate, shall not be recognized as a local preacher in our church, unless he satisfy the Quarterly Conference that the failure was unavoidable."

Your committee had referred to them "preamble and resolutions modifying the office of presiding elder," signed by N. Scarritt and others. This paper is reported back to the General Conference with the recommendation that it be referred to the committee on itinerancy.

Also a resolution signed by M. M. Pugh and N. Scarritt, touching "the trial of a local preacher," which is returned to the Conference with the request that it be referred to the committee on church trials.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN W. HANNER, Chair'n.

Laid on the table under the rule of May 8, 1874.

REPORT NO. I OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOUNDARIES.

Your committee on boundaries would respectfully beg leave to submit the following partial report. Many of the memorials referred to them are yet under advisement, but they have duly considered others, and as the sense of the committee thereon recommend the adoption of the following:

1. That the Territories of Colorado and New Mexico be and they are hereby erected into a separate Conference under the name and style of the "Denver Conference."

2. That the Territory of Montana be and the same is hereby created a separate Conference by the name and style of the "Montana Conference."

3. That so much of the "work" in the States of Texas and Louisiana as is under the supervision of the German ministers of our church be and the same is hereby created a separate Conference, by the name and title of the "German Mission Conference of Texas and Louisiana."

4. That the name of the West St. Louis Conference be and the same is hereby changed to that of the "Southwest Missouri Conference."

5. That the memorial from Oak Bowery, Soule Chapel, Cusseta and Hopewell appointments to be transferred from the North Alabama Conference to the Alabama Conference be not granted.

6. That the thirty-sixth parallel be and the same is hereby established as the boundary line between the Los Angeles and Pacific Conferences.

7. That so much of the Alabama Conference as lies north of the Noxubee and west of the Tombigbee rivers, and embraced in ————, be and the same is hereby added to and made a part of the North Mississippi Conference.

8. That so much of the Little Rock Conference as is embraced in Perry county be and the same is hereby transferred to and made a part of the Arkansas Conference.

9. That the memorial to change the boundary between the Louisville Conference and the Kentucky Conference be not granted.

10. That the memorial of the North Alabama Conference, asking that the name of the Alabama Conference be changed to that of South Alabama Conference, be not granted.

Respectfully submitted.

R. E. ANDERSON, Sec.

LOUISVILLE, May 8, 1874.

Laid on the table under the rule of May 8.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS, NO. 1.

Your committee have as thoroughly as possible considered the exhibit of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South for the four years ending April 30, 1874, by A. H. Redford, agent. Through a sub-committee, and with assistance from Dr. Redford, whose presence was invited, they have carefully examined, item by item, every section of the exhibit; and from information thus obtained, in addition to inquiries made by the committee as a whole, they are fully satisfied that the statement of facts and figures contained in the exhibit, including the estimates of values, is fairly and properly presented, and that the exhibit is correct and trustworthy in every particular.

Your committee have also considered the report of the book committee, expressing full approval of the policy of the agent, and of his able and successful management of the Publishing House, for which that committee state a debt of gratitude is due him from the whole church. Besides, your committee have undoubted evidence that the agent, in the spirit of self-sacrifice, has employed with success not only the resources of the Publishing House, but his private credit and means, to sustain and promote the important interests committed to his care, and so seriously threatened in the midst of the great financial disasters of the country.

Your committee offer the following resolutions for adoption by the General Conference, viz.:

Resolved, That we approve the financial management of the Publishing House by the agent, including herein the erection of a spacious and elegant building in the place of the old structure destroyed by fire, by which the Publishing House has acquired largely increased facilities for its business.

Resolved, That not only are we convinced of the solvency of the Publishing House, but, in view of the stringency of the money market, we are highly gratified with the increase of its receipts and assets, and with the prospect of its ability to meet its liabilities at maturity, thus giving assurance, if our preachers and people will do their duty, of continued and enlarged prosperity in the diffusion of a sound religious literature.

Resolved, That we express to Dr. Redford our grateful acknowledgments for his assumption of personal hazards and risks in carrying on the business of the Publishing House, in addition to the faithful discharge of his official duties as agent.

Respectfully submitted.

W. C. JOHNSON, Chair'n.

Adopted May 8, 1874.

REFERRING to the marriage of the Rev. Olympia Brown, of Bridgeport, to Mr. J. H. Willis, the Independent expresses the hope "that Mr. Willis will prove himself well fitted for the high and responsible calling of a pastor's husband." From inadvertence, however, or some other cause, the Scriptures have remarkably failed to indicate the qualifications of the husband of a minister.

Letter from China.

SHANGHAI, CHINA, March 23, 1874.

MR. EDITOR: I have received communications from many dear friends of Jesus who love his cause, and are doing all they can to promote his glory in Christian and in heathen lands. They write me that many are taking a deeper interest in the cause of our blessed Lord in heathen lands; and especially among the young in Sabbath societies is this manifest. I am rejoiced to know this, and I pray the Lord to pour out upon these youthful missionary societies a double portion of his blessed Spirit. We have in these manifestations a fulfillment of the promise that the Lord will pour out his Spirit upon the old and the young, and all shall give glory to him. O that we could see these youthful missionary societies being multiplied all over our land! They would be a mighty power for good. These societies could support all our schools, and many more beside, and we would never lack for funds to go on with them. These societies, properly organized and conducted, would build all the school-houses and all the churches we should ever want in China. They could support the entire mission work in China, even though it should be increased and enlarged beyond its present dimensions. Why not every church in the South have its "youthful missionary society?" It will greatly benefit the children, and it will stimulate the young and the old to work for Jesus. They will find, by a systematic plan of giving, that they have no difficulty in collecting something for the cause of God among the heathen. Will not our people all try it?

I will quote a few lines from a letter which I received from a very dear friend, who is a devoted servant of the church, a lover of Jesus and a noble helper in his cause:

"I think a great change will be effected in the missionary field by and by; and even now the church is raising more money than formerly, and the spirit of missions is taking a stronger hold of the church. I am very anxious to see the annual collections done away, and the traveling agency of a missionary secretary abolished. Let the Bishops fill that place themselves, and let the several churches organize home missionary societies, incorporating Sunday schools, and then have committees formed to collect monthly subscriptions of ten cents each, or twenty-five cents or more, and we could easily obtain $50,000 annually. Your mission ought to be placed on a higher plane. A Bishop should visit you, and fetch along ten young missionaries, and you ought to be furnished out and out with everything in the way of churches, hooks, means of traveling, and with power to strike for Christ, so that every blow would contain a hundred strokes. I know not where the impediment lies; but it should be removed, and the work made a great and immediate success."

These are burning words of truth, and should be read by every one. I indorse all he has said with all my heart. Cannot this be done? If every church will organize just such a society as is spoken of above, we shall see the money coming from every quarter, and we in China will have more missionary money than we could possibly use, and we would be able to rejoice in the progress of the work in this land. Will all our churches try this plan? I hope they will begin at once, and let us hear from them either by letter or through the papers. Let all their proceedings be published in the papers, and let it be known, that others may be encouraged. Hoping I may hear very soon from others who are interested in the education of the mothers of China and their children, I remain yours in the bonds of Christian love,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

P. S.—Please say in your paper that I received some time since (six or eight months) a communication from a Sunday school missionary society in Woodville, Mississippi, I think, and from one in St. Louis, both of which I answered, and have not since heard from them. They expressed a desire to assist in educating some of these heathen children. I answered the letters of each society. I would like to hear from them. Any one sending school money, if they will forward the United States currency to William Booth, Esq., of San Francisco (I do not know the number of his address,) directing him what to do with it, there will be no doubt about its coming safely to me. Yours, etc., J. W. L.

ON ONE occasion a small laird was waited on by a neighbor to request his name as an accommodation to a bill for twenty pounds at three months, which led to the following characteristic colloquy:

"Na, na, I canna do that."

"Why, for no, laird? Ye hae done the same thing for ithers."

"Ah, Tammas, there's wheels within wheels ye ken naething aboot. I canna do't."

"It's a sma' affair to refuse me, laird."

"Weel, ye see, Tammas, if I was to pit my name till't, ye wad get the siller frae the bank, and when the time cam round ye wad na be ready, and I wad hae to pay't; sae, then, you and me wad quarrel; sae we may just as weel quarrel noo, as lang as the siller's in ma pooch."

THE sunbeam is composed of millions of minute rays; so home-light must be constituted of little tendernesses, kindly looks, sweet laughter, loving words.

PROCEEDINGS

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

—OF—

THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

FIRST DAY.

FRIDAY, May 1, 1874.

The seventh General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South began its session in the Library Hall, Louisville, Kentucky, Friday, May 1, 1874.

All the Bishops were present except Bishop Doggett.

The session was opened by the singing of hymn 888:

"Happy the souls to Jesus joined," which was given out by Bishop Pierce. Bishop Marvin then led in prayer. Bishop Wightman read Psalms xlviii, and Bishop McTyeire Romans xii. Bishop Keener then gave out hymn 625:

"O thou, who camest from above," which was sung by the Conference with great devotion. Jefferson Hamilton then led in prayer.

Bishop Paine, being in the chair, called upon the secretary of the last General Conference to call the list of the Annual Conferences; and vouchers for the delegates elect were furnished.

One hundred and ninety-four delegates being present, responded to their names and took their seats.

On motion of A. L. P. Green Thos. O. Summers, of the Alabama Conference, was chosen secretary, who nominated John S. Martin, of the Baltimore Conference, A. G. Haygood, of the North Georgia Conference, and F. M. Kennedy, of the South Carolina Conference, as assistant secretaries. J. S. Martin declined; the others were elected.

E. W. Sehon, on behalf of the Southern Methodist churches in Louisville, tendered the use of Library Hall to the Conference during the present session. He also stated that postal arrangements and a telegraph office were in the hall, with paper, stationery, and all other conveniences for the Conference; extending to the members a hearty welcome to the hearts and homes of the citizens—all of which was gratefully recognized by the Conference.

On motion of E. W. Sehon the hour of meeting was fixed at nine A. M., and the hour of adjournment at half-past twelve P. M.

On motion of W. M. Leftwich a special committee of three was appointed to report to-morrow on the rules of order. The chair appointed P. A. Peterson, W. M. Leftwich and J. Hamilton on said committee.

On motion of A. L. P. Green the presiding elder and preachers of the Louisville district were appointed a committee on public worship.

On motion of J. Hamilton the following standing committees, to consist of one member from each Annual Conference, each delegation to appoint its own members on said committees, were ordered: 1. On episcopacy. 2. On itinerancy. 3. On books and periodicals. 4. On boundaries. 5. On missions. 6. On revisal. 7. On Sunday schools. 8. On education. 9. On finance.

A motion of N. H. D. Wilson to amend by appointing one clerical and one lay delegate on each committee, and an amendment to the amendment moved by P. A. Peterson to appoint two on each committee, leaving the delegations to make their own selections, whether lay or clerical, were, on motion of A. A. Gilbert, laid on the table.

On motion of the secretary,

Resolved, That a committee on introductions be appointed by the chair, to be constituted of two ministers and one layman, whose duty it shall be to attend to the introduction of visitors to the Conference.

J. A. Duncan, J. E. Evans and S. Bobo were appointed on said committee.

On motion of W. M. Rush the Conference adjourned, with the benediction by the Bishop.

Bishop Paine then came forward and addressed the Conference as follows:

I hold in my hand an important document addressed to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, from the Wesleyan Methodist Conference of Great Britain. I ask the reading of it and the appointment of a special committee to which it may be referred.

It was read, as follows:

13 LEIGH ROAD, HORNSEY PARK, N.
London, April 11, 1874.

The Rev. Dr. Paine, or Senior Bishop in attendance at the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

MY DEAR SIR—I have great pleasure in sending to you the accompanying address of our last Conference.

I hope and pray that your Conference may be distinguished by much of the divine blessing.

I should be glad of a line to assure me of the safe arrival of the address.

With much Christian regard, my dear sir, yours truly,

GERVASE SMITH.

ADDRESS

Of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference of Great Britain to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN—Having learned that your General Conference is to meet before our next [illegible] we have resolved to address you our fraternal greetings.

In so doing we cannot overlook the fact that so many years have elapsed since the commencement of your separate existence as a church without our having sought intercommunion with you. The causes existing at the time from which this arose have now passed away. As to the institution of slavery in general, and in particular as to the forms in which it formerly existed in our own colonies, and in your country, our opinions remain the same as they ever were, and as they have often been deliberately expressed. This fact makes us deeply grateful that at length in your country, as in our own empire, the evil has been entirely, and, as we devoutly trust, finally done away. It is to us a cause of thankfulness that nothing exists to prevent official intercourse between your General Conference and our own. And we pray that both churches and both countries may be firmly united within themselves by concord, and to one another by amity.

We believe that you with us firmly hold the great Christian truths which we have both received in common, and that you are striving to spread living religion among your own people. For ourselves we trust that we have not ceased to "hold fast the form of sound words" which has been handed down to us. In the presence of a subtle skepticism on the one hand, and of an increasingly audacious sacerdotalism on the other, it is our duty, and we trust it is our endeavor, to "earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." Our country is being blessed at this time with unwonted visitations of the divine Spirit; slumbering churches have been aroused; apathy has been rebuked; and we live in expectation of yet better days.

We are thankful to be able to report to you that our own churches are in a state of general tranquillity, and are not without signs of spiritual prosperity. The number of members meeting in class has not increased rapidly during the last few years, and the almost stationary character of the returns has been to us a cause of anxiety.

On the other hand, our congregations and schools have been steadily increasing; the amount of money raised for the purpose of erecting new and more commodious places of worship has been beyond all former precedent; home missions and day school education have also been extended, and the cause of foreign missions receives increasing support. Our three theological colleges are filled with a fairly adequate supply of approved candidates for the ministry; our colleges for the training of schoolmasters and mistresses, and our other connectional educational institutions yield us, upon the whole, great satisfaction. Beyond these islands the work has spread with a rapidity commensurate with the growth of the British colonies. Since we last communicated with you an affiliated Conference has been formed in Australia, which is now carrying forward evangelical work with vigor and success in that continent, and in various groups of islands in Polynesia; a Conference has been formed in France and Switzerland; while by a friendly arrangement, just concluded, the Canada Conference, hitherto affiliated to our own, has become financially and ecclesiastically independent.

For the present we find it best to continue together as one Conference in Great Britain.* The last returns showed that there were (without including Ireland, but including foreign missions) 1,744 ordained ministers and 314 probationers in connection with the British Conference, and 422,171 church members, besides 28,228 on trial for membership. The other Methodist bodies in England are, in proportion to the parent body, much more considerable than is the case in your country. With these, although we do not see our way to organized union, our relations are of an increasingly friendly character; indeed toward all who hold the head of Christ, it is our desire, as we are persuaded it is yours, to manifest always the kind and catholic spirit of primitive Methodism. Our enemies are not our Christian brethren, but sin and the powers of darkness.

And now, beloved and honored brethren, we beg that you will accept this our salutation in the Lord. We pray that the great Master may be present with you throughout the session of your General Conference, that your churches may be blessed with increase of holiness, and enlarged through the conversion of multitudes of sinners; that the children of your people may follow in the steps of their godly fathers; that a succession of faithful men may continue to be raised up among you, who shall not "cease to teach and preach Christ." We shall rejoice to hear of your welfare, and to receive, either by deputation or otherwise, information as to your affairs.

Signed on behalf and by order of the Conference.

GEORGE T. PERKS, Prest.
GERVASE SMITH, Sec.

Dr. Leroy M. Lee moved to refer it to a committee of seven. This motion prevailed, and the following committee was appointed: J. Hamilton, A. M. Shipp, J. C. Wills, Andrew Hunter, L. M. Lee, Truston Polk, James Jackson.

A communication from J. W. Lambuth, missionary to China, was read and referred to the committee on missions.

Dr. Evans offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That a committee on the Bible cause, and one on the subject of temperance, be added to the standing committees of this Conference, to be constituted in the same manner as the other standing committees of the Conference.

J. E. EVANS.
C. P. CRAWFORD.

An invitation was extended to the Conference to visit the Masonic Widows' and Orphans' Homes. On motion of P. A. Peterson, thanks were tendered the directors.

The exhibit of the Publishing House was read, as follows:

EXHIBIT OF THE PUBLISHING HOUSE OF the Methodist Episcopal Church South, for the Four Years ending [illegible]

SOUTHERN METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE,
Nashville, Tenn., May 1, 1874.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

DEAR BRETHREN—During the past four years the business of the Southern Methodist Publishing House has been conducted under difficulties and embarrassments that we had not anticipated when we made our former quadrennial exhibit. The year succeeding the General Conference of 1870 was one of great financial distress throughout the country, checking the prosperity of trade, and proving disastrous to the fortunes of many of the largest commercial houses. The Publishing House, however, passed safely through this crisis, maintaining the high reputation it had acquired in business circles—showing prosperity in every department.

In the midst of a career of usefulness and success, on the night of the fifteenth of February, 1872, the two upper stories of the transverse building which formed the rear of the Publishing House, and also on the same floors that part of the establishment that ran parallel with Bridge street, together with our composing-room, foundery, and several thousand dollars' worth of sheet stock and paper, were consumed by fire, involving a loss of about $25,000.

This fire rendered it necessary for us to vacate the old building, and, not being able to find in the city of Nashville a house of sufficient size to accommodate the several branches of our business, we were compelled to separate the different departments, and rent several houses quite inconvenient to each other, involving, necessarily, very heavy expense, as well as the contraction of the business of the house.

At a meeting of the book committee, on the day following the fire, it was resolved not only to rebuild the burnt portion of the house, but the entire edifice, which was in a dilapidated condition.

In the afternoon of the same day a second meeting was held, at which quite a number of the citizens of Nashville and vicinity were present, and, after a free interchange of opinion, it was determined to take up a subscription among those present for this purpose, when the sum of $11,000 was immediately subscribed.

It was also deemed advisable to make an appeal to the entire church, and request contributions for this purpose, and we have received, from all quarters, the sum of $40,002.01—more than $30,000 of which was given by the citizens of Nashville.

The erection of a new building involved the purchase of three lots of ground, at the expense of $22,000. The shape of the ground owned by the church previous to the fire rendered this purchase absolutely necessary; besides, this purchase would enable us to erect our house so as to have three store-rooms on the first floor, which could be rented for $10,000 per annum, and from which we could, in a few years, not only pay for the ground, but for the improvements placed upon it. The church would thus in a short time be in possession of additional property worth $75,000, from which an annual income of $10,000 would be realized without a dollar of expenditure.

The new building presents a front of one hundred and sixteen feet, running back two hundred and twenty-four feet. It is four stories high in front, with an attic, and seven stories high in the rear. The front is built of stone. The house and grounds we purchased cost us $176,277.81, to which we add $44,319.74, the value of the ground, as estimated in our former exhibit, making $220,597.55.*

We are gratified to be able to state that the erection of the Publishing House was unanimously recommended by the book committee, and also met the approval of the College of Bishops and the several Annual Conferences.

Early in May, 1873, we removed into the new building, where we have facilities not only for carrying on every department of work, but commodious rooms for the Bishops, missionary secretary, and all the officers of the house.

Notwithstanding the difficulties through which we have passed, it affords us pleasure to be able to report that the credit of the house has been sustained, and its capital largely increased during the past four years.

In 1870 we made the following exhibit:

* In our report in July, 1873, we estimated the value of the Publishing House at $214,597.55; since then we have paid additional on it $6,000; making the cost to us $220,597.55. This estimate, however, is far below its actual value. The ground is worth $116,000; add to this the cost of the building, without including the $22,000 paid for the ground we purchased, and it amounts to $270,277.81, which would be a fair estimate. Since the erection of the house the north wall has been thought by some of our friends to be unsafe, and we are now removing it with a view of rebuilding it.

By referring to the several exhibits we have made to the Annual Conferences it will be seen that there has been a regular improvement in the financial condition of the house since the General Conference of 1870.

We reported in our exhibit, after the deduction of all liabilities:

July 1, 1870	$188,352 45
July 1, 1871	216,547 53
July 1, 1872	229,736 78
July 1, 1873	276,117 43
April 1, 1874	314,037 11

This exhibit shows a difference in favor of the house, for the past four years, of $125,684.66.

If we turn back eight years and compare its present assets with the assets we found in 1866, we perceive that the increase during this period amounts to $226,871.41.

It is proper, however, to state that for $40,002.01 of this amount we are indebted to the liberality of the church, and other friends, whose contributions were made for the purpose of rebuilding the house. There have also been paid, since 1870, on debts, etc., due the house previous to 1866, $2,000, but this has been met by old claims that have been presented and allowed by the book committee which had not been previously recognized.

It is proper further to state that the profits arising from the business of the Publishing House were diminished $20,000 by the fire of February, 1872. But for this loss our profits for the past four years would have been this much in addition to what we report, making the whole amount $145,684.66 for the past four years, or $246,871.41 for the entire period of our agency.

NEW ORLEANS DEPOSITORY.

Our Depository in New Orleans has been conducted during the past four years under difficulties that would have resulted in failure on the part of an agent less energetic and vigilant than Rev. R. J. Harp. The troubles of the State of Louisiana, together with the financial embarrassments, which have not only placed all business in New Orleans in jeopardy, but threatened its existence, have not been without their influence on his success.

For full information in reference to this Depository I beg leave to refer you to the report of Rev. R. J. Harp.

It will be seen from the above exhibit that the Publishing House has a capital of $314,037.11 over and above all its liabilities; that it is in debt to the amount of $219,540.81. Of this amount $100,000 is reported as bond account, this amount of bonds having been issued to enable us to carry through the building. These bonds are redeemable in five years from the time they were issued, with the privilege of allowing them to run ten years. The interest on them is fully provided for in the rents of the three store-rooms which belong to the house. The remaining debt of $119,540.81 must be met from the debts now due us, and from the current business of the house. The importance of paying off not only this part of our debt, but also the bonded debt, at as early a day as practicable, must be apparent to every one. The interest we annually pay on our indebtedness would rapidly increase our capital, and enable us to accomplish much good in the cheapening of our literature. With careful and economical management, and with the hearty co-operation of the church, this entire debt can be liquidated within the next four years, without infringing upon the present capital. Should this be accomplished, the great object for which the Publishing House was originally established may be fully met. Instead of increasing its capital further the profits at present arising from the business of the house ought, in our judgment, to be applied exclusively to the cheapening and circulation of the literature of the church. Our present capital, if entirely free from the liabilities of the house, would be fully equal to [illegible]

* By the fire on the fifteenth of February we lost $25,000, only $5,000 of which was protected by insurance, leaving a net loss of $20,000, which, if added to the $13,189.23, shows a profit for the year ending June 30 of $33,189.23. We had insurance on the house to the amount of $65,000, but only $5,000 of which was on the portion that was burned.

PERIODICALS.

The Christian Advocate.—The Christian Advocate has at the present time a subscription list of over eleven thousand. Soon after the General Conference of 1870, entertaining the thought that by enlarging the size of the Christian Advocate, and reducing its price, not only would its circulation be greatly increased, but its expenses be the more easily met, we entered upon the experiment, increasing its size nearly one-half, and reducing its price from $3 to $2. The result has shown the propriety of this step. The circulation has been increased nearly one hundred per cent., and the net profits from the paper during the past four years have amounted to $13,231.32.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL PERIODICALS.

This department of our Sunday school literature, under the supervision of Dr. Haygood, has succeeded beyond the expectations of the church. The following are issued regularly:

1. Sunday School Magazine, circulation [illegible]
2. Lesson Papers, circulation [illegible]
3. Our Little People, circulation [illegible]
4. Sunday School Visitor (weekly,) circulation [illegible]
5. Sunday School Visitor (semi-monthly,) circulation [illegible]
6. Sunday School Visitor (monthly,) circulation [illegible]

It was not expected that this department should yield any pecuniary revenue to the church. The exceedingly low price at which these several periodicals are furnished forbids any profits in this direction. It is gratifying, however, to be able to report that while it yields no income it has not withdrawn anything from the capital of the house, but has fully met its current expenses.

The General Conference of 1870 adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the book agent be instructed to issue, in 1871, a first-class monthly literary magazine, at no more than $4 per annum, to be called the Southern New Monthly Magazine."

Rev. W. P. Harrison, D. D., of the North Georgia Conference, was elected by the General Conference to the editorial management of the magazine. A prospectus was issued, the first number sent out in due time, the support and co-operation of the church not only invited but solicited to aid in its circulation. Notwithstanding the unremitting devotion of the gifted editor to the duties assigned him, it became evident that the church did not desire a magazine of this kind, and would not sustain it. Its publication continued only one year. Near the close of the year the editor tendered his resignation, which was accepted by the book committee; as the losses on it had been so heavy they did not deem it proper to elect any other person to fill the vacancy, and thus the magazine was discontinued.

German Hymn and Tune-Book.

In addition to the books above mentioned, the General Conference authorized "the book agent to publish a hymn and tune-book for the use of our congregations." Many circumstances continued to delay the publication of this work. We are, however, gratified to announce that the duty assigned us has been performed. A hymn and tune-book, meeting fully the resolution of the General Conference, has been prepared, is now in the bindery, and will be ready for delivery within ten days.

Many of our works have been reprinted—some of them having been revised.

It is due both to the book [illegible] and to the Sunday school secretary to state that they were prepared to furnish other books to the church, but our financial condition would not justify it.

The circulation of the publications of the church is a question that very properly comes before the Conference. With a Publishing House prepared to send out a healthy literature, both for adults and children, equal to their wants, it only remains for the church in its highest councils to devise the best means to secure for it a wide circulation. Many brethren are of the opinion that this result can be best accomplished by the establishment of depositories at the most eligible points, thus bringing our books within reach of the people everywhere, while others prefer a system of colportage, and still others think it best to make the supplying of our people with the literature of the church among the duties of the pastor that ought not to be overlooked.

THE PUBLISHING HOUSE.

We have already referred to the size and adaptation of the Publishing House to the uses for which it is designed. It includes, in addition to all that we have mentioned, a sales-room, mailing-room, bindery, press-room, stereotype foundery and composing-room, all of them well furnished.

Besides these we have three large store-rooms, which we rent for the sum of $10,000 per annum.

During the past four years the business shows a considerable increase over the four years preceding. Affected, as we have been, by the financial troubles that have befallen the country from time to time, we have not been without serious apprehensions in reference to the perils that surrounded us. In the erection of our new building we had necessarily incurred a heavy debt. This debt was being rapidly decreased. When the failure of Jay Cooke occurred, last September, bringing down with it the largest commercial houses, immense manufacturing establishments, and the most secure and stable banking institutions, threatening the entire country with bankruptcy and ruin, we trembled for the safety and success of the Publishing House. The church, however, had never failed us. Turning away from every other hope, trusting in God, we appealed to the church through the Annual Conferences, and most nobly did they respond. The proposition to the Conferences that each preacher purchase $100 worth of our publications found an echo in the hearts of brethren everywhere. First submitted to the agent's own Conference (the Louisville,) the proposition was accepted with enthusiasm in each successive Conference, until the whole church became a party to the transaction. Nearly one thousand brethren have come to our relief, while many of them have purchased the amount requested several times over. The result is known. While other institutions have slumbered, and been inactive, during the trying times of the past eight months, the Publishing House, in every department, has shown an activity and enterprise that had never before distinguished it; and, although more than $200,000 have been required during this period to meet its obligations and current expenses, its paper has never been dishonored, nor its drafts gone to protest.

A. H. REDFORD, Agent.

Referred to the committee on books and periodicals.

Dr. Green submitted the report of the book committee, as follows:

Report of the Book Committee to the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

We, the members of the book committee, take great pleasure in stating that in our opinion Dr. Redford, our book agent, has done all that was possible for a man to do in the conduct and management at the Publishing House, and that his policy has been fully approved by the book committee, and that a debt of gratitude is due Dr. Redford from the whole church for the able and successful management of said concern.

Signed in behalf of the book committee.

A. L. P. GREEN, Chairman.
W. M. MORGAN, Sec.

This report was referred to the committee on books and periodicals.

The report of the missionary secretary was submitted without reading.

Dr. McFerrin gave a brief resume of the contents, and stated that copies of the report were in his hands for distribution among the delegates.

Referred to the committee on missions.

Announcements were then made, and the Conference adjourned with the benediction by the Bishop.

THIRD DAY.

MONDAY, May 4, 1874.

Conference met at the appointed hour, Bishop Pierce in the chair.

Religious exercises were conducted by Dr. J. B. McFerrin.

Minutes of the last meeting read and approved.

Bishop Kavanaugh took the chair.

Several delegates appeared and took their seats.

The following letter was read and the invitation accepted:

To the Members of the General Conference, Present:

Having accepted the invitation of leading citizens of Louisville to embody in a lecture the views of education which I presented last summer before the University Convocation of New York, I would most cordially and earnestly invite the members of this Conference to attend the lecture on this (Monday) evening, May 4, in this hall.

I would not ask your attention to any trite and familiar suggestions on such a theme, but as our educational systems need a radical change, and as I have a profound conviction of the possibility of eradicating intemperance, vice, crime, animality and selfishness by a system of moral education, which has never before been systematically presented to mankind, I deem it my duty to invite the especial attention of those who, as ministers, are so deeply concerned in the improvement of society to a system of moral culture which, although practically new, has already received the approbation of many of the most enlightened friends of humanity.

Very respectfully,
J. R. BUCHANAN.

Bishop Paine presented the following communication to the Conference:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, LOUISVILLE, KY., May 4, 1874.

To the Presiding Officer of the General Conference:

REV. SIR—It affords me much pleasure to transmit herewith a certified copy of a resolution unanimously adopted by the Honorable General Council, tendering the freedom of the city to the delegates to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

While conferring a privilege where a right already exists may be considered by some as a most empty compliment, this action of the Council is intended as an evidence of the honor and pride shared in alike by all of our citizens that Louisville should have been selected as the place where so large and influential a convention should meet upon a question so all-important as the advancement of religion. Devoutly trusting that the labors of the Conference may be most thoroughly and successfully accomplished, and with best wishes for the spiritual and worldly prosperity of each and every delegate, I am, reverend sir, with great respect, your obedient servant,

CHAS. D. JACOB, Mayor.

Resolved, By the General Council of the city of Louisville, that in accordance with the recommendations in the message of his honor the mayor, of this date, calling the attention of the General Council to the fact that there will assemble in our city one of the largest, most influential and intelligent bodies of men that have honored Louisville with their presence—ministers of the gospel, statesmen, lawyers and doctors, merchants, etc.—the freedom of the city is hereby grauted to the members of said assembly, and that his honor the mayor be requested to communicate the same to said body.

Approved May 1, 1874, by
CHAS. D. JACOB, Mayor.

Attest copy.
J. M. WOMACK, Clerk.

On motion the courtesies extended were accepted, and the secretary was instructed to acknowledge the reception of the communication.

Report of agent and papers referring to the Publishing House claim for damages against the United States government were referred to the following committee of seven: Robert Browder, James Jackson, Thomas Christian, W. D. Winslow, W. M. Milnes, B. Craven, W. M. Rush.

The committees on the Bible cause and temperance were appointed.

Bishop Paine announced that the Bishops were ready to present their quadrennial address, and requested Bishop Pierce to read it.

It was read, as follows:

ADDRESS OF THE BISHOPS.

BELOVED BRETHREN: With cordial affection we greet you in the name of the great Head of the church, Jesus Christ our Lord.

We have completed another quadrennial term of our church history. With devout thanksgiving to God we report great tranquillity in all our borders. Peace reigns. Not the peace of stagnation, indifference and moral death, but of unity, contentment and brotherly love. While the world is all astir with advancing thought, great enterprises and momentous events, social, political and ecclesiastical, our preachers abide steadfast in Wesleyan theology, and our people give to the truth a reverent welcome. There is no agitation as to doctrine or to discipline to disturb the quiet of our Zion. This state of things is largely due to the broad liberality of our system, giving full range to thought and expression, and thus removing the provocation to dissent and resistance by the consciousness of a recognized freedom. Accepting with hearty faith and strong affection the peculiar and distinctive principles and methods of our economy, the only question now under discussion among us is how to give them the greatest efficiency and secure the largest and best results. To you, the delegates of the Conference and the people, the whole church looks for the wisdom which shall elaborate and embody in appropriate legislation all the changes needful for the consummation of her wishes and her hopes.

Realizing, as doubtless you do, your responsibilities, we trust that you will address yourselves to the work before you by invoking that inspiration of the Almighty which giveth understanding, and cherish alike the feeling of dependence and the spirit of devotion. The work to be done is of vital importance at the present juncture, but the points are definite and few in number. Informed, as you are, with regard to the wants of the church and the views of our membership, a little calm thought—the interchange of ideas—mutual consultation and discussion, will lead to sound and safe conclusions. But, brethren, while deliberate and painstaking, strive to economize time. The church must needs suffer by the absence of her pastors. The longer the time the greater the damage. The revival spirit is abroad. God is visiting the churches. Jesus is passing by. The opportunity ought not to be lost. Be prompt. Have a mind to work. Stick to the main points—the living issues. Let us all return as early as may be to reap the fields now ripening for the sickle of the husbandman.

We beg to suggest a few things which demand your earnest, careful attention. First of all we mention our missionary organization. The parent board and the secretary will report to you the operations of the last four years. One or both will likely recommend material changes, suggested by the practical working of the present plan. Of the propriety of these changes and the reasons assigned for them we leave you to judge. We will not attempt to bias or forestall your action by an official opinion. It is enough for us to invoke a careful review of the whole subject, both as to duty and policy. We deem it proper to say, however, that the resolutions of the board, at their last annual meeting, proposing to ask at your hands radical changes in the missionary constitution, have been strongly disapproved in several of the Conferences, and the discussion here will probably turn upon some modification of the present [illegible] the readjustment of this great question on a new basis.

The working and results of our missionary organization do not, in our judgment, meet the demand of our times or the responsibility that rests upon us as a church of the Lord Jesus Christ. We refer especially to foreign fields. Whether this be due to the plans adopted or to the manner in which they have been carried out we respectfully refer to your consideration.

The spirit of missions is vital to the very existence of the church. She may live as an organization, by force of numbers, money and social influences, but cannot be a fruitful branch of the living Vine unless the sap of missionary life circulates through it, maintaining health and vigor, and making it the medium of extension to others. Our people are not deficient, in any discouraging sense, of right views and feelings on this subject, but our methods have never commanded their entire confidence and approval. The point of friction and of weakness lies in the comparative claims of the domestic and foreign work. While slavery existed we had a factor which solved the difficulty, and the work at home harmonized in the spirit of it and the necessity of the case with the work abroad. Now that the colored people have church organizations of their own, and are provided with the gospel, the domestic work has largely lost its missionary feature, and the combination of it with the foreign has absorbed into the former much of the interest which belongs more legitimately to the latter.

There is much to be done at home in occupying waste places—supplementing the scant resources of sparse populations, and carrying the gospel to the neglected poor of our large cities; but, as providing for the dependents of our own households does not exonerate from the general obligations of charity, so attention to these local demands upon the money and labor of the church should not abridge our interest or effort in behalf of those who dwell in darkness and the shadow of death. If the General Conference could provide for the home-field from some other fund it might be well. Or if they could so harmonize the two interests, domestic and foreign, as to avoid a conflict in the public mind in reference to their respective claims, then the embarrassment under which we now operate would pass away. Missionary work, distinctively so called, must be made more prominent. It ought to be disentangled from all quasi views and substitutes, and made to rely upon its own merits motives and obligations. However integral to the church as an organization to conserve the interests of Christ's kingdom among men, and however included in the principles, genius and plans of our holy religion, it is nevertheless a peculiar work in its necessities, modes and agents. Its claims must not be diluted by considerations of effort expended in another direction, nor subordinated to any other department of duty. It should stand alone in its magnitude and grandeur. It is the work of the church—her special mission. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." The reflex influence of obedience and enterprise in this direction is conservative of personal piety and all local progress. A church imbued with the spirit of missions is always spiritual—active—liberal and aggressive. To deal with the gospel as a monopoly for home use and private ends is to defraud Christ of his inheritance in other lands, and to waste his goods by misapplication as unfaithful stewards. Adopt some plan, brethren, which will intensify the church's sense of indebtedness to Christ and the world. Magnify the gospel by diffusion as well as embracement. Individualize the mission work. Separate it from all competition. Set it forth in the grandeur of its claim upon faith, hope and philanthropy, an imperious duty specified by divine command, encouraged by divine promise, already vindicated by Providence and grace, and destined to culminate sooner or later, by gradual advancement or sudden triumph, in millennial glory. Any plan, recognizing the great underlying principles of this interest and starting from the right standpoint, which will commend itself to the judgment of the church as feasible in its practical working, and which can be economically administered, will command her liberality. The plan must appeal to the loyalty of the church. There must be unbroken, serried combination. The current of benevolence in this behalf must not be wasted by side rills for local irrigation, but pour in steady volume into one reservoir for a specific use. All other claims and interests must be made to depend upon their merits for help, and not seek to live on the credit of another affiliated but independent and over-mastering obligation. With these suggestions we submit the whole subject to your collective wisdom.

We are glad to report to you wonderful progress in church-building, both as to number of houses, style of architecture and accommodations for comfort at all seasons. Consolidation of feeble societies at eligible centers has enlarged congregations, secured a more uniform administration of ordinances, given stability and permanent form to Sunday schools, and made the arrangement of circuit work more convenient and effective. Incidental to this is the slow but steady improvement of all financial plans. Broader views of duty, more liberal assessments and better modes of collection are prevailing. There are local exceptions to this remark, but the aggregate collections under the pressure of an unprecedented monetary collapse demonstrate the truth of the general statement. Some of the preachers are embarrassed by short receipts, are living hard, but stand up manfully to their work, knowing that the same afflictions are pressing upon the people themselves, and persuaded that the church will respond to their necessities when the present stringency shall be relaxed.

The subject of education, in all its branches, is entitled to your most [illegible] propose to continue our labors on the same scale.

The right training of children—the literature of our Sunday school system—denominational education, are all phases of the general subject of great and increasing importance. We do not hesitate to avow that we regard the education of the young as one of the leading functions of the church, and that she cannot abdicate in favor of the State without infidelity to her trust and irreparable damage to society. The reasons for occupying this ground which inhere in the very nature of this interest, and in the relation of children to the church, are all intensified by the antagonisms of modern science, and the outcasting of the religious element from all the school systems fostered by State legislation. It is not ours to dispute jurisdiction with Cæsar, but, fully persuaded that the salt of religious truth alone can preserve education from abuse and mischievous results, we feel that the responsibilities of the church grow with the progress of society and the demands of the age.

It is with gratulation and thanksgiving to God we say the church has made great progress in this department of duty. She has projected new enterprises on a broader basis, and with higher aims as to scholastic teaching and furniture—revived institutions which were languishing and ready to die—renewed endowments lost by the revolutions of fortune, and is seeking to maintain the guardianship and sanctification of the humbler instrumentalities which lay hold upon the masses of society. We anticipate in the near future a complete system. Universities, colleges, district schools, academies, sustained by our people, and manned by our own graduates—all thoroughly equipped, a rounded plan, reaching from the lowest to the highest, and securing the safeguards of a Christian education to all the rising generation committed to our charge. We want for our young people an education which begins amid the hallowed influences of home—the cherished authority and example of the father, the tender, benignant influence of the mother, carried on in association with the Bible, prayers and revivals, in every stage of development from the alphabet to the diploma.

In our judgment the time has come for the General Conference to make some strong deliverance as to discipline in reference to class meetings, worldly amusements and family religion. The great body of our people persist in believing that the Conference of 1866 abolished class meetings, not only as a test of membership, but as a Methodist institution. Any action therefore recognizing it and urging it as a social means of grace, obligatory, not under penalty of law, but in proof of fellowship, might rectify the prevailing mistake and help to revive this time-honored and gracious instrument of good. Perhaps dividing the membership into classes, as under the old rule, but changing the form of the meeting from the catechetical (the inquisitorial, as some regard it) to the colloquial, might retain and perpetuate all that is vital to the institution.

Among our young people everywhere, especially in the towns and cities, there is a tendency to worldliness—to vain and demoralizing amusements, which demands a corrective. The subject, though plain in its general principles, is compassed about with many embarrassments. The toleration of these things by loose notions of Christian liberty, the fact that many ills among us do not restrain their children, the loose admission of members, the incapacity of the unconverted for spiritual discernment, the long sufferance of the evil in many cases from timid administration, all threaten the church, adulterate her purity and break down her authority. The silence of the Discipline, in terms, is the plea with some; expunging the paragraph in which dancing was specified among things forbidden, has been construed by others into a relaxation of law, equivalent to license. We think the rule is plain, and we know the last General Conference expressed itself strongly in condemnation of this evil. Nevertheless, the pleas are made so that the church is enfeebled in her remonstrance, and the preacher paralyzed in his pastoral government. Both parties look to you for relief. We hope you may be able to furnish it. You cannot make a new law, but you can define the old.

The church is suffering grievously in her character, experience and influence from the very general neglect of family religion, morning and evening worship in the houses of our people. No duty can be dropped from the Christian schedule without serious loss of moral power. Indeed such an omission unsettles the whole foundation of religious life and jeopards the moral safety of every delinquent. The neglect of this great duty is not merely a personal fault, wholly indefensible, but the guilt of it is enhanced by the fact that under such a regime there can be no proper Christian training of children. This evil is of fearful magnitude, as a fact, as an example, in itself, in its effects and in its results. It ought not to be tolerated. We invoke the authority of the Conference, the efforts of the ministry, the co-operation of all the faithful among us to correct it.

The District Conferences are working well, doing good. The church is greatly indebted to them for her unity, compactness and efficiency. They combine all the elements of usefulness and power common to the class meeting and the camp meeting, with some advantages over both. They are most commonly the occasions and the instruments of revivals, giving fresh impulse to the work of God in the communities where they are held and the districts they represent. They need no increase of power, no new function, no further legislation. They stand in their own lot, and should not trench upon the attributes and offices of any other department, and, least of all, upon the Quarterly Conference.

During the past four years the Bishops have been able to attend all the Annual Conferences without a single failure, besides attending a great many of the District Conferences [illegible]

We regret to say the Church Conference is a comparative failure. In the stations generally they have done well—are very useful. In the circuits, as a rule, they have been inefficient. The fault is commonly with the preacher, who does not like them—does not know how to hold them—sometimes with the people—often with both. Time and experience may correct this order of things and vindicate the wisdom of the institution. It seems to us to be a necessity, both to a wise pastoral oversight, a just distribution of service among the members, and an effective use and application of the resources of the church. It might be well to give the preacher in charge larger discretion as to the manner of holding them, so that in the absence of pressing business they might be made strictly devotional.

Within the last two years our Publishing House has passed one great crisis in its history, and even now is struggling with another, because of the monetary troubles of the country. It has survived both. Destroyed by fire, it has sprung from its ashes, enlarged and improved. Embarrassed by the financial panic which rests upon the country like a palsy, it has sold more of our standard books within half a year than perhaps in the last decade. The exigencies of this crisis revived among our preachers a custom which prevailed among the fathers, and to which much of their success in promulgating the gospel and establishing the people in the knowledge of our doctrines was due. We mean the circulation of our books. The object of a church Publishing House is moral, not mercantile. Books may be printed in any quantity and of the best quality, but they fail to do good unless distributed among the people. This work can best be done by the pastors. We trust this revival of so good a work will not be spasmodic, but that it will continue and increase.

In this connection we cannot forbear to commend the management of the Sunday school department. A new system of instruction has been constructed—a literature created satisfactory to the church in its style, tone and varied adaptations.

As the only distinct change in the way of legislation which we propose, we respectfully recommend the restoration of the rule which requires a preacher to travel two years before he is eligible to deacon's orders, and four years before he is ordained elder.

Since your last session two of our colleagues, Bishop James O. Andrew, and Bishop John Early, have departed this life. They were venerable men, greatly beloved in the church for their Christian virtues—ministerial and official fidelity—long and varied service. Found, as they always were, in the way of righteousness, their hoary heads were crowns of honor, the insignia of their age, authority and worth, and all the people delighted to do them reverence. They gave the days of the years of their youth and maturity to the active service of the church, and then, amid the infirmities of old age and the languor and distress of physical suffering, illustrated the grace of God by patient submission, by beautiful expressions of trust, and the joyous triumph of faith and hope. Let us all revere their memory, imitate their example, and by patient continuance in well-doing follow them to the heaven of the blessed.

Finally, brethren, remembering that the safety, usefulness and power of the church are not in mere organism, however compact, nor in prudential legislation, however wise or expedient, but in the spirituality of the ministry and membership, in the maintenance of sound doctrine and godly discipline, address yourselves to the task of protecting the church we love from the corruptions of sentiment, taste and habit which are in the world through lust, and of restoring her to the self-denial, the moral courage, the consistent piety, which must characterize all who would be accepted witnesses of the Lord Jesus.

May the great Head of the church be present in all your sessions, and pour upon your counsels and conclusions the benedictions of his grace.

Conference met at the appointed hour, Bishop Kavanaugh in the chair. After religious exercises Bishop Wightman took the chair.

The following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That there be appointed a committee of nine to consider chapters 6, 7 and 8 of the Book of Discipline and the amendments proposed thereto, and that said committee shall be charged with the duty of drafting and reporting to the Conference a simple and effective plan for church trials.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 5, 1874.

To the Rev. L. W. Bates, President of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, Lynchburg, Virginia:

By order of the General Conference, and in behalf of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, we beg to state that the communication from the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, tendering their fraternal greetings, has been received with profound satisfaction. We cordially reciprocate the feelings of brotherly regard, and pray that God's blessing may rest abundantly upon your deliberations and communion.

W. M. WIGHTMAN, Prest.
THOS. O. SUMMERS, Sec.

Invitations from the commissioners of the State School for the Blind, board of trustees of the American Printing House for the Blind and from the board of trustees of the public schools were read and accepted.

Various resolutions were offered and referred to appropriate committees:

The following committee on church trials was announced:

H. F. Johnson, S. Bobo, J. W. Hinton, J. P. Strother, T. L. Boswell, E. J. Lilly, W. H. Potter, H. W. Foote and W. G. Veal.

The venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce addressed the Conference as follows:

MY BELOVED BRETHREN: I stand before you rather as a marvel in the history of Methodist preachers. It would be very unbecoming in me to congratulate you on account of my presence with you, but it is right that I should congratulate myself on being permitted to see this very certainly the last General Conference I shall ever attend. I have been greatly honored—more certainly than I have ever deserved. I have never been left out since the time of my eligibility as a delegate. I have never done much. I have always felt inclined to retire rather than make myself bold and prominent. I had no expectation, when it was announced to me that I was elected to this General Conference, that I could be present with you. It may be considered as the first instance in history, at least in that of our own ministry, that a man in his ninetieth year has traveled six hundred miles and occupied his seat daily in a body like this; but God has conferred upon me this very remarkable blessing.

In regard to myself I may say that my voice has ever been clear, easy to use, to control and to hear. It could be heard readily by ten thousand attentive listeners, and it was never weakened or cracked for sixty-seven years. During this long period I preached many long and hard sermons, so that in this line of things I acquired great reputation for my preaching powers. But now my voice is gone, and it cannot be repaired, so that I cannot do what I desired to do at the request of my friends. During my life I have offered to the General Conference only four resolutions requiring change in our Discipline, but I have had the pleasure of seeing them all accepted, and they now stand on your Discipline.

Although I have not attempted—to use a common expression—to tinker much with the Discipline, I have never seen the day when I was perfectly satisfied to have the phraseology remain perpetually the same. I have prepared some changes for your consideration, but, feeling well satisfied that I cannot command my voice, I have not brought them with me, though I have written them out with care, and it is impossible for me to bring them before you except by your indulgence, which I am satisfied will always be granted when it is properly asked. I have drawn up three papers from my ministerial experience, running far into the sixty-ninth year, which propose measures intended to vitalize and energize the itinerant ministry. They are but little, after all, and perhaps you may not appreciate them as much as I do myself. I have some others relating

At Louisville.

We reached the city early on Friday morning, May 1, and were in good time for the opening session of the General Conference. Library Hall, the place of meeting, is spacious and beautiful, well seated, and adequately lighted and ventilated. The platform occupied by the Bishops and secretaries is elevated, roomy and ornate, and exhibits these dignitaries to the best advantage, and affords them every facility for the performance of their rather trying duties. The Bishops, eight in number, are all present and in good health. Bishop Paine looks older than when we last saw him, four years ago, but we discover no marked infirmity in his movement and voice. His face is luminous with spiritual intelligence, his manner courteous and dignified, and he is ready and clear in his performance of the duties of the chair. The venerable Dr. Lovick Pierce was present at the opening service, and usually occupies an easy chair on the platform, and seems to be interested in the proceedings, and evidently enjoys the fellowship of his brethren. He is much shrunken and emaciated in body, his voice has given way most noticeably, but the eye is bright, and he moves along the aisle to and from his seat with a form not greatly bent, and with a quick step. He is worthy of all reverence and respect, and there will be sadness in our Israel when the chariot of his translation shall come.

The attendance of delegates is quite large, and they are representative men. Many able and distinguished laymen are present. Taken as a whole, the General Conference is a very imposing assembly. Dr. Summers is a most complete and accomplished secretary, and he has a strong corps of assistants in Drs. F. M. Kennedy, A. G. Haygood and J. D. Vincil. The Bishops' address was read by Bishop Pierce on Monday, the fourth. It is a satisfactory paper, well written and judicious in its topics. We hope the readers of the ADVOCATE will have it in hand in this issue. Let the whole church read and ponder. Especially let our people note what their chief pastors say concerning missions, education, class meetings, worldly amusements and family religion. So far no disposition has manifested itself in the Conference to meddle with the old landmarks to any considerable extent, and the measures which are likely to be adopted will probably be of a conservative character. At this writing (say May 7) no important business has been consummated. The committees, however, are organized and at work, and a large mass of petitions, memorials and reports have been thrown in the hoppers to be ground up and returned in some sort of grist to the main body for adoption or rejection. We find many of the venerable and eminent men here who were present at New Orleans eight years ago. Without being invidious, we may mention: Hamilton, of Alabama, Evans, of Georgia, Green, McFerrin, Boswell and Hannah, of Tennessee, Edwards, of Virginia, Regester, of Baltimore, Wilson, of North Carolina, Hunter and Winfield, of Arkansas. These and others, whose names we do not recall, are watchful of the daily proceedings, and largely shape the business, and guide it with the wisdom of a long experience. Some of them are aging rapidly, and will soon be unable to lead the hosts of Southern Methodism.

It has been a great pleasure and gratification to us to meet some of the church editors whose faces we had never seen before. Dr. Haygood is known to the grown people, and especially to the children of the church. They will be glad to know that he looks very much like his books and papers—active, cheerful, and every way capable, a youngish man, we should judge, of about thirty-five years. Dr. F. M. Kennedy, editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, is stout, handsome and full of sunshine. He has a South Carolina warmth and heartiness, and will be popular and beloved everywhere. He is a good preacher, and one of the most discriminating and elegant writers in the editorial fraternity. Dr. Bledsoe, editor of the Southern Review, is a man of large muscle, well built up, and apparently possessed of a rugged and enduring constitution. A bookish man that he is, a metaphysician of rare profundity and acumen, we had conjectured that the author of the Theodicy must be lean of body, and with a brow plowed with the furrows of hard and exhausting thought. On the contrary, he is stalwart, broad-chested, of a cheerful countenance, alive to outward affairs, and evidently enjoys and appreciates all that is pleasant, beautiful and good in the material world. Dr. Johnson, of the Western Methodist, Bennett, of the Richmond, and John, of the Texas Christian Advocate, we have met before. Their work seems to agree with them, and their papers severally speak for their industry and capacity in the line of journalism. Of Dr. Summers, editor of the great official at Nashville, book editor, author, and professor elect to the chair of theology in Vanderbilt, it is supererogatory for us to speak. He speaks for himself in so many ways, and so well, and for so long a time, that our readers need no more. It is too late now to argue about the grandeur of the sun, or to amplify on the sublimities of Niagara.

The committee to whom the Louisville churches assigned the duty of preparing for and receiving the Conference have performed their labors well. Dr. Sehon, presiding elder of the Louisville district, and the resident pastors have been exceedingly attentive and considerate. The Conference has met with a profuse and elegant hospitality at the hands of the good people of Louisville, and their reception by the city authorities, and by the various religious denominations, has been most cordial and flattering. It will be seen that Louisville has responded liberally to the appeal on behalf of sufferers from the floods which so fearfully desolate our State. At Dr. Humphries' church (Presbyterian,) where we were assigned to preach on Sunday last, a generous collection was taken for this object. In many ways Louisville has been to us a surprise. It counts one hundred and forty thousand inhabitants, is most beautiful in appearance, and is full of ornate and attractive residences. It is refreshing to us to be in a place which shows so many signs of real prosperity and permanent growth. The editor, with Rev. Dr. McCarty, of the Alabama Conference, has a most delightful home in the family of Mr. Henry C. Murrell, whose residence is in one of the pleasantest parts of the city.

to the administration of discipline in the church, upon which I desire that the Conference will allow me, if able to do so, to say a few words from time to time. I trust when the weather is more favorable that I shall be able to say what I desire. I say this much only now, so as to have my infirmities in your hearts, and I know they will have your sympathy. At another time, with your indulgence, I shall present the changes which I propose, and you may adopt them if you see fit, or let them perish in their passage.

The following resolution was offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That this Conference will gladly hear Dr. L. Pierce on the subject referred to in his address, as his health and strength may permit, and that, if at any time our rules of order conflict with this resolution, said rules be hereby suspended.

J. O. A. CLARK.
A. G. HAYGOOD.
THOS. O. SUMMERS.

The following resolution was offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That the editors and representatives of our church papers, with the book agent, be requested to confer together respecting the price of our church journals, in order to secure uniformity of price and place each one on a safe financial basis.

R. ALEXANDER.
JOHN H. MCLEAN.
TRUSTEN POLK.

The following resolution was offered:

Resolved, That the resolution passed by the General Conference in Memphis, Tennessee, in 1870, authorizing the Bishops to appoint one or more preachers to any proper work beyond the bounds of the Annual Conference, be and the same is hereby repealed. A. R. WINFIELD.
LEROY M. LEE.

After some discussion it was referred to the committee on Itinerancy.

The following resolution was offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That the committee on public worship be respectfully requested to have as much preaching during the session of the General Conference as practicable.

F. E. PITTS.
R. H. POWELL.

Conference was then opened with prayer and benediction.

FIFTH DAY.

WEDNESDAY, May 6, 1874.

Conference met at the appointed hour, Bishop Wightman in the chair. Religious exercises were conducted by Dr. Head.

Minutes of the last meeting read and approved.

Bishop Marvin took the chair.

The chair then called for petitions, memorials and appeals, and the following were presented:

Baltimore Conference—Appeal of L. D. Huston.

After a prolonged discussion the appeal was allowed.

Little Rock Conference—Appeal of Benjamin Watson.

The chair decided that the appeal could not be entertained, as the appellant's voluntary withdrawal was a voluntary relinquishment of all rights in the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Sundry resolutions were offered and referred.

L. Pierce and J. S. Key offered the following resolutions in relation to the administrative duties of preachers, which were read, and, after explanations by the venerable mover, were referred to the committee on Itinerancy:

ADMITTING PREACHERS ON TRIAL—PAGE 74, DISCIPLINE.

Resolved, That answer 3 of section 5 be so amended as to have answer 4 to read as follows, viz.:

"This relation of being on trial embraces the requisites of a competent pastorate, therefore must apply as well to proper administrative qualifications as to acceptable preaching ability, and does not end with being admitted into full connection, but must apply to the official administration of every itinerant Methodist preacher, as his Annual Conference determines his administrative abilities as well as his preaching ability. A preacher failing to come up to the administrative qualifications requisite in the duties of a competent pastorate in the church must be discontinued, because the Annual Conferences are bound to furnish the churches as well with good pastors as with good preachers. And when, after trial, it is manifest one received on trial either will not or for some constitutional defect cannot be made effective in official administration, he may be discontinued from the roll of itinerant pastors without injury to his moral character."

LOVICK PIERCE.
JOS. S. KEY.

Resolved, That page 68, answer 6 be so amended as to make the inquiries by the presiding elder at his Quarterly Conferences, concerning the official administration of the preachers in charge, more direct and special, the amendment coming in after the words "Quarterly Conference:"

"Whether the preacher in charge administers the sacraments in due order, not as incidents, but as attributes of the church?

"Whether he holds his church conferences regularly, according to the rule?

"Whether he enforces the moral discipline of the church against all disorderly members that will not regard reproof?

"Whether he examines the church registers to see that they are correctly kept?

"Whether he attends closely and vigorously to the collections assessed on his charge?"

These inquiries to be urged more and more as the year runs on, and the need for them becomes more evident, and upon the evidence thus obtained the presiding elder shall represent the preachers in his district at the Annual Conference.

LOVICK PIERCE.
JOS. S. KEY.

Dr. Pierce said: As this paper is to go to the committee on revisal, I feel unwilling to submit it without giving my reasons. It has been the desideratum of the itinerancy all the days of my life, and more especially during the last few years. Now and then we have a man belonging to the list of itinerant pastors who, although in other respects a good man, is utterly inept and worthless in his administrative qualities. Our itinerant polity is a peculiar polity. Ours is the only church which sends pastors to the people who cannot elect them, and we are shut up to this single method of endeavoring to secure for them faithful pastors. As it is now, no matter how inefficient his past history may have been, we give them the charge of souls. I feel it my duty to say that the Annual Conference is responsible to the church for all the peculiarities of Methodist preachers. The Bishops have nothing to do with the material that we turn over to them for appointment. It needs no argument to establish the fact that the Annual Conferences are necessarily quasi theological schools. Men come up here as under-graduates, freshmen, sophomore, junior and senior. I take it upon me to say that no Annual Conference would admit any man if they were assured that they could make nothing out of him but a [illegible] without equestrian tastes and tact for administration. I think if I were a Bishop I would feel reluctant to put stations and circuits in the hands of any such men. I therefore take this as my standpoint that it is as necessary to make good pastors as to make good preachers. Whatever gifts he may have, the church in his hands does not move on prosperously. Everything that requires administrative ability dwindles and tangles, and becomes as a withered leaf. The time has come when an energetic, wise enforcement of Methodist discipline is necessary. It is therefore necessary that the Annual Conference should be satisfied that they are placing it in the hands of responsible men.

The twentieth question of our minutes, "Are all the preachers blameless in their life and official administration?" should be as strictly answered as regards the latter as it is in regard to the first. I have seen men, whose inefficiency in official administration was as well known as their names upon first-rate circuits, bring up only about $100 collections, when another man can go to the same circuit and collect $500, and nobody hurt and everybody glad. It is a very important consideration. I have simply stated that the presiding elder shall make a report touching these things that are of vital interest to the church. As it is, they have twenty or thirty duties to perform, and I have remarked that it is a universal law that what is overdone is generally undone. The lax administration of discipline is an evidence not only of our infirmity, but of our moral depreciation. My rule is that whatever is law I am going to enforce against those who are determined to have their own way, though Methodism suffers by their acts. And now for the finale. Where complaint is made on the ground of administrative inefficiency alone, let it be considered sufficient ground for honorable location, and, if the preacher desires it, the Conference may try him another year, and, if then he is shown to be unfit, drop him finally from the itinerant roll.

This revisal committee has so much to do that I thought I would make this little explanation of my points, though I have spoken too long on this subject. God bless you.

The papers were referred to the committee on Itinerancy.

The following resolutions were offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That the Bishops be requested to consider the subjects of the election and ordination of our native-born missionaries in foreign stations, and suggest to this Conference what legislation, if any, is necessary on this subject.

WM. SHAPARD.
W. A. MCCARTY.

Resolved, That this General Conference are thankful to almighty God that the Rev. Dr. Lovick Pierce has been graciously preserved to the ninetieth year of his age in such full mental vigor and in sufficient bodily health to be present with us as a delegate.

Resolved, That we are anxious, one more time, to hear this aged servant of God expound the gospel which he has so long illustrated, both by precept and example, and we most earnestly request him to preach before the Conference, in this hall, at such time as may suit his convenience, due notice thereof being given to the public, that all who wish, and whom the hall can accommodate, may have opportunity to hear him.

A. Hunt, D. D., was introduced by the Rev. Leroy M. Lee, D. D.; the Rev. Charles H. Fowler, D. D., by the Rev. James E. Evans, D. D.; General Clinton B. Fisk by Mr. Simpson Bobo. The chair introduced them to the Bishops and to Dr. Lovick Pierce, and presented the communication of the fraternal messengers, which was read, as follows:

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, to assemble in Louisville, Kentucky, in May, 1874:

REVEREND AND DEAR BRETHREN—The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at their session in Brooklyn, New York, in 1872, adopted the following preamble and resolution:

"To place ourselves in the truly fraternal relation toward our Southern brethren, which the sentiments of our people demand, and to prepare the way for the opening of formal fraternity with them, be it hereby

"Resolved, That this General Conference will appoint a delegation, consisting of two ministers and one layman, to convey our fraternal greetings to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, at its next session."

In carrying out this resolution the General Conference made it the duty of the Bishops to appoint the delegates for which it provides.

In pursuance of this action the Board of Bishops have appointed Rev. Albert S. Hunt, D. D., Rev. Charles H. Fowler, D. D., and General Clinton B. Fisk said delegates.

The Board of Bishops also directed the undersigned, the senior members of said Episcopal Board, to furnish said delegates with proper credentials.

EDMUND S. JANES,
LEVI SCOTT,
MATTHEW SIMPSON,
EDWARD R. AMES,
Committee.

NEW YORK, April 20, 1874.

The chair then addressed the Conference:

BRETHREN OF THE CONFERENCE: On yesterday you set this hour for receiving the delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church. They are now present with us, and I have the pleasure of introducing them to you.

The Rev. Drs. Albert S. Hunt and Charles H. Fowler and General Clinton B. Fisk addressed the Conference. (We hope to find room in the next ADVOCATE for their speeches in full.)

Dr. Wilson said: As this is a matter requiring deliberate action, I move that a committee of nine be appointed by the chair, to which the papers of the delegates may be referred.

The chair, turning to the delegates, said: Brethren, we are glad to see you and to hear your words. We hope it will be convenient for you to spend some days with us—sharing the hospitalities of our people and preaching in our pulpits. We invite you to be at home anywhere within our bar, or if it please you it will please us better that you be seated on the platform. Meantime, the matter of your coming and of your communication will be taken by the Conference under most respectful consideration, and in due time a response will be returned.

The Conference then adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by Dr. Lovick Pierce.

The Fullness of Christ.

There are three special names or designations of him who in the eternal purpose is presented to us as the Christ. The first of these is the wisdom; and the divine description of this we have in the eighth of Proverbs. The second is the word; and it is of this the Evangelist John speaks in his first chapter. The third is the Son; and of him the Apostle Paul writes in the first chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

Each of these three takes us back into the past eternity. The wisdom is eternal; the word is eternal; the Son is eternal.

As the eternal wisdom, he possessed all that we call knowledge or truth, in every form and every kind. In him were "hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge.—Colossians ii, 3. He was "the wisdom of God;" and because he was so, "he is made unto us wisdom" (First Corinthians i, 30,) "so that we are wise in Christ."—First Corinthians iv, 10. As "the wisdom," he is "the truth;" not simply the depository or dispenser of the truth, but himself "the truth;" as he said: "I am the way and the truth and the life."—John xiv, 6.

As the eternal word, he is the revealer of the mind of Godhead; for as it is by words that we come into contact with the invisible mind, and know the thoughts and feelings within, so it is by him, as the word, that we are made acquainted with the mind of God. It is through him that God speaks to us, and it is in him that God shows us what he is. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father;" without him the character of God would have been to us a blank, or, utter darkness. "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God; the same was in the beginning with God." As the wisdom and the word, he is the light of the world (John viii, 12;) "for in him was life, and the life was the light of men."—John i, 4. As the Revealer of Godhead, the utterer of the divine mind, he is both the light and the life of men—that life and light which speak to us of the holy love of God, and invite us to become partakers of that love.

As the eternal Son, he is "the brightness of Jehovah's glory, and the express image of his person" (Hebrews i, 2;) distinct from the Father, yet one with the Father; holding filial fellowship with the Father, and inviting us to enter into that same fellowship and relationship as sons; as the Son, giving to us "the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father" (Romans viii, 15;) and making us not only children, but heirs of the inheritance, "heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ." Romans viii, 17.—Christian Treasury.

CORRESPONDENTS and advertisers must bear with us. Of course it will be impossible for our columns to accommodate the accumulated matter and General Conference reports.

IF MANKIND were all intellect they would be continually changing, so that one age would be entirely unlike another. The great conservative is the heart, which remains the same in all ages, so that commonplaces of a thousand years' standing are as effective as ever.—Hawthorne.

ALL OUR sufferings are ordered by a Father; it is the potion our Father gives us to drink; and whatever bitter ingredient there is in it, still it is of a Father's procuring, and why suspect it to be poison, and be afraid of it?

GIFTS may differ, but grace as such is the same in all God's people. Just as some pieces of money are of gold, some of silver, others of copper; but they all agree in bearing the King's image and inscription.—Toplady.

MARRIED.

BELL—ALSWORTH.—By Rev. J. Wilkinson, at the residence of the bride's brother, near Baton Rouge, Louisiana, on the fifth of May, 1874, Mr. H. C. Bell, of Austin, Texas, to Miss Lillie G. Alsworth of East Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY, Etc., Etc.

A few months after having commenced the manufacture of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery he proprietor began to receive numerous letters from all parts of the Western and Southern States, bestowing the most unbounded praise upon it for having promptly cured the writers or their friends of Fever and Ague, or other forms of miasmatic or malarious diseases. He was repeatedly urged to make known the wonderful virtues of the Discovery in the cure of Ague and kindred diseases. He always replied that it was not intended for a "cure-all," and, should he recommend it to people as a remedy for so many different forms and classes of disease, he feared those who had never tested its virtues would at once class it among the numerous humbugs of the day. This answer was satisfactory to no one; they argued that the whole country ought to know it at once, and expressed their astonishment at its indifference to the subject. His pure and heart being at all times open to the call of suffering humanity, he has at last, after having received testimony from hundreds who have been speedily cured by it, and many of them, after quinia and all the usual means had failed, consented to make the matter known.

DR. PIERCE—Dear Sir: Having used a few bottles of your Golden Medical Discovery, and believe it to be the very best medicine for Chills and Fever, I wish to buy it by the dozen. Please give me your price for it.

REV. THOMAS O'REILLY.

DR. HUNTER ON OZOENA.

We do not at the present moment purpose entering upon any full or lengthy explanation of the nature, causes or treatment of the diseases embraced within our Specialty. The extra number of our Medical Specialist, which will be found announced in these columns to-day, will give all necessary information on such points. The present letters, as published in these columns, must therefore be considered merely as short notes, explaining, in as few words as possible, our views for the benefit of such as may not obtain a copy of our journal. We will have, however, that we will furnish a copy of our Specialist free of charge to all who may desire it, and will call at our office or send us their address.

Ozoena is the professional or technical name given to an advanced form of catarrh, in which the ulceration has eaten through the mucous lining of the nose to the cartilages and bone. Any case of catarrh may end in Ozoena, but it most commonly occurs on those who are naturally scrofulous. The discharge takes place through the nostrils or through the throat, and is generally of a yellow or greenish yellow color, frequently mixed with blood, and almost always attended by offensive smell. In the language of Dr. Wood, Philadelphia: "THIS DISEASE IS ONE OF THE OBSTINATE AND DISAGREEABLE WHICH THE PHYSICIAN HAS TO ENCOUNTER. IN BAD CASES THE BREATH OF THE PATIENT BECOMES SO REPULSIVE AS ALMOST TO ISOLATE HIM FROM SOCIETY, AND TO RENDER HIM AN OBJECT OF DISGUST, EVEN TO HIMSELF."

In some instances pieces of bone become separated, and slough off, leaving deep, unhealthy ulcers, which secrete a bloody matter, and are extremely difficult to heal.

After Ozoena has continued for some time the SENSE OF SMELL usually becomes impaired, and often is lost.

DEAFNESS is one of its most common consequences, and results from its extension through the Eustachian tubes to the internal ear.

PAINS IN THE HEAD and over the frontal sinuses, impaired memory and even insanity frequently spring from its extension to the brain.

The greatest danger, however, because the most common, is that it will extend downward and affect the lungs. In most cases of pulmonary disease catarrh is present in some degree, and in many instances it causes a large share of the patient's discomfort.

Besides these great consequences, all of which are liable to spring from scrofulous catarrh or Ozoena, there are others which, if less dangerous, are decidedly unpleasant. It occasions great nuisance to thousands of both sexes by isolating them and preventing their settlement in life. An offensive running from the nose, with foul breath, is not as great a calamity as can befall young people.

The treatment of this disease requires much care and conduct it to a successful issue. The remedies must be carefully adapted to the stage of the disease in each case, and applied directly to the parts affected. Blowing a little "SALT AND WATER" up the nose and dosing the stomach, which is about all that is usually done for this disease, never yet cured a case. The "CATARRH REMEDIES" and "SPECIFICS" which flood the country are quackish humbugs, which are not only ineffectual, but almost always injurious. The disease is bad enough, without making it worse. The physician who would treat scrofulous catarrh successfully must give constant daily attention to each case, and must vary washes and applications according to the stage and progress of the disease.

Unfortunately both physicians and patients are apt to treat this disease with neglect until it has produced consequences which no skill can easily remedy. By attention and proper management there are few cases which cannot be restored; the mistake which people make is in supposing that, when they have tried salt and water and a few bottles of patent trash, they have done all that can be done to cure them of this lamentable case. The sooner they get rid of such ideas the better.

Catarrh in its simpler forms is as curable as any other known disease, a few weeks being, in almost every case, sufficient for its radical cure; and even in its most inveterate form, of which we have just spoken, it rests with the patient alone whether he will or will not be cured of this disease or not. It is merely a matter of a few weeks in either case, more or less, of course, and somewhat longer for its cure than another; but we most positively affirm that, where the patient has an ordinarily fair constitution and reasonable vitality, the disease is one of the most curable of those which the physician is called upon to treat.

NOTICE.—DRS. R. & K. B. HUNTER devote their entire attention to the treatment of diseases of the Nose, Throat, Lungs and Heart, and can be consulted, personally and by letter, at their office, 165 Canal street, daily from nine to three (Sunday nine to one.) Address letters to P. O. Lock Box 1239.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Just published, from the press of the Western Methodist Book Concern, an extra number of

HUNTER'S MEDICAL SPECIALIST AND
Journal of Diseases of the Chest.

The object to issuing this extra number of the Specialist from Cincinnati is to disseminate correct and honest information on the subject of the Throat, Lungs, Head and Heart—their diseases and proper treatment.

The Medical Specialist was established by Dr. Robert Hunter, in New York, in the year 1855, as a monthly periodical. It has received hundreds of commendatory notices from the press, and has been extensively read not only by the people, but by medical men in great numbers, as containing interesting, valuable, practical and suggestive writings on the all-important medical subject of Consumption and its cognate diseases.

Dr. Hunter's chief desire in issuing this number is to extend a knowledge of his rational views of practice not only among invalids, but among physicians, to any one who is interested in the subject of his discussions to send to him and get a copy of this number of the Specialist. It will be mailed, to all who desire a copy, free of charge.

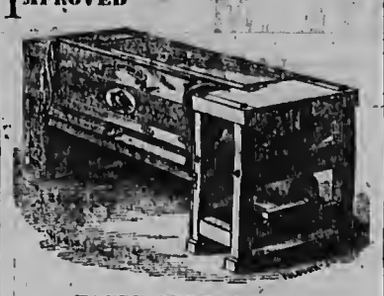
IMPROVED



EAGLE COTTON GINS.
The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. He has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinders of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only a ten-inch cylinder, and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in larger-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of Pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of biles.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst Canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all Humor in the Eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the Ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running Ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the Skin.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of Rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure Salt Rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of Scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

ROXBURY, MASS.

DEAR MADAM:—The reputation of the Medical Discovery in curing all kinds of Humors is so well established, by the unanimous voice of all who have ever used it, that I need not say anything on the subject, as the most skillful physicians and the most current druggists in the country are unanimous in its praise.

In presenting the Medical Discovery to your notice, I do it with a full knowledge of its curative power in relieving all, and curing most of those diseases to which you are unfortunately so liable. That most excruciating disease to an affectionate mother,

Nursing Sore Mouth,

is cured as if by a miracle. Your own temper is restored to its natural sweetness, and your babe from short and fretful naps to calm and sweet slumbers; and the Medical Discovery becomes a fountain of blessing to your husband and household. In the more advanced stages of

Canker

it extends to the stomach, causing

Dyspepsia,

which is nothing but canker to the stomach; then to the intestines and

Kidneys,

creating a sinking, gone feeling, and an indifference even to the cares of your family. Your stomach is your food distresses you, and you can only take certain kinds, and even of that your system does not get half the nourishment it contains, as the acrimonious fluid of the canker eats it up; then your complexion loses its bloom and becomes sallow or greenish, and your best day is gone. For want of nourishment your system becomes loose and flabby, and the fibers of your body become relaxed. Then follow a train of diseases which the Medical Discovery is peculiarly adapted to

Raw and Inflamed,

Cure!

Palpitation of the heart, pain in the side, weakness of the spine and small of the back, pain of the hip-joint when you retire, irregularity of the bowels, and also that most excruciating of diseases,

The Piles.

How many thousands of poor women are suffering from this disease and pining away a miserable life, and their next-door neighbor does not know the cause. I wish to impress on your mind that good old proverb: "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." In you have both the preventive and the cure, with this great and good quality: that it will never, under any circumstances, do you any injury.

No change of diet is ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one tablespoonful per day; children over ten years, dessertspoonful; children from five to eight years, teaspoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day. Yours truly,

OUR readers will be grateful for the room given to the advertisement this week of the famous Steam Washer of Mr. Tilton. We are prepared to recommend this invention as all the advertiser and manufacturer claims for it, and every family should order one at once. It saves woman's toil, and thus saves her life. It more than pays for itself in a very short time by the saving of fabrics, that by the old process of washing were worn out more than by actual service. The washing has been hitherto a greater wear and tear upon garments than the wearing itself. The new Steam Washer secures a clear gain to all who use it. The advertiser, Mr. Tilton, is a thoroughly reliable gentleman, and will perform all he promises.—Methodist Recorder, Pittsburg, Pa.

TUNNEL HILL, GA., May 8, 1873.

JOSHUA A. HARLAN.

VALUABLE PATENT

TO BE GIVEN TO MY PATRONS.

On the seventeenth of May, 1864, I obtained letters-patent of the United States (No. 42,806) for making soap. Since I invented and patented my first STEAM WASHER, in 1871, I have given the matter of washing clothes much attention. I flatter myself that I have at last succeeded in making a soap which I think ought to be used in every family. I am not in the business of manufacturing, therefore I propose to give the benefit of my discovery to the purchasers of the Steam Washer, believing that I may be indirectly benefited by knowing that all who test the Steam Washer with this soap will do better work than with a poor article of soap. Could all persons know the extensive frauds in soap, the vile adulterations, none would be surprised if the washer-woman did fail sometimes to do good work. By my invention soap can be made pure and white as snow, costing but one cent per pound. It can be made to cost ten cents per pound, and worth as much, and go as far as any three pounds of soap. It can be used in a liquid form, bottled for use (Spirits of Soap.) It is cheap, easily made, and no doubt will be generally used.

Bear in mind I charge nothing for this right.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

In 1871 I invented and secured letters-patent for an Improvement in Wash-Boilers,

a simple arrangement by which steam was applied to the washing of clothing. I have heretofore sold this under the name of STEAM WASHER!

OR WOMAN'S FRIEND,

for such it is in fact. I have advertised it in nearly every Religious Newspaper in the United States and Canada, also in the leading secular papers, using double-column advertisements. The readers of this circular may remember seeing my Card in the various papers of the country during the past year. Extracts from letters received from my customers, also from the press, in another column, will indicate how it has been received by the people and press throughout the country.

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND have been sold already. It is sufficient for my purpose to say that I am satisfied that nothing heretofore advertised ever rendered so general satisfaction. Yet THIS, my first invention, was not quite perfect. And for the last two years I have applied myself to the study of constructing and perfecting a and as the result of my efforts I feel every assurance that I have been entirely successful. My NEW STEAM WASHER, patented in 1873, is absolutely faultless; so much so that I never knew a single person, who has seen it work, fail to be delighted with it. It has rendered, thus far,

NEW STEAM WASHER

Perfect and Universal Satisfaction, and such must be the result, for it works like a WONDER, never failing to do all claimed for it.

In conclusion let me say that should any one say that he has seen a STEAM WASHER, ask him if he has seen the

NEW STEAM WASHER

of 1873, now being advertised so extensively in whole-page advertisements. If he answers in the negative, request him to suspend judgment until a sample can be procured and fully tested. I will send one as just half the retail price—and I fully warrant it. After a person buys a sample he can get them of me at cost.

$60 Profit Can be Made on a Single Dozen, and I have known Agents to take orders for

A DOZEN IN AN HOUR.

There is no way to make money faster. Send for a sample, and secure your territory. Make money while you can.

I have made arrangements by which I can hereafter furnish my customers with the very best in the market, and will send a sample for $8; case of six (6,) $48; per dozen, $90. No change in prices.

WILL CLEANSE YOUR CLOTHES WITHOUT RUBBING!

EVERY ONE SOLD IS FULLY WARRANTED.

It Saves Labor, Wear and Tear, and the Annoyance of Wash-Day.

IT WILL DO THE WASHING OF THE FAMILY

WHILE YOU ARE

EATING BREAKFAST AND DOING UP DISHES.

STEAM HAS LONG BEEN KNOWN AS THE MOST POWERFUL AGENT IN removing dirt, grease and stains from clothing, and bleaching them white. Papermakers have for many years used steam in cleaning and bleaching their rags, and they succeed in making, by its agency, the filthiest pickings from the gutter perfectly pure and white. Until the invention of the STEAM WASHER or WOMAN'S FRIEND, although often attempted, no method had been discovered of applying steam directly to the clothing which could be used in a portable manner for domestic purposes. The WOMAN'S FRIEND washes without labor. It will do the washing of an ordinary family in thirty minutes to an hour. The STEAM WASHER is superior to all other devices for the following reasons:

1. It does its own work, thereby saving a large portion of the time usually taken in a family.
2. It uses much less soap than is required by any other method.
3. It requires no attention whatever while the process of cleaning is going on. A lady can do her washing while she is eating her breakfast and doing up the breakfast dishes.
4. Clothing wears double the time, washed in this Washer, that it will washed by a machine, or by hand-labor or a washboard.
5. Lace curtains and all fine fabrics are washed in a superior manner. For flannels this Washer is most desirable, as it will not full them, as a machine or hand-rubbing does. All fabrics, from the finest lace to a bed-blanket, can be washed perfectly and with ease without the rubbing-board.

It is Truly a Labor and Clothes-Saving Invention.

READ THE FOLLOWING

CIRCULAR AND TESTIMONIALS.

I respectfully ask you to read this circular carefully, and candidly consider what I now propose to you as a matter of business. Before making known to you my confidential terms, permit me to state that the matter of washing clothes is one of no small consideration. It is something which concerns every family and every individual. It is but recently since Hand-Washing was in common use. Latterly, however, the inventive genius of the country has been directed to the invention and construction of various devices of machinery by which much of the labor, drudgery, loss of time and wear of material might be obviated. Ponderous as well as intricate Washing Machines have been constructed, many of which are decided improvements over the old method of washing, and these machines have been very suitable with all. People will continue to have Washing Machines; but, let me ask you, if the STEAM WASHER can be constructed for a few dollars (much less than an ordinary Washing Machine,) and enable all to wash by steam, without labor, loss of time, without wearing of clothing, etc., is it not reasonable to suppose that it will supersede, in a great measure, all Washing Machines now in common use? The sale of this WASHER is unparalleled, and must be so. There is nothing like it in use. It is new, and every family needs it and will have it. I wish to secure a few good men to sell rights for me, and in order to secure as many as I need immediately I offer extra inducements. My price for territory is $9 for 1,000 inhabitants; but if you will buy a single county, and agree to sell rights for me, I will allow you to deduct sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. as your commission; consequently your county would cost you but $75, instead of $225, should it contain but 25,000 inhabitants; more or less in the same proportion.

And to those buying rights I will sell Washers at nearly cost; and to those not buying rights I will furnish Washers at $60 per dozen; and, bear in mind, I will sell to no one, except a single dozen, until he first buys the right to a county. Any timer can make the Washers as well as they can be made here, and save the cost of transportation. Remember that by purchasing the right of a single county you shall have the privilege of selling any county or State for me, and upon application I will forward the deed to you by express for any territory which you have sold for me; providing that the said territory is not already disposed of when I receive your order. I will make all the deeds, so that there can be no confusion or mistakes. The amount you will have to pay me is simply $3 per 1,000 inhabitants in any county or State. I shall make these very liberal offers for a short time only, after which I shall sell at my regular price—$9 per 1,000.

Many of my patrons have requested me to suggest to them the best method of selling the WOMAN'S FRIEND in order to make the most money in the shortest time practicable. In reply I would say that there are many methods which might be suggested, all of which seem to work well, but the most prominent of which I will suggest. In the first place, send for a sample and carefully test it. You will learn by a single trial how to wash with it most successfully. All you have to do now is to exhibit to others. I will suggest that you make an arrangement to wash at a certain place at an appointed hour; manage to have as many present as possible. You will be astonished at the intense excitement it will produce after the water and steam have rushed through the tubes and foamed over the clothing, rushing back through the clothing to the lower bottom, to be suddenly returned again in the same manner—say for thirty minutes; you take out the clothing, rinse and wring out, and find the clothing perfectly clean. You will find all perfectly delighted with it.

You can take orders from nine in ten present, to be filled afterward, at $10 each. A single trial in this manner will satisfy you that the WOMAN'S FRIEND is a success, and will sell. Still another way, which is sure to succeed nine times in ten: After you have secured a sample, and know just what it will do, you can approach almost any one who has any inclination at all to engage in any business of this kind, and readily stipulate with him to take a Washer, or even buy a county, if it will perform all claimed for it. You will succeed ninety-nine times in a hundred in making the Washer perform to his satisfaction. You should in that case lose no time in ordering a new deed for your county, to be sent by express C. O. D., if not convenient to advance the money. You should meantime continue to take orders, and by the time your deed would come to hand you might have a gross sold. You should likewise arrange with a timer to make the Washers. The price will vary, according to style and finish. I have known some agents to sell as many as twenty Washers in a day. After you have introduced it more or less in your county, you can take another county, and rest assured that wherever you can get a single Washer in the neighborhood it will sell many more. Consequently, after you have sold a few hundred in a county, you can sell the right of your county for much more than at the start. You can calculate what your gains will be by buying a single county; but this is not a tenth part of what you ought to make, for while you are travelling you will meet with many men who want to make money, to whom you can sell rights. There is no business you can engage in which offers such splendid inducements. Besides, it is a safe business—no loss—and pleasant, because it renders perfect satisfaction. I cannot see how I can propose better terms. Should I allow my patrons to make their own terms, I scarcely believe they could make better terms for themselves and make more money.

On the receipt of FIVE DOLLARS I will ship you a complete Washer, as a sample, a copy of the Chromo, Patent No. 42,806, together with a Certificate of Agency, with full instructions how to conduct the business; and upon the receipt of the Washer you may have time to test it, and if you find it not as represented I will refund your money. The Washer retails at $10. After I send you a sample I will hold your county a reasonable time for you to decide whether you wish to purchase or not. I will furnish blank deeds, also blanks for taking orders, and will do all I can to enable you to succeed in the business. Let me hear from you soon, or your choice of territory may be taken by some one else.

ADDRESS

J. C. TILTON, NO. 10½ SIXTH STREET,
PITTSBURG, PA.

DIRECTIONS.

1. Soak the clothes over night in warm suds—in the usual manner. Rinse and put them through the Wringer.
2. Put in the bottom of the washer a quarter bar of good soap, or enough to make a good suds, sliced up thin; then fasten down the false bottom—see that the center valve is in the proper position; put in water enough to cover the cap over the valve, say about an inch; lay the clothes down smoothly, with the soiled parts well soaped, in the washer—not rolled up, but spread out, so the water can circulate freely—and carefully pack the clothes down; see that the fire is sufficiently hot to generate steam; when the water boils it will begin to flow up the tubes on the outside, at the ends of the Washer, and through the holes into the Washer again; after a steady circulation has been going on in this manner for about thirty or forty minutes the washing will be completed. Rinse well and wring out same as in usual way. Colored clothes must not be mixed with white. Use soft water for boiling always. If hard, use soda, lye, or make it soft in any other way.

If it is desired to bleach with the Washer, this may be done by adding a tablespoonful of borax or commerce to a washer full of clothing.

ST. MARY'S, Auglaize Co., Ohio.

DEAR SIR: Having used your Steam Washer for over four months, we are prepared to recommend it to the public as far the cheapest and easiest method of washing that we have ever met with. We have tested it thoroughly, washing very dirty clothing in it, and know it will do all that you claim for it. We have never had to rub a single article on the wash-board that has been washed in the Steam Washer since we have had it; hence there is a great expense saved in the wearing of clothing. We could not do without it.

MRS. K. A. COLLINS.

IMLAY CITY, MICH., Dec. 18, 1873.

J. C. TILTON, PITTSBURG, PA.—Dear Sir: I have just read a part of your six-column advertisement in the Chicago Standard. This led me to write this note. About three years ago a brother in the ministry made me acquainted with your Steam Washer. I sent for one immediately, and my wife has used it ever since, when her delicate health would permit. She has always esteemed it a Friend, and, having washed to day, she esteems it as much a Friend as ever. Three years' service ought to be sufficient to establish its reputation in a family. It has done so in my family. It has been loaned to neighbors, and was always well liked. My work as a minister gives me no time to engage in selling them, or any other secular business; but success to the Woman's Friend.

Truly yours, REV. J. E. BITTING.

P. S.—I wrote this simply in recommendation of the Woman's Friend.

The above are a few extracts from letters received. I can publish hundreds of letters from parties who have used the STEAM WASHER and speak in its praise. I have thus far declined doing so. I know full well how Certificates are looked upon. I have sold the STEAM WASHER upon its own merits. Thousands have used it, and it has given universal satisfaction throughout the country. I ask none to rely on what I say, or the commentaries of others, but let the Washer stand on its own merits. I would not ask or advise any one to engage in the business of selling Washers or rights unless he has thoroughly tested its work; and to enable all to do so, I send a sample Washer upon the receipt of $5 (half the retail price) and guarantee that, if not found as represented, I will refund the money. So there is little risk to begin with. I shall advertise it liberally hereafter. I refer you to the American Agriculturist, May, 1873, and the New York Weekly Tribune. I shall continue to advertise liberally in other first-class agricultural papers, as well as the leading religious papers throughout the country. I also refer you to my two-page advertisement in the Christian Union, October 8, 1873, costing nearly $2,000 each insertion. Of course my former patrons who have bought territory, as well as those who may hereafter engage in the business, will be benefited proportionately. I am convinced that the STEAM WASHER will be used in every family.

READER:

Please calculate the cost of my two-page advertisement in the

"CHRISTIAN UNION."

It consists of 1,480 lines. At regular rates it amounted to $1,750

EACH INSERTION!

I repeated this "Card" four times, because my first insertion (October 8) paid me

500 PER CENT.

During the last eighteen months I have inserted my advertisement, occupying one to two pages, in all of which paid well for the outlay; but the Christian Union ("the largest circulation of any religious paper in the world") pays me better than any. I mention this fact, for all can see how extensively I advertise my invention; and taking into consideration the fact that I sell it all must concede that it sells well, for no article will sell well enough to pay for so expensive advertising

Hundreds of First-Class Papers,

ENTIRELY ON ITS MERITS,

WITHOUT REAL MERITS.

If I can get a sample introduced into a neighborhood, it often sells

AN HUNDRED MORE.

Such a splendid chance to make money selling this invention may never occur again.

A Few Extracts from the Press.

Read the editorial published in the Pittsburg Advance, a live paper, independent, circulation increasing over a thousand per week. (Write the editor and send for a copy.)

"We would not knowingly lend ourselves to practice on our readers a deception; but after having thoroughly tested TILTON'S STEAM WASHER the wife says: 'Too much cannot be said in its praise. It not only requires a less quantity of soap than the old method, but it is a wonderful saving of hard, slavish labor over the wash-tub—the clothes, when coming out of the boiler, with only a little rinsing, thoroughly washed and fit to hang on the line.' She further says: 'I would not dispose of mine for five times its cost, if I could not procure another; or, knowing its merits as I do, were there no other way, I would deprive myself of some article of apparel, or the family of some necessary to procure one.'

"These statements are made after repeated trials of one of these Washers, and their truthfulness may be relied on. The principle on which the STEAM WASHER is gotten up will recommend itself, as soon as understood, to every thinking mind. It is so very simple that the wonder is that it has not been discovered before. We rejoice for the relief which this invention will afford those who have to perform that essential part of domestic labor—washing."

300,000 SOLD.

This does not probably represent one-fifth of the real number of Tilton's Washing Machines that have been sold. The press everywhere give testimony that Mr. Tilton's Woman's Friend is the best made or yet invented. Said a neighbor the other day: "There is no doubt about it; Tilton's machine takes away the drudgery of washing, and makes clean work with the clothes. I pity the family that is without it." There are over seven millions of families in the United States to be supplied with this great blessing—over seven millions that need and want this machine. Mr. Tilton makes offers to those who are in earnest, who are not lazy, and who are willing to take hold with him, and who have a small capital, to aid him in supplying these seven million families with his Woman's Friend. His offers are simple and plain, and very liberal and without risk. Our cities, our villages, our country headquarters, are full of men who need work. To all these Mr. Tilton offers plenty of work and good pay, and we earnestly urge all to write or go to Mr. Tilton, find out his terms, and begin business at once. See his big advertisement in another place. Mr. Tilton is honest and reliable, and the statements in his advertisement can be relied on.—Christian Standard, Cincinnati, Ohio.

TO THE INVENTIVE GENIUS

of this age is due the progress of our present high state of civilization as much as to all other forces combined. All industrial pursuits were prosecuted in a primitive form and manner. Muscles were the reliance for mechanical labors pursued, and a man's or woman's value was based upon the strength of these. Brain force has changed all this in the multiplication of substitutes for muscle force; and such is the extent of ingenuity in this department that it is now estimated that more work can now be accomplished by one-tenth of the population of the earth in one year than could have been done by the whole world in the same time two hundred years ago. Every class of industry has felt the influence of genius. Agriculture, manufactures and commerce have been stimulated into wonderful activity by it. Nor has the household been overlooked, nor the labors of woman neglected. The sewing machine is an example of what ingenuity has done for woman. It has multiplied her power a hundred-fold with the needle. The washing of wearing apparel and other textile fabrics by mechanism has been a problem that has employed the skill of the country, and without success, until J. C. Tilton, of Pittsburg, struck a principle of manipulation that is destined to supersede all other machines, and do away with all washboards. Howe has made his name immortal through the needle, and Tilton, in like manner will perpetuate his through an instrument no less important. Tilton's machine is simple, and may be managed by a child twelve years old. Mr Tilton's advertisement is but a modest exhibition of the operation and rapidity of this unique instrument for the family. It is one of those productions that carries itself into every family by its own merits, which captivates and elicits the admiration of every person who examines it. Mr. J. C. Tilton is a perfectly reliable man, and will do just what he promises in his advertisement.—Religious Telescope, Dayton, Ohio.

BUSINESS AND MONEY.

It is one of the charms of a business to enjoy the exclusive control of an industry pursuit that is a necessity to the people. The skill that will enable a person to perform in ONE HOUR what otherwise takes FIVE HOURS to perform develops an invention that makes its use a necessity. Such is the unity, embodied in mechanism, the United States government has declared to be property; and, in the form of a patent, has vested it with all the immunities and privileges of property. It becomes a real estate and its exclusive control transferred by deed of record, like real estate.

Thus parties may buy territory, and with the purchased ground exercise jurisdiction over the thing so bought without any fear of competition. This class of business all men covet. J. C. Tilton, of Pittsburg, is one of the favored few who has the ownership of the whole United States in a machine, simple, cheap and necessary. It will sell itself. J. C. Tilton proposes to divide this realtate. A more splendid and captivating opportunity for accumulating money, is merely offering this machine for sale, was never presented. Young men, if you want to be an integer, and not a cipher, if you mean to be independent, if you mean to acquire property, J. C. Tilton offers you a stepping-stone to reach your high aim. Write him at once, at Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and obtain a position of value to yourself. You cannot fail, with common sense and common industry, to bring you in a fortune.—Journal and Messenger.

MONOCHROMATIC PICTURES.

These Pictures, for beauty, durability and cheapness, take the lead of all other photographic inventions. Chemists and Photographers have vainly tried to introduce them to perfected form, and it is but recently that they were presented in New Orleans by Mr. H. BUSCH, of California, in such perfection of finish as to defy the criticism of connoisseurs in the Fine Arts.

Having secured the services of the above-named gentleman, I beg to announce to the public that I am now prepared to produce by this new discovery counterfeit presentments which, for fidelity to the original, will rival the touch of the great masters of art.

My prices are, for life size, $10; for life-size bust, $5; cabinet, $1; enlarging from card or small-sized tin-type into, with 8x10 frame complete, $3. Enameled cards and work in the latest styles also executed. Those wishing Pictures can send negatives.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the eighth inst.:

Louisiana and Mississippi	bales... 3,593
Lake	3
Arkansas	1,026
Mobile	581
Florida	3
Total	5,186

On Saturday the market opened under the favorable influence of an advance of ⅛d. at Liverpool, and sales of 16,000 bales, and an advance in futures at New York of 1 2-16@⅛c., which appeated to impart a stronger impulse to the demand, and about 2,000 bales changed hands during the morning, partly at Friday's improvement and partly at a further advance of ⅛@⅛c., after which the movement continued animated up to the close, and further negotiations were consummated to the extent of 2,400 bales, making the entire business of the day 4,400 bales. Ordinary, good style, sold at 14c., good ordinary at 15⅛@15⅜c., strict good ordinary at 16@16⅛c., low middling at 17@17⅛c., and strict low middling at 17⅛c. As on the previous day, the sales of the lower grades were mostly of kinds which commanded comparatively full prices, but undesirable and dusty lots, when pressed on the market, would hardly command more than nominal quotations. The falling off in the receipts had a sensible influence in favor of factors. On Monday the entire business was restricted to 1,900 bales. On Tuesday the entire sales embraced 4,600 bales. Prices exhibited some irregularity. The lower grades were offered pretty freely at previous rates, but elicited only a limited demand, which ran mostly on the medium and better qualities. These descriptions were held by factors either at the outside rates of the day previous, or at still higher figures, and the prices paid in most cases indicated a further improvement in good ordinary and the better qualities of about ⅛c., to which we have conformed our quotations.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 10,900 bales, against 5,800 for the corresponding time last week and 14,500 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 1,147,823 bales, against 1,150,463 bales to the same date last year, and the increase in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 206,735 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 101,620 to Great Britain, of 113,416 to France and of 137,121 to other foreign ports. TO THE SUFFERERS
WITH RHEUMATISM.

In view of the numberless sufferers afflicted with this painful malady, I feel induced to offer to the public my "ANTI-RHEUMATIC MIXTURE," which medicine proves to be the only successful remedy in this line, for it always gives instant relief, and in most cases cures permanently.

During the last fifteen years I have cured thousands of people, in this State and city, of this dreadful disease, with this medicine; and, what astonishes most, the patient recovered by the use of a single bottle of it. This medicine cures nothing but Rheumatism, and should the patient not recover by using the first bottle of it, that patient is not affected with Rheumatism at all. This being the first time of making my discovery known to the public after fifteen years of most successful results, I hope the sufferers will take advantage of this rare remedy, and by doing so add their names to the thousands already cured by it.

VOL. 20. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1874. NO. 21.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

BOSTON, May 13.—The Louisiana relief fund has reached altogether $44 500.

NEW YORK, May 14.—The annual meeting of the Bible Society was held to-day, William H. Allen, LL. D., of Philadelphia, presiding. Rev. Mr. Allen was elected president. The other officers remain. The annual report shows that the receipts during the year were $664,346; expenditures, $611,728. There were 841,662 volumes manufactured, and 215,779 presented and purchased, making a total of 1,057,441. Entire volumes issued during 58 years, 30,772,786; gratuitous work for the year—amount in value, $340.644; appropriations for foreign lands, $92,676.

LITTLE ROCK, May 16.—Both houses to-day passed a bill providing for the assembling of a constitutional convention on the fourteenth of July. The election will be held on the thirtieth of June.

The House declared all offices vacant where officials have not come forward and taken their places.

The Brooks forces surrendered to-day. All the Brooks men will be sent home without molestation. The Baxter forces will be disbanded as rapidly as the public peace will justify.

NEW YORK, May 18.—Nearly $1 500 have been subscribed here to-day for the sufferers by the flood in Massachusetts.

Rev. Dr. Thomas DeWitt, senior pastor of the Reformed Dutch Church of this city, died to-day, of pneumonia, aged eighty-two.

The council of the Reformed Episcopal Church, after several days' session, revised and adopted the prayer-book and adjourned sine die.

COLUMBIA, S. C., May 18.—Governor Moses and ex-Treasurer Humbert, of Orangeburg, have been indicted by the Republican grand jury on charges of breach of trust, with fraudulent intentions, and for grand larceny. Solicitor Butts moved that Judge Graham issue a bench warrant for the arrest of the parties. The judge reserved his decision until to-morrow.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Specials from the scenes of the Massachusetts flood state that on the west bank of the Mill river is the Goshen reservoir, larger by nearly one-half than the bursted Ashfield reservoir, to which it has always been reckoned inferior in strength. It is owned by the same men, whose own fortunes, with their own reservoir, have just been wrecked.

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 19.—There is great commotion in Columbia, caused by the attempt to arrest Governor Moses for larceny. The streets are alive with colored militia and with groups of citizens discussing the peculiar situation.

This morning Sheriff Cain, of Orangeburg, called at Moses' mansion and informed him that he had an unpleasant duty to perform.

Moses, guessing his purpose, and seeing the warrant in his pocket, told him that he would not submit to arrest. In response to the Governor's requisition, Brigadier General Nash (colored) detailed two companies of colored militia to guard the executive office and approaches. They are now on duty, around the State House and Moses' mansion, with fixed bayonets, and challenge all comers.

In Columbia, this evening, Governor Moses surrendered to the warrant, in compliance with the telegraph advice of his counsel, who had gone to Orangeburg to consult Judge Graham, who ordered the arrest.

NEW HAVEN, May 19.—Votes in separate bodies make the election of Eaton sure to the United States Senate. He was probably the most pronounced and denounced "copper head" of the whole North during the war.

FOREIGN.

MADRID, May 13.—A new ministry is announced this morning. It is constituted as follows:

Serrano, president of council and minister of war; Sagosta, minister of the interior; Ulloa, minister of foreign affairs; Camacho, minister of finance; Alonso Martinez, minister of justice; Alonso Colmenares, minister of public works; Romero Ortis, minister of the colonies; Rodriguez Arias, minister of marine.

Reports say that the Internationalists are becoming troublesome at Alcoy, and an outbreak is feared.

PARIS, May 13.—The Duke De Broglie declared that he will call up for immediate discussion the new electoral bill. The Left and extreme Right oppose its present consideration, and will make it a cabinet question. The debate will occur on Friday or Saturday.

The Assembly to-day re-elected Grevy president and all the vice presidents of the late session.

BAYONNE, May 13.—Don Carlos has revoked the banishment of the Duke of Santa Cruz, and recalled him to Spain.

BERLIN, May 14.—The Augsburg Gazette says that the arrest of the Russian Grand Duke Nicholas was not due to a political cause.

HAVANA, May 14.—Advices from San Juan, Porto Rico, state that the members of the Masonic lodge at Ponce Grande have been arrested by the police. The Boletin applauds the authorities for the attitude they have assumed against Masonry. It declares that the Masons in the Antilles are thoroughly in favor of the separation of the colonies from Spain.

BERLIN, May 15.—A dispatch is published, in which no names are mentioned, but which leaves the inference that the Grand Duke Nicholas was arrested in consequence of the disappearance of cert in diamonds.

LONDON, May 15.—The Czar and party reached Buckingham Palace at noon from Windsor Castle. Immense crowds lined the route of the procession from Paddington station to the palace. The Czar, Prince of Wales, Grand Duke Alexis and the Duke of Edinburg occupied one carriage, and Prince Arthur, the Princess of Wales and Duchess of Edinburg another. The latter was cheered vehemently, because it has been understood lately that there was some bitterness between her and the Princess of Wales in relation to a question of rank.

PARIS, May 16.—The government was defeated by sixty-nine votes on priority of measure to be voted upon, whereupon the ministry resigned.

PARIS, May 17.—MacMahon has accepted the resignation of the De Broglie cabinet, and has intrusted to Goulard the formation of a new ministry, which is expected to be completed to-morrow.

Goulard, on accepting the premiership, declared his policy would be to carry the constitutional bills through the Assembly and complete the organization of MacMahon's power.

MONTREAL, CANADA, May 18.—Arrangements have been completed for holding here, next October, a conference of the Dominion branch of the Evangelical Alliance, to which the leading clergymen and laymen of the various provinces of Great Britain and the United States have been invited.

LONDON, May 18.—The Czar went to Windsor Yesterday and bid farewell to the Queen. To-day he visits Guildhall. All the flags of the city are flying.

The Times and other morning papers say that the impression that the early dissolution of the French Assembly is unavoidable lately gains strength.

The Standard says it understands that the Queen will go to Russia in the autumn.

Immense crowds gathered this morning to see the Czar as he went from Buckingham Palace to Guildhall. The entire route over which the Czar passed was beautifully decorated.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times writes to that journal that the vote against the ministry in the Assembly on Saturday last, on the question giving priority of discussion to the electoral law over the municipal bill, means a speedy dissolution of the Assembly and the removal of the seat of government from Versailles to Paris.

The Count de Chambord has suggested the propriety of defeating any measures calculated to settle the government, as it now is, under MacMahon.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 18.—A fire last night in Galata, a large suburb of this city, destroyed one hundred houses, occupied mostly by poor Jews.

LONDON, May 19.—Count Dehoralloff, chief of the Prussian imperial household police, to day gave assurances that all the exiled Poles, with the exception of two or three known assassins, may return to their native country.

The Carlists, last week, attacked some entrenching parties beyond Bilbon, but were driven off with the loss of thirty prisoners. Sixty Republicans were killed and wounded.

The bark Alf, from Pensacola for Liverpool, was abandoned. Part of her crew were saved and landed at Liverpool.

ROMAN CATHOLIC INFLUENCE.—Feeling convinced that, whether as Protestants or patriots, we cannot too closely watch the open attacks or covert wiles of Romanists, we invite the attention of our readers to the following copy of the oath which is taken by the Irish priests, educated at Maynooth College, many of whom are now in this country, and are exercising a powerful influence in the Romanist Church in America:

"I, A. B., do acknowledge the ecclesiastical power of his holiness, and the mother church of Rome, as the chief head and matron above all pretended churches throughout the whole earth; and that my zeal shall be for St. Peter and his successors, as the founder of the true and ancient Catholic faith against all heretical kings, princes, states or powers, repugnant unto the same; and although I, A. B., may follow, in case of persecution or otherwise, to be heretically disposed, yet in soul and conscience I shall hold, aid and succor the mother church of Rome as the true, ancient and apostolic church. I, A. B., further do declare not to act or control any matter or thing prejudicial unto her in her sacred orders, doctrines, talents or commands, without leave of its supreme power or its authority, under her appointed, or to be appointed, and being so permitted, then to act, and further her interests more than my own earthly good and pleasure; and she and her head—his holiness and his successors—have or ought to have the supremacy over all kings, princes, estates or powers whatsoever, either to deprive them of their crowns, scepters, powers, privileges, realms, countries or governments, or to set up others in lieu thereof, they dissenting from the mother church and her commands."

"WIFE, what has become of the grapes?" "I suppose, my dear, the hens picked them off," was the bland reply. "Hens! hens! Some two-legged hens, I guess," said the husband with some impetuosity; to which she calmly replied: "My dear, did you ever see any other kind?"

From the Work.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. Allen and myself have just closed at Centerville, in the circuit of Bro. Whatley. I now hasten to give you the results of our labors in the Lord. They were not in vain. The entire membership was revived, encouraged and made strong in Jesus. Sinners were convicted, and on Saturday night there were thirty-five penitents at the altar seeking Jesus, but only one found him. On Sunday night we had a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and seventeen of those left at the altar on Saturday night were converted. Among these was my own wife. Oh, how thankful I am, how my cup of happiness is running over as I write! I feel much more like an itinerant preacher this morning. Besides the eighteen converted, others have covenanted never to cease seeking until they find the pearl of great price. Six joined the church. Twelve converted ones were already members. To God be all the glory.

Your brother in Christ,
W. V. TAYLOR.

PENNY LOCK, La., May 10, 1874.

REVIVAL IN SUMMERFIELD, ALABAMA.—Mr. Editor: I wrote you, early in the year, that we confidently looked forward to prosperity in the church in Summerfield. The time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord has come. We commenced protracted services on the twenty-sixth of April. The church was prepared for it, and entered into the work with spirit. Very nearly all the pupils of both schools, and most of the young of the community, have professed religion. The conversions were generally clear and powerful. Up to date we have received about forty accessions to the church, including a few who joined by letter previous to the commencement of the meeting.

Dr. Mitchell and Bros. Briggs and Edwards were present a part of the time, and rendered valuable services. Bros. McVoy, Massey, Starr, and a faithful band of devout women, did incessant and efficient work throughout the meeting.

R. S. WOODWARD.

SUMMERFIELD, May 8, 1874.

THE Levant Herald says: "Archæologists have of late years turned their attention to the recovery of the vast remains of antiquity which are known to abound all over Turkey, Cyprus, Ephesus, Nineveh, the Troad and other classical sites have been probed with pick and spade, and the search has generally been productive of discoveries valuable alike to the speculator and to the student. Hitherto the search has been directed rather to objects of early antiquity than to those relics of the middle ages of which Crete and Rhodes are the principal repositories, but which are found scattered in the shape of old fortresses and castles along the shores of the Mediterranean. Founding expectation upon the popular tradition, a company is now, it appears, soliciting from the Turkish government a firman for dredging the port of Rhodes for the bronze guns and culverins which are said to have been committed to the waters in the times of the heroic struggle between the Knights of St. John and the mighty Solyman. The petitioners offer to give government one-third of that they may recover. Speculation, rather than archæology, is supposed to be the main incentive in the proposed enterprise, the undertaking of which can, however, do no harm, and may lead to useful and interesting results—perhaps to the recovery of the Colossus of Rhodes. Keep an eye on these dredging operations, for besides the Colossus there were at Rhodes three thousand other statues, one hundred of which were colossal, and which no doubt have at some time or other been pitched into the water.

DEATH OF REV. WHITEFIELD HARRINGTON.—Since our last issue the following painful intelligence has reached us:

MR. EDITOR: Rev. Whitefield Harrington died this morning, at his residence near Camden, Madison county, Mississippi, of pneumonia. He was taken sick on the second instant, on his return home from Jackson, Tennessee, where he had gone to promote the interests recently committed to him by the Patrons of Husbandry. He died as he had lived—a true and faithful man of God. He was for many years a member of the Mississippi Conference, but located at its last session in Brandon. He will be buried in Holmes county, in the family burying ground, where sleep his father and mother and other kindred. Your brother,

R. J. JONES.

CANTON, Miss., May 12, 1874.

A more extended obituary will appear soon.

IS GOD with us? What more do we want? Omniscience, omnipotence and infinite love—are all these leading the van? Then we will not fear to follow, though it were into Hades itself; for if Jehovah led the way his saints would be safe even there. Treasure up that direction. Do not think so much of the presence of friends in trouble as the presence of God in trouble. "Fear not." What is the next word? "I am with thee; be not dismayed." What is the next sentence? "I am thy God." The richest consolation you can have is that which is derived from the presence of the Lord God of the covenant.—Spurgeon.

Report of College of Bishops

ON THE RELIGIOUS CONDITION OF THE COLORED PEOPLE.

We respectfully submit to the General Conference the following report:

The General Conference of 1866 directed that if our colored membership should desire it, and whenever, in our godly judgment, it was expedient, we should organize them into an independent ecclesiastical body. We formed several Annual Conferences, composed of colored preachers belonging to our communion, but had gone no further in this direction when the General Conference of 1870, approving what had been done, renewed the authority upon the former terms for a separate General Conference jurisdiction of the colored churches.

At the same time the following resolution was adopted: "That all trustees now holding church property for the use of our colored membership be instructed to make titles to said property to the properly constituted trustees of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church South, according to the Discipline of said church when organized."

The experiment, so far as made, proving satisfactory, and a very general and earnest desire having been expressed by our colored preachers and members for the consummation of their church order and independence, we called for them a General Conference, to meet in Jackson, Tennessee, December 16, 1870. Eight Annual Conferences sent delegates, elected on the basis of our Discipline. Two of our Bishops were present and presided, by whom, on the twenty-first of December, and according to our form, two superintendents, elected by the body, were ordained. A Discipline was established, agreeing in creed and polity with our Discipline, and but slightly changed in its statutory provisions so as to suit their case. Exercising the right belonging to them, and expressly recognized by the enabling act, they chose for their name and title "The Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America." Their proceedings were in excellent order and spirit throughout.

Thus organized, and with our best advice and blessing, the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America was started upon its career. They have their mission; it is an important one, and in some sense peculiar. They have kept faithfully, so far as we are advised, to the rules adopted for their guidance, and to the work proposed to be done. We believe they are doing good. It is characteristic of this colored church that they guard against being subsidized by politicians. One rule of their Discipline is that their church-houses shall not be used for political speeches and assemblies. While exercising their right as citizens unrestrained, they are endeavoring to keep their religious assemblies from that complication with political parties and demagogues that has been so damaging to the spiritual interests of the colored people of the South.

Our people extend their sympathy and aid to the organization. They have, in many cases, given them church-lots and helped them to build houses for religious worship. Wherever they are prepared to receive them, our trustees have turned over the titles and possession of churches that were formerly held for the use and benefit of our colored members. In some notable instances these trustees have stood the expense of law suits against intrusionists in order to put our colored brethren, who are the rightful claimants, into possession.

Though entirely independent of us, and self-governing in every respect, nevertheless the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America do not forget their old acquaintance and the friendly relations of the past. They have shown diligence as well as fidelity thus far, and we entertain good hopes for their future prosperity. We think the best religious welfare of the colored people in the Southern States is involved in their success.

They have now 4 Bishops, 15 Annual Conferences, 607 traveling preachers, 518 local preachers, 74,799 members, 535 Sunday schools, 1,102 teachers and 49,955 Sunday school scholars. They have a monthly paper, the Christian Index, which is self-sustaining. It has a circulation of 1,500 paying subscribers. They have a book store, which is beginning to attract the attention of their people, and is helping to extend a religious literature among them. Our Publishing House gives to them the most favorable terms, and is aiding them in providing a suitable and cheap Sunday school literature. We recommend that still larger facilities in this direction be extended, as our agent may be able to do it. Among the many difficulties they have to contend against, not the least is the want of a ministry capable of teaching and taking pastoral oversight of the multitudes of their race that are ready to put themselves under their spiritual care. For this felt want they are, with commendable energy, trying to make provision. They are endeavoring to build a school of training and education for this special purpose. We heartily commend their cause to the good will of all who would do a great work for the Master's cause.

Since your body has been in session the four Bishops of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America have called upon us, and we have been encouraged at the account of their plans and progress in the work now committed, as we believe, under the guidance of Providence, into their hands. Resolutions were adopted by us expressive of this feeling, and of a purpose, while attending to our appropriate labors, to do all that lay in our power to help forward their branch of Methodism. A copy of these resolutions was communicated to them by our secretary. In acknowledgment of the same we have received a communication from them, which we take the liberty of submitting to you, and making it a part of this report:

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 12, 1874.

To the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Greeting:

DEAR FATHERS AND BRETHREN—We, the College of Bishops of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, have received your friendly greeting. We are much gratified to know that there is no strife existing between our churches. While we are a separate and independent ecclesiastical body from your church, by the authority of your General Conference, which made provision, at their sessions in 1866 and 1870, for the colored members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South to be set up into a separate body, and be their own guides and governors if they requested it, we are thankful to you as a church and to God that such a provision was made, believing, as we do, that it is best for both white and colored to have separate churches and schools.

We believe this will do much to promote the peace and prosperity of both white and colored churches.

We are gratified that, so far as we know, the trustees of your church have turned over the church property held by them for the use and benefit of the colored members wherever we have called on them to do so, which has increased the confidence of our people in the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

We are much gratified with the success of your Publishing House at Nashville, and trust that it may prove a great blessing to both white and colored. We have opened a book house here in the city, and we are gratified to inform you it has been a success so far. The Christian Index, our church organ, is doing well. Our church is suffering more from the want of a better-informed ministry than from any other cause.

We are now raising means for the erection of an institution of learning for the training of our ministers. We have raised several hundred dollars, and think that we will succeed. We trust to have the prayers and co-operation of your people generally. We are glad that there is one branch of the Colored Methodist Church that sustains a friendly relation to the great family of the white Methodists in this country.

We have tried to carry out the design and desire of our organization in spreading Bible holiness all over the land. We have many difficulties, but thanks be to God, who so far has helped us to put to silence the reproaches of our opposers. We believe there is a bright future ahead. We trust that you may never have to regret that you set us up to manage our church affairs, and give the pure, unadulterated word of God to our people. We pledge ourselves, by the help of God, to do all in our power to educate and Christianize our race.

We have a large mission field in the South that is ripe for the harvest. We pray that God may give us more laborers to enter the field.

We have an eye on Africa, and trust that it will not be many years till we shall have men educated to send out as missionaries to carry the blessed gospel to our suffering people there.

W. H. MILES, Chair'n.
J. A. BEEBE, Sec.

We submit this information of what has been done by us in the premises touching the religious interests of the colored people; and from these statements the General Conference may learn their work and the state of their affairs. An epoch-making event has occurred in their church history during the last quadrennium. To us it seems the best course, and, under the circumstances, the only practicable course, that could have been adopted to meet the providential exigencies of the situation. Hitherto our church has not been unmindful of the spiritual wants of the large number of descendants of Ham in our midst. An army of missionaries, detailed from our ranks, has toiled in this field, and their labors and sacrifices have been great—their fruits have been abundant.

Our interest in this cause has not ceased—our responsibility has not ended. But as men who have understanding of the times it became us to adapt our plans to the changed condition. So far we think there is cause to thank God and congratulate the church on the success of the plan.

Let there be no slacking of effort, but a hearty and united co-operation of our people and churches in aiding the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, as they may have need, and in such way as may be agreeable to them and proper and practicable for us. And may God guide and bless them and make this church a chosen instrument in extending his kingdom.

Seashore Camp Ground.

The next camp meeting on the Seashore camp ground, two miles west of Biloxi, Mississippi, will commence on Friday, the twenty-fourth of July.

The trustees call attention to the following rules:

All persons having selected lots for the purpose of building tents are required to report to the trustees, one month prior to the date of the commencement of the camp meeting, whether they intend to occupy the lot; failing so to give notice, the lot will be forfeited and appropriated to other parties.

All tents erected are required to be of value not less than $40, and shall be completed at least one week before the commencement of the camp meeting.

The Rev. William M. Jordan is appointed surveyor of the camp ground, and allowed $1.50 each for fixing the lines of the lots, to be paid by the lot-holder; and to supervise the location of each tent, with reference to the preservation of the shade-trees.

Pleasantly situated lots are furnished free to persons desiring to erect permanent tents thereon.

A limited number of small tents unfurnished, and cots, with sheet and pillow, will be for rent at reasonable prices, and public boarding and lodging, to a limited extent, will be provided at a reasonable charge.

All persons attending the camp meeting are advised to arrange for their comfort by the erection of their own private tent, or making other suitable arrangements beforehand, and to this end are requested to correspond with the trustees: Dr. J. J. Lyons, J. H. Keller, B. O. L. Rayne, New Orleans, Louisiana; William Otis, John Ellsworth, Mobile, Alabama; H. C. Vaughn, Moss Point, Mississippi; G. W. W. Goodwyn, treasurer, Phillip Hallaran, secretary, W. H. Foster, president, New Orleans, Louisiana.

Pillow Prayers.

By these prayers we do not mean those which are sleepily offered after one has got into bed, because too lazy to kneel before. We refer to the communion with God permitted those who cannot sleep; who from illness or care, or some constitutional infirmity, are compelled to drag through the weary hours of wakefulness. To such as these prayer is an unspeakable comfort. God is then especially near. The deep silence of the night, the all-enveloping darkness which, as a curtain, he has drawn over the sleeping world, the helplessness and dependence in which all are laid, give the most impressive realization of his being and presence. It is good at such times, if you can, to recite to yourself passages from Scripture. With what force and sweetness do they come to you, and what fullness and comfort have they for the tired and sorrowing! So with familiar hymns, which indeed are utterances in other forms of the precious truths of the work. Many of these are doubly dear from the associations they bring with them—the fragrance of remembered hours of communion with friends, or special experiences of your own soul, or the histories of others who made these their devotion. But beyond all these is the sweetness of prayer itself. You can then talk with your Father with the utmost freedom and even familiarity. There is great relief often in simply telling him of our trials. It brings us a sense of his sympathy; it takes away the loneliness which one feels in sorrows which could be told in no earthly ear. So the restless pillow may be soothed by prayer. The tedium of the weary hours will be beguiled, and the night, which otherwise would drag its slow pace along, will quickly pass; and he who seeth in secret will answer your prayers. We remember a young man, in giving the history of his conversion, when about to make a profession of religion, stating that his first serious impressions were caused by hearing his father and mother, who slept in an adjoining room, praying for their children during the night.—Congregationalist.

MR. EDITOR: I am rapidly recovering my general health, but my throat is utterly unfit for active public use. My voice gives out after a very few minutes when I attempt to speak. My medical advisers insist that I shall be still, and let nature have time to restore the vocal organs. I make this observation here and now as an answer to all invitations to deliver addresses, discourses or lectures, and to save further explanation. In a few months I hope to be myself again, and then I will try and lend a helping hand.

Yours, C. K. MARSHALL.

THURSDAY, MAY 21, 1874.

Addresses of Delegates from the M. E. Church.

The following addresses by the delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church were delivered before the General Conference on Friday, May 8. Dr. Albert S. Hunt came forward and addressed the Conference, as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT, BISHOPS AND BRETHREN: We thank you, in the name of the church we represent, for the cordial Christian greeting which you have extended to us. The paper which has been read indicates clearly the nature of the trust committed to us.

We are here as the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to convey to you our heartfelt fraternal greetings.

It is fitting and necessary that there should be some formality in our approach to you, but now with these formalities we bring to you more than a message of words—we have brought to you our hearts. It is now well-nigh thirty years since your organization had its birth, and during all these years the graves have opened up their portals. A few venerable men still linger whose very presence is a benediction; but most of those who were our leaders then have been gathered in the home above. Let us hope that they are with us to-day!

To us who come as the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to nearly all of the people whom we represent, and, we suppose, to a large majority of you, those transactions of the past are known only as matters of history. Although perplexing questions have arisen during the last quarter of a century, among which there have been and still are honest diversities of opinion, we have reached the conclusion that while we must honestly consider them, there are many more upon which we are agreed, and it becomes us at the present time to look only at these. We desire the opening of fraternal relations. Our wish is that these relations should rest on no basis but that which is fully honorable to us both.

Indulge me a few moments while I refer to the considerations which have influenced us in our action; and, first, we must recognize each in the other the union, the living union, of each with our Lord Jesus Christ. And to me we seem to be standing together looking at the same cross as brethren in the Lord, being children of a common faith, redeemed by the same atonement, and moving together to the same eternal home; so we should clasp hands as brethren. But we are not only Christians, but Christians of a similar creed and a similar polity. Both churches cherish in our heart of hearts the peculiar doctrines of Methodism.

Is it not fit that we should take counsel of him who leads us both? Do we not hear to-day a voice from the upper glory enjoining upon us the great principles of charity and toleration? Let me call your attention to the following extract from a sermon of our common founder:

"Though we cannot think alike, may we not live alike? May we not be of one heart, though we are not of one opinion? Without all doubt we may.

"Every wise man, therefore, will allow others the same liberty of thinking which he desires they should allow him, and will no more insist on their embracing his opinion than he would have them to insist on his embracing theirs. 'Is thine heart right as my heart is with thy heart? If it be, give me thy hand.'

"I do not mean be of my opinion; you need not. I do not expect or desire it. Neither do I mean I will be of your opinion. I cannot; it does not depend on my choice. I can no more think than I can see or hear as I will. Keep you your opinion; I mine; and that as steadily as ever. You need not even endeavor to come over to me, or bring me over to you. I do not desire you to dispute these points, or to hear or speak one word concerning them. Let all opinions alone on one side and the other; only give me thine hand."

This voice is from the founder of our faith—let us live as brethren. It may be that, standing upon this plain of a common brotherhood, many controverted questions would be easily and harmoniously adjusted. Be this as it may, let us love one another as children of one common faith.

Pardon me for detaining you longer with another point. More than three-quarters of a century after the first Wesleyan preachers landed upon our shores we had a common history. Whatever the future may unfold, this fact is fixed. We remember that some of the grandest results were accomplished and the richest harvests gathered in Southern fields.

My heart thrilled within me today when I heard that the chairman of your committee of introduction was a man directly connected by kinship with the first Methodist missionary to New England—Jesse Lee—who first preached the doctrines of Methodism amid the cold regions of New England Calvinism. He preached in a New England town, and gathered together a few in a Methodist class. Five names were on his class-book. Two of them were my kindred, one was my ancestor in a direct line, and to-day the first Methodist preacher of New England looks on those first gathered in by his ministry, and then down upon these, the descendants of both greeting each other in Christian brotherhood. (Great applause.)

I hold in my hand a letter from Francis Asbury, addressed to one of my ancestors, and filled, as were all his productions, with the very marrow of history. (Here was read the letter.) And on the reverse we have one from Henry Boehm, who, now in his one hundredth year, lives to preach the gospel of our common Lord.

So in the bond of a common history we come to you to-day. To our common Methodism broad fields are opening upon every side, and we have been able to show to our generation that there is a living meaning in enthusiasm. You will remember that in times past Archbishop Tillotson proposed a remedy for enthusiasm, and Bishop Lavington held Wesley and other Methodists up to scorn. But things have changed, and now even secular essayists are lauding enthusiasm as the grandest element of power.

It is not excitement—enthusiasm is strong, steady, inward, exultant! Lexicographers have wrangled as to the meaning of the word. One of our leading lexicographers derives it from sacrifice, others from God. We, as Methodist preachers, care not for this strife of words; we take it as it is, and go forth to conquer in our Master's name, feeling that if we have the Spirit of God with us we shall be willing to sacrifice to achieve glory for the cause we have espoused. (Great applause.)

Another precious relic I desire now to call up. It is dated at Charleston, 1786, and directed to Freeborn Garrettson, in Nova Scotia. And when I remember that this was before the days of railroads and steamships, my heart is stirred up within me as I read these words. (He here read the letter.)

Would that God would help us to struggle with difficulties, and crown our struggles with victories like these. And listen, sir; in the midst of the hard realities of which he speaks, we find this parenthesis: "Dear Fletcher is dead—dear Fletcher is dead." He pauses for a moment and then goes on: "Now my advice is: Act by mature and united counsels, live in love, seek nothing but the glory of God, preach faithfully the Methodist doctrine, and strictly but lovingly enforce the Methodist discipline."

And this is in 1786. Is there any living link to bind us to that day? In the providence of God you have seated on the platform to-day a man whose life spans all the long years of the eventful period which has elapsed since then.

(Turning to Dr. Lovick Pierce, and handing him the letter, he said:)

I bless God that your life has been spared—your life so full of labors and of grand triumphs. My heart is filled with gladness as I transfer to you this precious memorial. These, brethren, are links that bind together our Methodism in true and lasting Christian fraternity.

In the midst of great applause Dr. Charles H. Fowler was introduced to the Conference. He spoke as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT AND BRETHREN: I need not tell you that I am thankful that in the providence of God I am permitted to stand before you at this hour. It seems to me that, in a clearer and sharper way than ever before, I stand in the presence of the Methodist Church, represented in the delegates which you have received, and in the great body which is before me to-day.

Business, like breathing, cares for itself. Friendships have to be protected and fostered. The legislation of this great body may, like the mills of the gods, seem to grind slowly, but it must grind right on. The imperative command of the host behind you is: "Forward." The hard thing is to tarry a season, and give voice and opportunity to our more genial, and more distinctively religious experiences. It would not be lost time for Baron Rothschild to pause long enough, in the midst of his calculations, to find the pearl of great price. It is not altogether lost time for us to pause in the hurrying tides of life long enough to exchange greetings and benedictions, and I comfort myself in accepting the honor of your attentions, that it is no inconsiderable part of a delegate's duty to endure the speeches of his brethren.

You take Vanderbilt's check in your hand. It is not very heavy nor very large, but it is worth something. There are a stout old commodore and fifteen hundred miles of railroad back of it, and a great university in it. The speeches we make this day may not be very great or very weighty, but I hope they are worth something. There are a church and fifteen hundred thousand believers back of them, and peace and good will in them. In receiving us you receive not us, but them that sent us. A people, holding the seal of the highest, standing to-day in their doors and looking this way, will say: Inasmuch as you have received the least of these our little ones, you have received us.

I am glad that I am permitted to present to you the fraternal regard of this multitude. There are many reasons why we should find this flow of friendly feeling full of faith and truth.

There are three essential elements in church life, viz.: The creed, the form of government and the usages. Let us look over our patrimony and see how many of these are common to us as substantial reasons for fraternal relations.

In creed we are one. I know these are days in which it is popular to say: "Creeds are nothing. Men have outgrown creeds. Religion is a life, not some marks of an old black-letter parchment, which few living men can read, and fewer care to preserve." But I have not grown to such liberty and looseness. I believe in a creed just as much as I believe in a skeleton. A church without a creed would be about as helpless as a man without a skeleton. Nothing but a mass of jelly, which the nauseated swine might trample in loathing. While I believe in skeletons, with good spinal columns, like that of Andrew Jackson, yet I cannot say that I care to meet naked skeletons on the street, or be embraced by them in the house. I prefer them well covered and cushioned, padded out into rounded manhood; so I want a creed covered with the muscle and fiber and cuticle and beauty of a holy, benignant, loving, working, Christian life. A church must have the elasticity of youth in her step, the fullness of maturity in her form, the grace of liberty in her motion, the blush of the morning on her cheek, the light of eternity in her eye, and the glory of heaven on her head. She must be like the bow of the archer—an embodiment of beauty and strength. She must be central about some great dominating conviction. This means a creed. To my thinking it is no small bond between two societies when they have the same creed.

* * * * * * *

Behold our vast array of enemies—rationalism and rum, and a horrid host. Here I meet another enemy—greed of gain, the madness of men for wealth; not so much to hoard it like old-fashioned misers, but to lavish it on themselves and on their passions like old-fashioned prodigals. This ungodly greed must be slain in the church, and constantly rebuked out of the church.

Where can we find forces to mass against corruption in office and out of it? Where shall we find some that will tone up the public conscience and make it fatal to steal from the public treasury or betray the public confidence?

What guard shall we post about the sanctity of virtue? With what legions shall we trample out the social evil? By what power shall we shut off the flood of foolish and ruinous literature? How can the hosts of Israel be made to check the mighty on-rushing tide of worldliness? Surely we are not only born from heroic stock, but we are also born into heroic work. Sometimes when I look over my appointments, such as are common in these days, with good church edifice and furnished parsonage, and organized society and responsible trustees, and certain support, and see these as the fruit of the labors of heroic, kingly and godly-anointed souls, who had such kinship with the Almighty that they could speak light out of darkness, call order out of chaos, and create a church out of nothing, I have felt not a little humiliated at not being counted worthy of some more perilous post. Two years ago I stood in the ashes of one of our desolated cities, and saw our church enterprises prostrate and our brethren pensioners upon public benevolence. I stood there in the little council, surrounded by some of the old veterans who had camped there by the old fort before there was any city; who had toiled on through all hardships for the church; who had prayed at the planting of every charge, and watered each new sprout with anxious tears. I looked upon them—old, bowed and trembling—and saw the sparkle of the old fire in their weeping eyes. I never felt more grateful for anything than I did that hour for the vigor of early life, and for the privilege of trying to repeat the work of the worn heroes about me. Standing where I do this hour, surrounded by the princes of Israel, before this host of skilled and valiant warriors, it seems a poor test of a man's metal to be a saint in these days. But when I look forth upon the enemy, see his hosts moving down upon the church from all quarters and with all weapons, open infidels charge in solid squares, scoffers overawing the recruits, scientists trying to cut off supplies, naturalists sapping and mining the foundations, liberalists spiking the guns and worldlings poisoning the rations, then it seems to me no mean degree of strife. John Wesley or Francis Asbury might turn over in their coffins, and be glad to rise from their graves to scourge Darwin back to his ancestors. Adam Clark or Jesse Lee might count it all joy to cross lances with Huxley. The sainted Fletcher or the saintly Cookman could well afford to be translated over again for the privilege of clasping the arms of their prayer about Tyndall and his prayer-gauge. We are in no mean encounter. The enemies of God in these days must be met foot to foot and hand to hand, as of old. The hosts of Israel, like the squares of Britons on the field of Waterloo, must stand shoulder to shoulder, heeding only the voice of the great Commander.

Brothers, the one conflict of the ages culminates about us. Methodism is in the breach. Around the head of our column rally the moral forces of the universe. The shades of the mighty dead are watching every forward step. Hell trembles as we crowd together in the contest. The redeemed shout new victory as we forget self and all but the great cause in the hour of peril. As I stand in this presence—I do not mean this company of itinerants—I mean this cloud of witnesses, these contending hosts, this one imperiled cause of my dying Master—as I stand in this presence I am compelled to ask: What am I? What are you? What is any man in such an hour, that sufferings and persecutions should be considered for one moment? The other day in Congress Lamar, the honored son of Mississippi, said: "All occasion for strife and distrust between the North and the South had passed away, and there no longer remains any cause for continued estrangement. My countrymen, know one another and you will love one another." Forgiveness and charity must never find better examples and more living embodiments in political parties than in the Methodist Church. Our Redeemer, in whom we are freely pardoned, says: "Freely ye have received, freely give." Brothers, I look at you with straight, honest Northern eyes, and out of my inmost heart, in the name of our common Lord, our common faith, our common polity, our common usages, our common experience, our common heritage of heroism, our common inheritance of labor, our common commission from God—in the name of all that a Christian holds sacred—on behalf of the fifteen hundred thousand members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, I bid you God-speed. One in every essential element of our church life, let us also be one in heart.

Leaving organic union as a question of the future, let us make the union of our hearts the question of to-day, and make holy covenant that from this hour, one in sympathy and one in purpose, we will toil on, shoulder to shoulder, waiting patiently for that near to-morrow when there shall be one Methodism for mankind.

ADDRESS OF GEN. CLINTON B. FISK.

BISHOP MCTYEIRE AND BRETHREN BELOVED: I know there cannot be anything in your hearts but the greatest sympathy that I am to follow two Methodist preachers in addressing you. After being drawn hither and thither, and pulled about from place to place by your generous hospitality since my arrival among you, and taken to be run into as by a [illegible] steamship in a fog in this way by the preceding speakers, leads me to the conclusion that I am the first real victim of "disintegration and absorption." (Great applause.) But hear me. My eyes are truly glad to see the glory of this day. It is what I have ever hoped and longed for. May God keep us right. (Applause.) I know with what sympathetic feeling the people I have left behind me have said to us: "Go down yonder and shake the hands of our brethren in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ." I come to you with these Christian feelings, bearing to you the fraternal greetings of that body of believers who are joint heirs with you to all the glory of Christian achievement wrought out under the blessing of our common Lord in this godly land, through the religious system styled Methodism. In behalf of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who, through us, this day shake glad hands of fellowship with you; in behalf of her thousands of preachers and a million and a half of membership; in behalf of her Sunday schools and institutions of learning; in behalf of her mission stations, which girdle the globe itself, and in the name of our blessed Master, we greet you as brethren beloved.

As a reader of the records of Southern Methodism, I learn how much has ever been done by you in times past for the lowly, how much you have ever labored for the cause of Christ; and now, as Dr. Hunt has brought up his relics, I too, in rummaging about my musty papers, have found one that I will read you. Dr. Hunt didn't know I had this fixed ammunition in my arsenal; but now that there has been nothing left for me to say I bring this out. It is dated 1801. That does not seem very long to Dr. Pierce, but to some of us it is a long time ago. It is written from Perry Hall. Some of the Baltimore brethren may know something about Perry Hall. It is directed to Ezekiel Cooper, superintendent of books, etc., at Philadelphia. (General Fisk here read the letter, which contained the following sentence: "The African part of the company appeared to be on the stretch for glory." This created much laughter.)

And now I wish to turn this over to the Historical Society of the Vanderbilt University. By the way, I saw the old commodore some time ago, and said: "God bless you, commodore." He answered: "Hejgh; what's the matter now; been making anything out of Western Union?"

"No," said I, "but for giving my Southern brethren that $500,000 to aid them in establishing a university." (Applause.)

A friend approached me the other day on the subject of this visitation, desiring to post me about the great events of 1844, its plans, etc. I declined the information, and said to him that I was too young in 1844 to remember much about it, and that I was now too old to bother my head and heart on the subject. The contemplation of that wonderful plan of redemption wrought out through God's boundless love for fallen man is preferable. It will turn my thoughts forward and upward rather where are the hundred and forty and four thousand who with the Lamb are standing on Mount Zion, with their Father's name written in their foreheads—heralded with a heavenly voice, as that of many waters, and of great thunder, was with the harpers harping their harps as they sing a new song before the throne, and no man can learn that song but the redeemed from the earth, the first fruits unto God and to the Lamb. (Great applause.)

Brethren, may these past differences be buried beyond resurrection, and, as we gather around the graves of our mighty dead and mingle our tears over their dust, let us forget the things which are behind, and henceforth follow those only which make for peace. (Amen.)

A generation of mankind has passed on to the shores eternal since that June day, in 1844, which gave birth to events which thenceforth marshaled the sons of American Methodism under two standards. Yet both parties marched on under the one royal banner of the great Captain of our salvation. How many forms whose voices were then uplifted for the right, as God gave them to see the right, have joined that innumerable company who are not, for God hath taken them. They await the resurrection of the just.

"Fond memory to its duty true,
Brings back each faded form to view;
How life-like, through the mist of years,
Each well-remembered face appears."

We gaze upward through our tears to that eternal union in the skies, and thank God for the lives of such glorious men.

How fragrant the memory of those two strong-souled and faithful witnesses for God, and brave upholders of the standard of the heavenly King, who have rested from labors abundant with works following, and now sweetly sleep, the one on the banks of the Hudson, whose sparkling tributes from the sources of the North seek the great ocean, whose waters lave all shores, and the other by the beautiful Cumberland, which from summer climes pours its floods through Southern gates to the same sea.

As cliff of granite front opposes the widest waves which dash into foam at its base, so stood the beloved Bishop Soule; and by his side the equally beloved Hedding, of gentler mold. They were both strong in the supremacy of their convictions; brave in their endurance for the truth; patient under the severest toil, and calm amid tribulations and persecutions.

Their spirits blanched not with the lapse of time. Shrined in the hearts of the thousands of our common Methodism, their names are household words in nearly every hamlet, from the silvery lakes of the North to the Southern gulf, singing and shouting to the very last:

"O for a trumpet voice
On all the world to call,
And bid their hearts rejoice
In him who died for all."

To their dim earthly vision gleams from the inner glory revealed the shining towers of the heavenly city, and they longed for entrance within the gates of pearl. Living, they contended [illegible] of scriptural holiness over all these lands; dying, they left the richest legacy man can bequeath to the Christian church. The names of Andrew and Waugh will be loved and honored so long as there is appreciation of the highest style of Christian piety. Did ever Christian character shine in greater completeness before men than was revealed in the blameless and beautiful lives of Capers and Thompson? The earth is yet fresh upon the new-made grave of the one whose hand, just fifty years ago today, penned in an autograph album of Freeborn Garrettson's the following beautiful lines:

"Let me be tender when I touch
The meanest name to Jesus dear;
Lest my rude hand inflict a wound
Where Jesus' mercy drops a tear."

Thus in poetry did Bishop Capers write: "And the greatest of these is charity." And as there was music in the soul, so was there music in the very syllables of the name of Longstreet. Clear, strong and comprehensive in his utterances, yet his great, magnanimous heart was so filled with charity that no bitterness could abide in it. And there, too, were Smith and Olin, Early and Bangs, Lane and Sanford, Stevenson and Pickering, all of holy and sacred character. All these, with many others, for whose names appreciative words are crowding upon us, are of that part of the host who have crossed the flood and passed to the bosom of our God—garnered trophies in his kingdom, leaving to us the heritage of saintly, earnest and useful lives.

"Ten thousand times ten thousand,
In sparkling raiment bright,
The armies of the ransomed saints
Throng up the steeps of light.

"'Tis finished, all is finished,
Their fight with death and sin;
Fling open wide the golden gate
And let the victors in.

"Oh, then what raptured greetings
On Canaan's happy shore;
What knitting severed friendships up
Where parting is no more."

Could our fathers breathe upon us to-day from their mold—could their utterances reach us from the shining shore—would they not say:

"O for God and duty stand,
Heart to heart and hand to hand,
In all the borders of your land.

"Perish party, perish clan;
Strike together while you can,
Like the arm of one strong man.

"Let the North and let the South
With one heart and with one mouth
Speak the words befitting both."

And then across the gulf of ages there comes to us the golden words of the apostolic injunction, to us of the North as well as to you of the South: "Let all bitterness and wrath and anger and clamor and evil speaking be put away from you with all malice, and be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Differences there are between us, but can they not be adjusted by the great law of love? Is there not intelligence and piety sufficient in these two great Methodist bodies to work out an enduring peace on the basis of justice and honor to all parties? Cannot we find a few true brothers on either side, of the sort recommended by Jethro to Moses, as proper staff officers for Israel's great leader—men who fear God, speak the truth and hate covetousness? Let us prayerfully consider such a plan, and may we henceforward stand shoulder to shoulder in every good word and work, with our hands interlocked in uplifting humanity to light, hope, happiness and heaven.

General Fisk then read an interesting letter written in 1803 by Bishop Coke to Ezekiel Cooper. It was the story of a good man's love for the precious word of God. This letter the general also donated to the Vanderbilt University. In closing his address the general said: And now, my dear brethren, I can express for us all no better wish than that in our Northern and Southern homes we may through grace enjoy that peace of God which passeth all understanding, and that, by the blessing of our heavenly Father upon our fraternal Methodism, we may be enabled to carry the gospel of our Master into every habitation in our broad land, and that from every heart may be uplifted the prayer: "Arise, O Lord, into thy rest, thou and the ark of thy strength. Let thy priests be clothed with righteousness, and let thy saints shout for joy. Amen."

Obituaries.

DIED, at the residence of her mother, in Morehouse parish, Louisiana, on the seventh of February, 1874, Mrs. SUSAN M. ALDRIDGE, wife of Oliver C. Aldridge, and daughter of W. J. and G. A. Cheshire.

The deceased was a native of Alabama; moved to Morehouse parish with her parents in 1871, and had been married just one year and one day. Her beloved father had preceded her to the better world but a few months. She was reared in the lap of religion (Methodism,) both of her parents being members of the church and consistently pious. Her father was an ardent and earnest Sabbath school laborer. She had her religious training under his special charge in this great field of spiritual culture, as well as around the family altar. She possessed a sprightly mind, well cultivated and adorned with gifts and graces of the ever-blessed Spirit.

She joined the church at Pleasant Hill, Alabama, in September, 1869, and there and then consecrated herself to the service of the Lord. She lived piously and consistently, "abstaining from all appearance of evil." Not only did she avoid sin herself, but would not suffer others to sin in her presence without reproving them for it. Said a brother to the writer at her burial: "She was a faithful reprover of sin." She constantly sought to know what the Lord "would have her to do," and to avoid what she believed he would not have her do. She loved the Bible, Sabbath school and church, and was diligent and faithful, as circumstances would permit, in attending all the means of grace.

As a daughter she was obedient; an affectionate and kind sister; as a wife the sharer of her husband's joys and sorrows. She was taken suddenly ill while visiting at her mother's home a few days before death, and such was the severity of the attack that she became unconscious. Consequently she gave no testimony in dying; but more than four years of holy, consistent serving of the Lord is as sure testimony as can be desired as to the future security and happiness of departed loved ones.

She leaves a young husband, a mother, brothers and sister, and a large circle of friends to mourn the loss they sustain in her death. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

J. L. WRIGHT.

DIED, in Natchitoches, Louisiana, at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Theodore Haller, November 14, 1873, JACOB COLUMBUS PORTER, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. He was a native of Columbus, Georgia, but for many years a resident of northern Louisiana. In the fall of 1851 he professed religion and became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

In the death of this eminently good man we record the joyful release of a soul made perfect through suffering—one who has gone up out of great tribulation, and who now rejoices in the fullness of victory, and the blessedness of perfect rest after long struggle. He was a man of happy spirit, always cheerful, and earnest and honest in every pursuit. As a citizen his example was not only blameless, but praiseworthy, and his consciously exerted influence always in behalf of what was for the general good of the community. In his mind and heart the causes of education and of temperance were only subordinated to that of personal integrity and piety. His domestic relations were peculiarly blessed—a wife whose warm and loving nature, as well as fine judgment, made her a helpmate in all the conditions of life, and children who, without exception, grew up as honors and comforts to their parents, forming a household united in faith and love—a little Eden. The father struggled with adverse circumstances, always showing himself to be a man of pure integrity and tireless industry. But from the midst of this happy home Death, the destroyer, snatched away, in the noon of her useful life, the wife of his youth, leaving him stunned and almost paralyzed by the blow. Before he had rallied from the shock, two of his most lovely and helpful children were taken from him in the glow of early womanhood and manhood; also the lamb of his fold. God's ways are not as our ways, nor his thoughts as our thoughts. How inscrutable are some of his providences! He permitted his faithful servant and trusting child, while his heart was thus torn by continual bereavements, to be still further and most sorely tried by the loss of his earthly possessions, and laid him upon a bed of suffering. But man's extremity is God's opportunity, and in the midst of his afflictions the purified spirit of his faithful servant was strengthened not only for submission and endurance, but finally for rejoicing and for thankful praises. After three months of agony, during which he was ministered to chiefly by the sons who rallied to the rescue, as it were, from the brink of their own graves, he was taken to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Haller, the quarantine against yellow fever being removed. After all the varied and severe trials this heroic Christian spirit suffered, he was strong in faith and joy.

During the last week of his life his continual exclamation was: "God is good to the last. In him I have trusted all along." Whenever the delirium caused by pain and fever left him at all conscious, God's goodness and love was his theme. Blessed be God that he at length entered into rest, his worn and tortured body the very temple of the Holy Ghost unto the last. May their father's God continue to strengthen and sustain the surviving children, and preserve them pure and true to him, as he did that father in the midst of bodily and spiritual trial and peril, so that, after having lived and loved, sorrowed and suffered together here, they may be reunited in heaven.

"And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, or any heat; for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them to living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

THERE is a custom in the Church of the Strangers, says the New York Christian Age, which we commend to other churches. One of the mothers has an album in which is recorded the year, the month and the day of the birth of each child under eighteen years of age. At the beginning of each week she notifies all the mothers of the anniversary of any child which is to occur during the week. On that day all the mothers make special prayer for that child. The blessedness of this custom is that it turns the heart of the child to the parent, and the heart of the parent to the child. The child has its birth anniversary made solemn to it when informed that a hundred mothers are praying for its happiness and spiritual welfare. We need not suggest in how many ways this beautiful custom may be beneficial.

AS THE sun is reflected in a spring whose it is clear and limpid, so God is reflected in the soul of man when it is pure and spiritual.

PROCEEDINGS
—OF—
THE GENERAL CONFERENCE
—OF—
THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

EIGHTH DAY.

SATURDAY, May 9, 1874.

Conference met at the stated hour. Bishop Keener in the chair.

Religious exercises were conducted by Carroll Long.

The minutes were read and approved.

J. E. Edwards, chairman of the committee on Itinerancy, presented report No. 1 of said committee, which was recommitted on Friday, May 8. The report was read, and laid on the table under the rule. It is as follows:

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY—NO. I.

1. The memorial from the Louisiana Conference, and a petition from a number of German preachers belonging to the Texas and Louisiana Annual Conferences, praying the General Conference to establish a German Mission Conference, embracing in its boundaries the States of Louisiana and Texas. We have had the same under consideration, and unanimously recommend the formation of such a Conference at the earliest practicable period, to be known as the German Mission Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

2. The resolution signed T. W. Moore, for the Florida Conference delegation, asking that the Discipline be so changed as to place Key West, in the Florida Conference, in the list of exceptions to the four years' limitation of the pastorate, has been considered, and the committee unanimously recommend the adoption of the resolution; and recommend that chapter 3, section 2, answer 2 to question 3, page 61, be so amended as to read: "To fix the appointments of the preachers in the Annual Conferences; provided he shall not allow any preacher to remain in the same circuit or station more than four years successively; except the preachers stationed in Key West, Florida Conference, the book agents and editors authorized by the General Conference, secretary of the Missionary Board, the supernumerary and superannuated preachers," etc.

3. The resolution signed by W. M. Rush and J. C Wills, asking that "when an institution of learning is under the control of two or more Annual Conferences, it shall be lawful for the Bishop, presiding at the Conference within whose bounds the institution is located, to appoint to the pastoral charge of such institution, and of the congregation with whic it is locally connected, a member of either of the patronizing Conferences, without disturbing his Conference relations by transfer," has been duly weighed and considered, and the committee, by a large majority, recommend that the resolution be not adopted.

4. The resolution signed by G. M. Winton and George M. Jones, asking that the law fixing the membership of Quarterly and District Conferences be so amended as to constitute superannuated preachers members of the Conference (Quarterly and District) within the bounds of which they may reside, whether within or beyond the limits of the Annual Conferences to which they may respectively belong, has been patiently considered, and the committee concur in recommending to the General Conference the propriety of so amending chapter 2, section 3, paragraph 2, page 48 of the Discipline as to read: "The District Conference shall be composed of all the preachers in the district, traveling and local, including superannuated preachers (whether resident without or within the limits of the Annual Conferences to which they belong,) and of laymen, the number of whom, and their mode of appointment, each Annual Conference may determine for itself." And so to amend chapter 2, section 4, and answer to question 1, page 50, as to read: "All the traveling and local preachers, including superannuated preachers residing within the circuits or stations (whether without or within the limits of the Annual Conferences to which they belong,) with the exhorters, stewards, trustees and class-leaders of the respective circuits, stations, missions, together with the superintendents of Sunday schools, who are members of the church, and secretaries of Church Conferences, and none others."

5. The committee recommend the adoption of the following resolution, viz.:

Resolved, That the general book agent be requested to furnish each of the secretaries of the Annual Conferences, respectively, with a copy of the Journal of the General Conference, to be kept with the records of the Conference.

JOHN E. EDWARDS, Chair'n.

T. J. Magruder, chairman of the committee on Sunday schools, presented report No. 1 of said committee, which was read and adopted, as follows:

REPORT NO. I OF THE COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The Sunday school committee submit the following as report No 1:

Resolved, That in this our first report we would record our profound gratitude to almighty God for the large success that has attended the Sunday-school cause during the past four years, and we pray that the Holy Spirit may be poured out on ministers and people, until the energies of all shall be enlisted to fulfill the Master's command: "Feed my lambs."

Resolved, That among the many instrumentalities employed by the church, the establishment of the Sunday school secretaryship has been specially successful, and we recommend that it be continued.

Resolved, That we commend the Rev. A. G. Haygood for the faithful manner in which he has performed the duties of his office, and tender him the thanks of all the Sunday school workers in our bounds for the assistance rendered them in the Magazine and Uniform Lessons.

T. J. MAGRUDER, Chair'n.

MAY 9, 1874.

Adopted May 9, 1874.

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The Sunday school committee submit the following as report No. 2:

Whereas, Memorials have been referred to us by the General Conference coming from Holston, Missouri, South Carolina, North Carolina, Memphis, Mississippi, Louisiana and White River Annual Conferences, and from Lexington District Conference, West St. Louis; Hannibal District Conference, Missouri; Dalton District Conference, Georgia; also sundry resolutions from members of the General Conference, praying that the superintendents of Sunday schools shall be nominated by the preacher in charge, and elected by the Quarterly Conference; therefore,

Resolved, That the Discipline be so amended that answer 2 to question 1, section 5, page 114, shall receive the following addition:

"And shall confirm or reject annually the nomination of superintendents of Sunday schools, made by the officers and teachers of such schools, with the approval of the pastor in charge."

The article so amended on page 114, answer 2 to question 1, section 5, shall read thus:

"Each Quarterly Conference shall be deemed a board of managers, having the supervision of all the Sunday schools and Sunday school societies within its limits, and shall confirm or reject the nomination of superintendents of Sunday schools, made by the officers and teachers of such schools, with the approval of the pastor in charge."

T. J. MAGRUDER, Chair'n.

MAY 9, 1874.

Laid on the table under the rule, Saturday, May 9, 1874.

Linus Parker, from the committee on Sunday schools, asked the privilege to present a minority report No. 2, at a subsequent period. The privilege was granted.

J. B. McFerrin presented a communication containing an exhibit of the Publishing House from 1858 to 1862, heretofore missing, but now found and presented as a part of the history of the house, as follows:

EXHIBIT OF THE PUBLISHING HOUSE FOR 1862.

LOUISVILLE, May 9, 1874.

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, now in session:

REV. AND DEAR BRETHREN—It is known to your body that in May, 1858, the undersigned was elected agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, and the Rev. R. Abbey was elected financial secretary.

The "depository system," as it was called, was inaugurated at that Conference, and the book agent was required by the law of the General Conference to sell our publications to the depositories which might be established without any material profit, or at a little above cost. The agent faithfully carried out these instructions, while the Rev. R. Abbey labored to organize depositories, and to raise what was called a "publishing fund."

The exhibit of my predecessors, the Rev. Messrs. Stevenson and Owen, showed the liabilities of the house in May, 1858, to be $100,866.38.

To this must be added $7,000 for which they had executed their notes to John Locken, the book-binder, and which was not reported in their exhibit. This sum was left out by mistake or forgetfulness. Add the $7,000 to the $100,866.38, and you have the entire liabilities of $107,866.38.*

I continued in the house till about the middle of February, 1862, when I went South and remained with the army of Tennessee as missionary, under the direction of the Bishops and Missionary Society, until the surrender, in the spring of 1865.

When I left Nashville the Rev. R. Abbey took the entire charge of the house. On the fourth of March, 1862, he had an exhibit prepared, and endeavored to forward it to me, to be presented to the General Conference which was to have convened in New Orleans in April, 1862. That Conference did not assemble, and the exhibit was mislaid and not recovered till since the General Conference of 1870. I now hand it to the General Conference as an important chapter in the history of the Southern Methodist Publishing House.

The Conference will see what was accomplished from May, 1858, to March 1, 1862. Mr. Hugh Carroll, the present book keeper at the Publishing House, prepared the facts and figures contained in the accompanying exhibit. Respectfully,

J. B. MCFERRIN.

Read and referred to the committee on books and periodicals.

Minority report No. 2 of the committee on Sunday schools was presented by J. L. Davis and others, as follows:

MINORITY REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

DEAR FATHERS AND BRETHREN—The undersigned, minority of the committee on Sunday schools, disagreeing with the majority of that committee in reference to the manner of electing Sunday school superintendents, beg leave to present the following report to the General Conference on that subject, and ask that it be accepted in lieu of report No. 2 of the majority:

Whereas, No specific rule is laid down in the Discipline for the election of Sunday school superintendents; and

Whereas, Analogy and the reason of things indicate that the election of superintendents should be under the immediate control of the Quarterly Conference; and

Whereas, A large number of the Annual and District Conferences within our connection have memorialized the General Conference to adopt a rule making the office of Sunday school superintendent elective by the Quarterly Conference; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we recommend to the General Conference that answer 2 to question 4, section 4, page 51 of the Discipline be amended by adding thereto the following: "And to elect superintendents of Sunday schools on the nomination of the preacher in charge;" so that said answer as amended shall read as follows:

"2. To superintend the interests of Sunday schools and the instruction of children, and to elect superintendents of Sunday schools on nomination of the preacher in charge."

JAMES L. DAVIS.
THOMAS C. SMITH.
J. D. THOMAS.
JOHN E. RYLAND.
JOHN G. MOTLEY.
LINUS PARKER.
MORRIS K. TAYLOR.
F. W. ERNEST.
J. W. GOAD.
J. G. WALKER.

Laid on the table under the rule, Saturday, May 9, 1874.

The chair announced the members of the committee on fraternal greeting of the Methodist Episcopal Church, as follows:

A. W. Wilson, of the Baltimore Conference; L. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference; A. L. P. Green, of the Tennessee Conference; C. W. Miller, of the Kentucky Conference; R. Alexander, of the Texas Conference; R. W. Jones, of the Holston Conference; F. H. Smith, of the Virginia Conference; John L. DeYampert, of the Little Rock Conference; D. K. Pittman, of the Missouri Conference.

With the request, the General Conference concurring, that Dr. L. Pierce act with the committee as his health and strength may permit.

Various memorials and resolutions were offered and referred to appropriate committees.

On motion of P. A. Peterson the report No. 1 of the committee on revisal was taken up. The first item requiring the recording stewards to bring up annually the Quarterly Conference records to the District Conference for inspection, after exciting much debate, was lost. Yeas 100; nays, 121. The second item was laid upon the table. The twelfth item was amended by inserting the words: "The Quarterly Conference to whom he may apply." The report as thus amended was adopted. (See report in our last issue.)

Conference adjourned with the benediction.

* The liabilities of the house March 1, 1862, were $72,072.83. Assets, after deducting liabilities, $33,192.03.

Journalism in China.

The Chinese, who are excessively maligned because they invented gunpowder, do not possess any journals, and, in consequence, have no journalists. One solitary organ of publicity feeds, without contenting, the public curiosity. This absence of journals among a people who had discovered the art of printing long before the time of Gottenberg is curious.

The official journal, the only one of the species, is the Gazette, of Pekin. Each number forms a pamphlet, with a dirty yellow cover. Some numbers have twenty pages, some have forty. The typography is deplorable; the paper is extremely coarse. The characters on the right-hand page show through on the left-hand page, which sometimes embarrasses the reader.

In the palace at Pekin there is a little office, of which the employes have the duty of transcribing the decrees of the day, and sending them to the ministries, courts, offices and different ministrations of the city. When these decrees do not relate to secret affairs, these employes are authorized to print them and distribute them to their subscribers in Pekin. The Gazette, then, contains only what the government wishes to be made known.

The printing office is in one of the narrow streets which border upon Lien-Li-Chang—that is to say, the quarters of the book-sellers. The "cases," ranged against the wall, contain the wooden types, arranged in their order. The Gazette, of Pekin, has a circulation of many thousands of copies, which are distributed to subscribers in the city or sent in packages to the provinces. The price of subscription is about $6 a year, but many of the people content themselves with hiring the paper to read for a day, returning it in the evening. It is curious to find this system, which prevails in England with the London Times, practiced in China with the Pekin Gazette.

Still more curious is the strange obstinacy with which this people, so intelligent and thoughtful, persevere in routine. In the last century the Jesuits introduced movable copper types. The improvement was manifest; but this did not prevent, in 1820, a return to the wooden types, as if nothing had been changed in the interval. It would be very easy to import from Hong Kong a lot of metallic types, which would greatly economize labor and give a neater impression. No one seems to care anything about it.

The style of the Pekin Gazette is emphatic, and an attentive reader can gather much curious information concerning the laws, the finances and the institutions of China.

THE GOSPEL NOT GLOOMY.—The gospel gloomy! It is an anthem from the harps of heaven, the music of the river of life washing its shores on high and pouring in cascades from the earth. Not so cheerful was the song of the morning stars, nor the shout of the sons of God so joyful. Gushing from the fountains of eternal harmony, it was the first heard on earth in a low tone of solemn gladness uttered in Eden by the Lord God himself. This gave the key-note of the gospel song. Patriarchs caught it up and taught it to the generations following. It breathed from the harp of the psalmists, and rang like a clarion from tower and mountain-tops as prophets proclaimed the year of jubilee.

Scientific.

PROF. JOSEPH LECONTE, in a paper by Silliman's Journal, expresses the opinion that the whole theory of geology must be reconstructed on the basis of a solid earth.

THE explosive compounds known as lithofracture, dualin, dynamite, etc., consist chiefly of nitro-glycerine, more or less solidified by mixing it with sawdust, sand, or, as in the case of the dynamite manufactured in Europe, a siliceous, infusorial earth.

DR. T. R. LEWIS has discovered in the blood of patients affected with the tropical disease called chyluria large numbers of a new blood-entozoon, having an average length of 0.175 of an inch—being, therefore, much smaller than the trichina spiralis.

CANVAS and other fabrics may be rendered water-proof by first washing them in a solution of sulphate of ammonia, and then treating with some resinous soap. By this means there is precipitated upon the surface of the material a resinous alumina soap, impervious to water.

A NEW fuel is being introduced into Ireland. It is manufactured from the refuse which accumulates at the mouth of the coal pits; this is first crushed in a mortar-mill, and when pulverized is mixed with water, certain chemicals and clay; the mixture is then pressed or molded into cylindrical cakes.

THE Niagara suspension bridge is now about twenty-five years old, and has been even recently pronounced the "grandest and most distinguished achievement of art" in the world. Although of less span than the Cincinnati bridge, it is a stronger and heavier structure. Its span is eight hundred and twenty-two feet; its roadway is two hundred and forty-five feet above the water; its towers are seventy-eight and eighty-eight feet high; its cables are four in number and of ten inches diameter. There are four thousand miles of wire in the cables and stays, and the total weight of the bridge is something over one million six hundred thousand pounds. It has a factor of safety of about six. Its cost was $500,000.

GLOBE LIGHTNING is one of the mysteries of meteorological science which as yet has wholly failed to account for its various phenomena in a satisfactory manner. Its most obvious peculiarities are its globular form, and the slowness of its motion from the clouds to the earth, so that it can easily be followed with the eye. Its occurrence is most frequent in those localities where the danger from ordinary lightning is greatest. It was the belief of Arago—and his belief is shared by many physicists—that a person struck by ordinary lightning never sees the flash. With globe lightning the contrary is thought to be the fact. Sokyoff, an engraver, who, with Prof. Richmann, the physicist, was struck by lightning of this sort in the year 1753, subsequently recovered, though the professor was killed; and he distinctly described the appearance of the thunderbolt as a globular flame. Mr. R. A. Proctor states that it is in the power of the electrician to reproduce all the phenomena presented by lightning, except those exhibited by globe lightning.

HAIL STORM IN SWITZERLAND.—Prof. Kengott, of Zurich, states that a hail-storm, lasting five minutes, occurred at eleven o'clock on the morning of August 20, 1871, the stones from which were found to possess a salty taste. Some of them weighed twelve grains. They were found to consist essentially of true salt, such as occurs in Northern Africa on the surface of the plains, mainly in hexahedric crystals or their fragments, of a white color, with partly sharp and partly rounded grains and edges. None of the crystals were entirely perfect, but appeared as if they had been roughly developed on some surface. They had probably been taken up and brought over the Mediterranean from some part of Africa, just as sand is occasionally transported thence to the European continent and the Canaries by means of hurricanes. A still more remarkable phenomenon has been recently recorded by Prof. Eversmann, of Kasan—namely, the occurrence of hail-stones, each containing a small crystal of sulphuret of iron. These crystals were probably weathered from some rocks in large quantity, and were then taken up from the surface of the ground by a storm, and when carried into the hail-forming clouds served as a nucleus for the formation of hail-stones.

PROF. COLBERT, of the Dearborn Observatory, Chicago, thinks that the meteor which passed over an arc of 150 degrees, from Iowa to Ohio, in 130 seconds of time, on the evening of September 5, must have been a solid body, several feet in diameter. It passed quite through our atmosphere, narrowly escaping collision with the earth, possessed a velocity of 22 3 miles a second, and moved in an elliptic orbit, which from the attraction of the earth and resistance from the atmosphere must have been made quite eccentric, even to the extent of 20 degrees' change in the direction of its path. It was going nearly in the same way as the earth, which it overtook and outstripped at the rate of 5.3 miles a second, so that collision would have been comparatively light. When first seen, about 20 degrees above the western horizon, its distance must have been much greater than 45 miles; overhead it was 93 miles away; and when it disappeared in the east its distance must have been much greater. The limits of the earth's atmosphere, therefore, are proven to be beyond the usually assigned term, 45 miles; for light and visibility result from friction in the passage of the meteorite through the air. It is probable that only once in a century are we so closely approached yet missed by so large an aerolite. While we lost a splendid meteoric stone for some of our collections, we escaped a not very dangerous collision. The earth's mass is augmented by such falling bodies to the extent of 180 tons annually.

Religious Intelligence.

THE Pope has intimated that Archbishop Manning and nine of our Archbishops will be created cardinals at the next consistory.

THERE are now 50,000 Sunday school scholars and 4,000 teachers in Germany. Ten years ago there were none. This is partly the result of the labors of the Foreign Sunday School Association in European countries.

THERE has been a notable advance from year to year in the sale of the Scriptures in Cairo, Egypt. In 1867, for instance, 825 volumes were sold, and there was a steady increase, until in 1873 a total of 3,578 volumes were sold. The statistics are full of encouragement to all the patrons of the Bible Society, whose agent, Dr. Hogg, reports these facts.

A NEWSPAPER paragraph states the fact that a telegraph office, for the dispatch of messages in Turkish and foreign languages, has now been established at Bethlehem, on which the Observer remarks: "The message received at Bethlehem, in years long gone by, has thrilled the world: 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.'"

THE Jewish Baron Hirsch, of Paris, has given the Alliance Israelite Universelle $20,000 for the better education of Jewish children in the Ottoman empire. This society, whose headquarters are in Paris, is exceedingly active in the defense of Jews all over the world, and most especially in the establishment of Jewish schools in the East and in Northern Africa.

A PAPAL authority informed Dr. J. P. Newman that the former's church has in China "forty bishops, nearly 1,000 priests, 40 sisters of charity (who had thousands of orphans in their charge,) 60 colleges, with learned professors and many students, and 500,000 communicants." Even after proper discount, the remainder is startling, and should be stimulating to China.

AN official return of the number of Old Catholics in Germany has been made. In Baden the number reported is 10,000; in Bavaria, 15,000; in Prussia, 20,000. The total for the empire in May, 1873, was 50 000. There were at that date 92 organized societies. In the budget is an appropriation of 16 000 thalers for the support of Bishop Reinkens.

MRS. LUCY G. THURSTON was one of a missionary band that landed in 1820 at the Sandwich Islands. She recently attained her seventy-eighth birthday, which was pleasantly celebrated at Honolulu by her friends and neighbors. The Honolulu Gazette says: "Mrs. Thurston remains almost the only link binding those olden times of the early Kamehamehas to the more civilized reign of King Lunalilo."

DURING the past year the New York Methodist Church Extension and Missionary Society has met with great success in its work. It established 16 new stations, 23 Sunday schools, with an attendance of over 4,000 pupils, and appointed 24 pastors and assistants. The year's expenditures of the society were over $85,000. It is the hearty support given to such agencies as this one that gives to Methodism its "pushing" reputation.

SCRIPTURES TO FOREIGN PORTS.—The following statement shows the number of volumes placed, on behalf of the American Bible Society, upon American vessels bound to Roman Catholic ports, for distribution in such ports, by J. S. Pierson, marine agent of the New York Bible Society, during the last four months, from November 1, 1873, to March 1, 1874:

1873.	No. of Vessels.	Spanish Bibles.	Spanish Tests.	Port. Tests.	French Tests.	Ital. Tests.
Nov.	114	28	621	108	321	47
Dec.	115	60	442	102	270	48
1874.
Jan.	116	22	631	102	298	16
Feb.	94	8	414	296	60	34

Total for four months, upon 439 vessels, 68 Bibles and 3,626 Testaments.

The ports thus reached embrace most of the points touched by our commerce in the Mediterranean, in the West Indies and in South America, etc.

THE Rev. George Piercy, of Canton, at the British Wesleyan Conference gave an account of the counter missionary societies organized by the literati of China. One of them had raised in one year £25,000, and another society of the same kind had raised £10,000 in a like period. They had established twenty-three schools, and invited boys to come and receive education gratuitously. They also printed tracts and issued books in a popular style. Lending libraries had been established in Canton, and they had now commenced with hospitals, having purchased the palace of a wealthy merchant, and expended a large sum of money in adapting it. They had native practitioners, and invited people, if they were dispensed, to go to the native hospitals.

BOHEMIA.—A correspondent of the Congregationalist writes: "The people will not think; they have lost faith in the Roman Catholic Church, and this is to them tho same as losing faith in Christianity; and I suppose blank unbelief is the condition of very many. Indeed, some say: 'If we should stop and think, we should turn Protestants;' yet with all this indifference I think we have good reason to believe that many hearts are dissatisfied, and hear of salvation through Christ with the most eager interest. For they know nothing comparatively of the Bible here; it is an unknown book, or has been till quite recently. A good many copies have been circulated during the past few years, but the people do not approach to being supplied; and families of rank are to be found, and I have no doubt they are very numerous, who have never read the Bible at all."

THE Roman Catholic Bishop of Pernambuco, charged with setting up his episcopal authority above the laws of Brazil, was brought to trial on February 21, at Rio Janeiro. He was accompanied by "his lordship the Bishop of Kansas, United States," who came to Brazil to collect donations for the poor Catholic churches of that State.

After the defense the court closed its doors for a secret session. The doors being again opened, the president proceeded to collect the votes of the supreme judges, which stood thus: Six condemned the bishop to four years' imprisonment, with hard labor; one to short imprisonment, for the simple crime of disobedience, and one for the nullity of the whole process or for the acquittal of the bishop. "The Bishop of Pernambuco, therefore, by a large majority vote of the Supreme Court of Brazil, has been declared guilty of a high crime against the laws of the empire, and condemned to the penitentiary, with hard labor, for four years."

FROM the Sunday Magazine we draw the following summary of the work of the three missionary societies of Scotland—the Church of Scotland, the United Presbyterians and the Free Church Foreign Missions. The Church of Scotland mission is the smallest. It has four missionaries in India, viz.: one at Calcutta, one at Madras, one at Sealkote, in the Punjab, and one at Darjeeling. It has also a mission at Bombay, superintended by a European teacher, and a medical mission at Sealkote. Its statistics are very incomplete. Its income for 1873 was $40,580. The United Presbyterians have seven mission-fields—Jamaica, Trinidad, Old Calabar, Caffraria, India, China and Spain. They have 54 principal and 143 outstations; there are 43 ordained European missionaries, 8 medical, 5 ordained native missionaries, 2 native licentiates, 3 European male and 9 female teachers, 62 native catechists and 153 native schoolmasters. The missions have 6,630 communicants and 1,630 candidates. In 157 week-day schools there are 9,183 pupils. The income of the society for 1873 was $173,773, and $20,000 were drawn in addition from the reserve fund. A new mission is projected for Japan, and a special offering of $50,000 has been raised for it. The Free Church has mission stations in India, at Calcutta, and places adjacent, at Bombay, Poona, Jallore, etc.; Nagpur and Chindrara; Madras and Nellore; in Africa, in Caffraria and Natal; in Syria, at Mount Lebanon. There are 45 European and 196 native agents, 1,979 communicants, and 10,018 pupils in schools. The income of the Free Church missions for 1873 was $218,000.

General Conference Notes.

At this writing the General Conference has been in session two weeks. Resolutions, petitions and memorials during the first ten days were "thick as leaves in Valambrosa." The shower has now fallen off to an occasional dropping, and not many responses are made to the regular call. The reports of standing committees are coming in freely, and final action has been reached on many of these reports. Thus far no measures involving any important changes in the economy of the church have been reported from the committees or adopted by the Conference.

The occasion of receiving the delegates from the Methodist Episcopal Church, on Friday, the eighth instant, was one of interest. Being the order of the day for half-past ten A. M., Library Hall, including the spacious galleries, was as full as it could be packed. Bishop McTyeire was in the chair. Precisely at the hour the committee on introductions escorted the delegates to the platform, where they were introduced to the presiding Bishop, and afterward to his colleagues and Dr. Lovick Pierce. Then came their formal introduction to the General Conference. The addresses were exceedingly able and most eloquently pronounced, and were frequently applauded. The import of their instructions from the Northern General Conference, and the tone of the speeches, clearly recognize the existence of difficulties in the way of fraternal relations, and that this message of greetings is to prepare the way for their settlement. Their reception does by no means involve the establishment of fraternal relations, nor do we suppose that either General Conference regards such a consummation as at all practicable until the matters in dispute shall be adjusted to the satisfaction of both parties. The reception of the delegates has certainly been most cordial, and they have discharged their trust with signal skill and ability. The committee of nine, to whom their communication and greetings were referred, have not reported at this writing. We suppose, however, there will be a courteous response, and such action taken as shall leave no obstacle in the way of a just and honorable settlement of the questions in dispute, and which, until so settled, must be regarded as insuperable barriers to any formal fraternization. In due time, perhaps already, the report of that committee will be in the hands of our readers, and they will judge of its merits. Drs. Hunt and Fowler took leave of the General Conference on Wednesday, the thirteenth, each delivering a brief address, expressing the pleasure and gratification which their visit had afforded them. In connection with their departure the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the message of love and brotherly kindness from the Methodist Episcopal Church has been cordially received, and has been referred to a committee of nine, who in due time will formally and fraternally reply thereto.

Resolved, That we regret that the distinguished messengers sent by that church cannot remain to await the presentation and reception of that report; but, understanding that they leave us to-day, we are unwilling that they should return home without carrying with them the knowledge of our appreciation of their courteous and fraternal bearing among us, and our wishes and prayers for their future happiness and prosperity.

Considerable talk was elicited by the resolutions, some of it of a very gushing character and altogether out of place; but the vote on their adoption was large, though not quite unanimous.

Before the adjournment yesterday Prof. McIntosh, of Nashville, took the platform, and entertained the General Conference and a large auditory for a half hour with selections from the new hymn and tune-book which is about to issue from our Publishing House. The preachers joined in the singing of the Old Ship of Zion, and several other popular and well-known melodies. After a rather dry and tedious morning, this singing was like rain in a drought, and like dew upon the mown grass. A very refreshing episode it proved to be. The book will be out in a few days probably, and will be welcomed everywhere by our people. Prof. McIntosh ought to travel at large, and instruct and stir up the whole church on the subject of congregational singing. He is, we are informed, to be connected with the Vanderbilt University, and with special reference to teaching our theological students how to sing. It will be one of the most important features of the institution.

It has not been our fortune to hear much preaching thus far during the session. Of the members we have only heard Drs. Hanner and Key—both good sermons. The preaching we have heard of has been of a high order, and creditable to our ministry. Last Sunday night we heard a lecture by Rev. Dr. Stuart Robinson, on Moses and the burning bush. This was our first sight, as well as hearing, of this somewhat celebrated preacher. He is bald-headed, stout to corpulency, and of a large pattern every way. His manner is quiet, voice low and husky, and requiring effort, even in his moderately-sized chapel, to hear him. He reads from slips, which are withdrawn from the desk as he proceeds. There is but little action, and his whole manner seems to indicate the conviction that his discourse is worth hearing, no matter how it may be delivered. He takes no pains to make himself heard. This is the lookout of his auditors, and, if they fail therein, so much the worse for them. It is needless to say that the lecture was very fine, abounding in apt illustration, plentiful and telling references to the living questions of the day, trenchant exposure and denunciation of the prevalent vices, critical exegesis, and, best of all, Christ and him crucified. Dr. Robinson belongs to the Southern Presbyterian Church, and has always been a strong champion and vindicator of the Southern people.

For the last day or two many applications for leave of absence have been made for lay delegates. Our best and most valuable laymen are usually too much occupied with their business affairs to spend a month at a General Conference. It is to be regretted, for their services are needed through the entire session. We are now at the middle of the month, and there are signs of restlessness, impatience and hurry, which will grow more intense from this time forward. We are having the perfection of May weather—warm enough to suit our New Orleans systems, and balmy and odorous with bursting buds and opening flowers.

NINTH DAY.

MONDAY, May 11, 1874.

Conference met at the appointed hour, Bishop Keener in the chair.

After religious exercises Bishop Paine took the chair and called for reports of standing committees.

The committee on books and periodicals presented report No. 2 of said committee, which was read, and elicited much discussion.

The following amendment was offered by C. I. Vandeventer and A. H. Redford:

"Provided, The publishing agent at Nashville and the book committee shall not transfer the property referred to without the consent of the patronizing Conferences."

The report, with the proposed amendment, was recommitted.

Report No. 2 of the committee on revisal was presented and laid on the table under the rule. It is as follows.

REPORT NO. 2 OF THE COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

Your committee have considered sundry resolutions and memorials, and offer the following as the result of their deliberations:

1. A resolution of T. Polk and A. T. Scruggs, recommending that the word "amount," in answer to question 1 on page 100 of the Discipline, chapter —, section 15, be stricken out, and the "answer" be so amended that the paragraph shall read:

"Answer.—To attend the district stewards' meeting for the purpose of estimating the traveling expenses of the presiding elder, and to apportion the same and such other amounts as are to be raised on the district among the several charges; and to report the same to the Quarterly Conference and board of stewards." With this recommendation your committee concur.

2. A paper signed P. A. Peterson, J. E. Edwards and others, providing for rearrangement of the business of Quarterly Conferences:

Resolved, That the following order of business in Quarterly Conferences be substituted for that now contained in the Book of Discipline, from item 1, in the general answers, to question 5, chapter 2, section 4, page 53, to section 5 on page 55, viz.:

1. Are there any appeals?
2. Are there any complaints?
3. Is there a written report from the preacher in charge of the number and state of the Sunday schools, and of the pastoral instruction of children?
4. Is there a written report from the preacher in charge on the general state of the church?

(Let the answer to this question embrace only the sums raised and paid on the claims of the presiding elder and the preacher.)

8. What has been raised the present quarter for other objects?

(Let the answer to this question embrace the sums raised for all other purposes, not included by the preceding report.)

17. Have the local preachers and exhorters passed in examination of character, and have their licenses been renewed?
18. Is there a church register belonging to the charge, and has it been faithfully kept? (4.)
19. Have the General Rules been read?

21. Is there any miscellaneous business?
22. Where shall the next Quarterly Conference be held? (At the fourth Quarterly Conference let the report of the fall statistics be called for that are to be reported at the ensuing Annual Conference.)

Questions marked (1 or 2) (4) are to be asked only at the Quarterly Conferences indicated by the number.

Item 2. The recommendation of "the address of the Bishops," that the word "one," on page 80, chapter 3, section 7, question 2, answer 1, be stricken out, and that two be put in lieu thereof, so that the amended paragraph shall read: "Answer. No one shall be elected and ordained who has not been two years in the regular itinerant work, except such as may be selected by the Bishop for missionary work, when the Annual Conference shall have authority to elect to the deacon's office sooner, if the Conference judge it expedient."

And also that the word "one," on page 81, chapter 3, section 7, in answer to question 2, be stricken out, and "two" inserted, so that the paragraph as amended shall read: "Answer. Every traveling deacon shall exercise that office for two years before he be eligible to the office of elder; except in the case of missionaries, when the Annual Conference shall have authority to elect to the elder's office sooner, if the Conference judge it expedient." With this recommendation your committee concur.

3. A paper proposing to substitute the word "two" for "six," on page 39, chapter 2, section 2, in answer to question 1, so that the paragraph as amended shall read: "2. The lay members shall be chosen annually by the District Conferences; Provided, That no one shall be a representative who is not twenty-five years of age, and who has not been for two years, next preceding his election, a member of the church. In recommending this proposition your committee concur.

4. In respect to a memorial from Edenton St. Charles church, Raleigh, North Carolina, relating to the spiritual state of children, your committee deem any legislation whatever entirely unnecessary.

5. With a memorial from the Mississippi Conference, requiring that candidates for church membership shall be asked whether they will abstain from intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and from the sale thereof, except for medical or sacramental purposes, your committee recommend non-concurrence.

6. With sundry memorials, recommending the church records to be sent to the Quarterly Conferences for inspection, your committee do not concur.

7. With a paper signed by J. H. McLean and J. M. Binkley, proposing but one board of trustees for each circuit, your committee recommend non-concurrence.

8. With a memorial from the Virginia Conference, recommending that trustees be not members of Quarterly Conferences by virtue of office, your committee do not concur.

9. With a resolution of J. W. Whitten and A. West, recommending that answer 8 of question 4, chapter 3, section 4, page 53, be so changed as to read, "To see that all its proceedings be faithfully recorded by a secretary," etc., your committee do not concur.

10. With the resolution of O. J. Moore and others, that traveling preachers be allowed to vote in the election of lay delegates, your committee recommend non-concurrence.

11. On the subject of district trustees, referred to your committee by two papers from the South Carolina Conference, we offer for adoption the following items to be put into the Discipline on page 82, chapter 2, section 16, after answer to question 1, viz:

"2. Trustees for district property may be appointed by the Quarterly Conference of the circuit or station where such property is located, or, if in a city where there are two or more pastoral charges, by the Quarterly Conference which the presiding elder may designate. The presiding elder shall have the right of nomination, subject to confirmation or rejection by the Quarterly Conference."

Next, add to item 4, page 102:

"3. Where a district board of trustees is appointed by a Quarterly Conference, such board shall hold the same relations in all respects to the Conferences so appointing."

Furthermore, that after item 4, page 102, this item be inserted:

"4. When two or more circuits or stations shall be united, the board of trustees shall, by such action, be considered dissolved, and the Quarterly Conference of the new circuit or station shall appoint a board of trustees as provided for in answer 1 to question 1 of this section."

Then let the notation of section 16, pages 101 and 102, be conformed to these additions.

12. A memorial from the Virginia Conference, in respect to establishing district schools, is respectfully returned to the General Conference, with a request that it be referred to the committee on education.

13. A resolution of J. L. DeYampert and others, which recommends to insert, on page 73, chapter 3, section 4, after paragraph 15, and change notations, the following:

"16. To make a written report of the condition of all the claimants on the Conference collection within his pastoral charge at each Annual Conference, to be submitted to the joint board of finance," is by your committee concurred in.

14. With a resolution of F. W. Earnest and W. G. E. Cunningham, that paragraph 15, page 73, be so changed as to require that a statement of Sunday schools, scholars, etc., in each circuit, etc., be subject to Quarterly Conference revision, your committee recommend non-concurrence.

15. With a memorial from the North Georgia Conference, asking that candidates for church membership be required to meet in class once a week for three months, and give satisfactory evidence to the leader of their desire to "flee from the wrath to come," your committee recommend that you do not concur.

16. The petition of the Columbia District Conference, South Carolina Conference, touching the appointment, duty and relation of a district steward, has been heard, and your committee recommend that the prayer be not answered.

17. A resolution of the Arkansas Conference, which recommends that the General Conference so amend the Book of Discipline, page 100, chapter 3, section 15, answer to question 5, as to read: "And to have the same at the Quarterly Conference." Paragraph as amended:

"Answer. To preserve the records of the Quarterly Conference, and report to the joint board of finance of the Annual Conference a full account of the acts of his board of stewards the preceding year, and to have the same at the Quarterly Conference." With this recommendation your committee concur.

18. A memorial from the South Carolina Conference, relating to the manner of withdrawal from our church, and a resolution of T. Y. Ramsey and A. C. Allen, requesting that the secretary of an Annual Conference give a probationer, when discontinued, a certificate, have been also considered, and it is recommended that you do not concur.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN W. HANNER, Chair'n.

The following resolution was offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That the president and secretary of the Board of Missions be and they are hereby requested to lay before the committee on missions what information they may have in relation to the operations of our brother, the Rev. Mr. Newman, and his Methodist people in the province of Santo Paulo, in the southern portion of the empire of Brazil, and that said committee be instructed to consider and report on the propriety of establishing a mission in said province.

F. E. PITTS.
J. E. EVANS.

Report No. 1 of the committee on itineracy, laid on the table on Saturday, May 9, was taken up.

H. V. Philpott suggested that item 1 be amended by substituting German Mission Conference of Texas and Louisiana for "German Mission Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South."

Dr. Edwards said that he as chairman did not object to accepting that as an amendment to the report.

Dr. Alexander said that after a while there might be a half dozen German Conferences, and it was necessary to make this distinction.

I. G. John said that the reason why the boundaries of the Conference should be indicated was that there were other German missions in Virginia and Baltimore. Hence the importance of specifying.

The chair suggested that the rose would smell as sweet by any other name.

On motion of J. E. Evans the name was stricken out and "German Mission Conference of Texas and Louisiana" substituted. The item as amended was then adopted.

Item 2 was then adopted.

Item 3 was then read and adopted.

Item 4 was read and adopted.

Item 5 was read and adopted.

On motion of W. Shapard the following communication of the Bishops, laid over under the rule, Thursday, May 7, was taken up and adopted:

Reply to the request made of the College of Bishops in the following resolution of the General Conference, referred on yesterday:

Resolved, That the Bishops be requested to consider the subject of the election and ordination of native-born missionaries in foreign stations, and suggest to this Conference what legislation, if any, is necessary on this subject.

We think it proper to say that the following questions and answers be inserted in the Discipline at the bottom of page 82:

Question 4. What shall be done in the case of missionaries and native preachers in foreign lands where there is no Annual Conference?

Answer. The Bishop in charge of the missions shall have authority to ordain to the office of deacon and elder on the recommendation of the superintendent and resident missionaries; or, if there be none, at his discretion.

Report No. 1 of the committee on boundaries, laid on the table on Friday, May 8, was taken up and acted upon item by item.

Item 1 was adopted. Item 2 was read.

Dr. Alexander said that the number of preachers, traveling and local, in Montana, was ten. There were five hundred members, and they have lately been visited by a gracious revival. And again, it was so remote from any other work that he felt safe in saying that with a Conference it might live; without one it must die. It was eight hundred miles from Denver and a greater distance from Columbia.

Dr. Rush called on Bishop Marvin to express himself on this subject.

Bishop Marvin said that about two years ago he was there six weeks, and at that time he was decidedly in favor of organizing that part of the work into a separate Conference, and since that time his sympathies and views had been inclined that way, but he had determined to leave it entirely to the suggestions of others. He would, however, make a brief statement of facts. The Southern Church is justly entitled to the claim of being the pioneer church in Montana. It is made up, to a large extent, of refugees from Missouri during the war. It had a larger number of preachers there than any other church; and again, it was seven or eight hundred miles from Denver, and by rail four hundred miles from Corinne. From Helena to Corinne there was four days and three nights of staging, rendering it impossible, on account of the great expense, for the young preachers to get to the seat of the Columbia Conference. Not to organize it into a separate Conference was equivalent to giving up the work, and the question then resolved itself into whether it was worth while to keep up that work or not; unless supported by missionary aid it was hardly worth while to attempt to keep it up. There are about twenty-five thousand inhabitants. The resources of the country are for the most part gold and silver mines, though there is a very large area of arable lands. Two-thirds of the whole area is rugged and mountainous, but there are valleys eight or ten miles broad, as level as a floor, and as rich as alluvial deposits could make them. He referred to specimens of seven-headed wheat that he had brought with him from the country as showing its fertility. Indian corn does not grow there, as it is too far north, but the wheat, oats, barley and small grain was the best he had ever seen. The population is increasing slowly, though on account of the traveling facilities Colorado takes the population faster. His heart was with those brethren. A man and family in Helena could be well supported, but other places would need help.

Dr. Haygood inquired how many of the ten preachers were itinerants.

Dr. Alexander replied one-half.

Dr. Haygood asked what information Dr. McFerrin could give as to the probability of its being self-sustaining, and what letters he had received in regard to the needs of the work.

Dr. McFerrin said that the brethren were decidedly of the opinion that unless the work there was organized under a separate Conference, and received aid, they would find great difficulty in sustaining themselves. The only trouble he saw in the way was the character of the population, which he feared would float off when the mines were exhausted. If they went into agriculture he would be more hopeful.

Bishop Marvin replied that the majority of the population was devoted to agriculture.

Dr. Alexander said that the committee were unanimously in favor of organizing a separate Conference.

F. E. Pitts said that the question was simply: Shall we carry on the work or drop it?

Dr. Winfield said that there never was a period when it became them more to pause than now. The missionary money was now far behind. The foreign missions were a disgrace to us as a great church. He moved to lay the subject on the table until they could hear more from it.

Dr. McFerrin said the Missionary Board and Bishops were assured that they would ask only that the expenses of men should be paid out there, and after they had come they would be sustained by the people. But they had not found that this had been the case.

Bishop Wightman stated that $10,000 a year would be required to keep up that work.

Dr. McFerrin said that it was his experience that nothing could be done in the way of extending the work unless enough could be appropriated to build churches. A place was just as necessary as a name. If he thought the population was a permanent one he would be in favor of organizing a separate Conference.

F. M. Kennedy moved that the item be stricken out, as it was clear, from what had been said, that the Conference, if organized, would have to be supported by the Missionary Board, and this controverted the policy of the church.

Bishop Marvin said that he could not allow Dr. Kennedy's statement to go as a fact. He did not believe that, if organized, it would have to be supported either wholly or mainly.

Dr. Rush said that he thought they ought to rely on Bishop Marvin's statement. A failure to organize a Conference would be equivalent to a withdrawal of the forces. Young men could not mingle with their brethren; could not have the illuminant fires kindled afresh every year. In order to meet the exigencies an irregular Conference was held [illegible] 1871 representatives to the regular one at Nebraska. The necessity for a separate Conference could be gathered from that very fact.

Dr. Alexander said that Dr. Kennedy's motion meant simply to strike out Montana from the work. They could not live in their present position. The same question came up in 1837 with regard to Texas, which then was almost out of the world. In 1840, the General Conference having authorized it, the Texas Conference was organized by Bishop Waugh. What was true of Texas then was abundantly more so of Montana now.

On motion of P. Tuggle the motion to strike out was laid on the table. Several having arisen at once the president requested them not to be so anxious to speak. The brethren subsided.

Dr. Green said that, in the first place, he was eagerly in sympathy with the work; next, there were ten preachers there; next, there were several hundred churches; next, they were stronger than they had been; and next, they could not be sustained in connection with any other work. Now one of two things was necessary. Either they must consent to abandon the work, and abandon it forever, or organize a new Conference, and he hoped they would not hesitate a moment to do it.

The item was adopted.

The chair—Somebody voted no. He was a sensible man.

Item 3 was adopted.

Item 4 was adopted.

Item 5 was read.

J. E. Evans moved to lay the item on the table. Carried.

Item 6 was taken up and the following substitute, offered by A. Adams, F. E. Adams, E. K. Miller and George Sim, was adopted: The undersigned beg to offer the following as an amendment to report No. 1 of the committee on boundaries:

That the line of the Pacific and Los Angeles Conferences be the line dividing the counties of Monterey, San Louis, Obispo, Keane and Tulare, to the point intersecting the present line of the Los Angeles Conference, and thence eastward without change of boundary lines.

The further consideration of the report was postponed.

S. Bobo, lay delegate of the South Carolina Conference, was placed on the committee of nine on fraternal greeting, in place of F. H. Smith, of the Virginia Conference.

The Conference then adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by the secretary.

TENTH DAY.

TUESDAY, May 12, 1874.

Conference met at the appointed hour, Bishop Paine in the chair.

Religious exercises were conducted by E. E. Wiley.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Bishop Pierce took the chair.

The reports of standing committees were then called for.

Dr. Lee inquired what action had been taken on the veto power of the Bishops sent down to the Annual Conferences for decision.

Bishop McTyeire replied that the vote had been published in the Advocate, the law was in the Discipline, and the Manual contained the vote—2,200 to 9.

Report No. 2 of the committee on itineracy was read and adopted item by item. It is as follows:

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

1. The paper signed by A. A. Coleman and A. R. Winfield, asking for a change in the Discipline, limiting the appointment of preachers to circuits or stations to two years successively, has been considered, and the committee unanimously concur in recommending that the change be not made.

2. The resolution from the North Georgia Conference, requesting the insertion in the Discipline of a provision "empowering the presiding Bishop of an Annual Conference to appoint one or more evangelists to travel at large within the bounds of said Conference," has received the careful attention of the committee, and by a decided majority recommend non-concurrence.

3. The resolution signed by W. M. Leftwich and A. T. Scruggs, asking for an expression of opinion as to the legality of "continuing an effective traveling preacher ten or fifteen years in one pastoral charge, by the appointment of Bishops and presiding elders," has been considered, and the committee recommend that, as the paper relates to the administration of the Bishops, it be respectfully referred to the committee on episcopacy.

JOHN E. EDWARDS, Chair'n.

Report No. 3 of the committee on Sunday schools was presented, as follows:

REPORT NO. III. OF THE COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The Sunday school committee submit the following as report No. 3:

1. On the memorial from the North Alabama Conference, asking for a uniform method of conducting Sunday schools, the committee deem it inexpedient to enact any rule.

2. The committee has considered the memorial of Messrs. Gillett and Joyce, praying the General Conference to define more definitely the relation of the pastor to the Sunday school, and beg leave to refer the memorialists to the Discipline, in which we think this relation is clearly settled.

3. The resolution of Messrs. Fleming and Hiner, asking for two volumes of catechisms—one on the history and the other on the economy of the Methodist Episcopal Church South—was respectfully considered, and the committee decide that it is inexpedient at present.

4. Resolutions were referred to the committee in reference to the International Uniform Text, and also in reference to the character of the lessons in Our Little People. The committee submit the following:

Resolved, That we recommend the continuance of the present system inaugurated by our Sunday school secretary.

[illegible] Sunday school secretary to continue Our Little People, but we ask him to simplify the lessons, and give them in the form of question and answer.

T. J. MAGRUDER, Chair'n.

MAY 12, 1874.

Items 1, 2 and 3 were read and adopted.

The first resolution of item 4 was read and adopted.

The second resolution was read. J. M. Sharpe said that he hoped that the resolution would not be adopted. He did not like the plan of having the answers to the questions printed with them. As a teacher of experience, he was satisfied that that sort of parrot repetition did not cultivate the brain.

T. J. Magruder said that the committee deemed that best for children between four and seven years of age who could not read. The object was to simplify the subject.

Dr. Evans said that Mr. Sharpe was right in regard to older children, but the answers were better for little children.

The secretary said that he differed essentially from his Bro. Sharpe on that point. He only wished that he could get them, Bishops and all, to commit our catechisms. The church suffered greatly from the neglect of a good form of sound words. He would require of the student the ipsissima verba, which were generally better than any answers he could give himself; but then, after that, all that was called for could be accomplished by encouraging original investigation.

A motion of Judge Smith to lay the item on the table for further consideration was lost.

The item was adopted.

Report No. 4 of the committee on Sunday schools was read and laid on the table under the rule. It is as follows:

REPORT NO. IV OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Various resolutions in reference to the catechetical instruction of our children have been considered, and the following report is submitted:

1. Resolved, That answer 4, page 114 of the Discipline, to the question, "What directions are given concerning Sunday schools?" be stricken from the book and the following be substituted as the answer:

"The superintendents of our Sunday schools shall see that our infant classes are faithfully instructed in Cipers' Catechism No. 1, and that the Wesleyan series be used after that by the different classes, according to their advancement."

2. Resolved, That the answer on page 114, now marked 3, be put last in order and be marked 4, and the new answer be marked 3.

T. J. MAGRUDER, Chair'n.

MAY 12, 1874.

Trusten Polk, chairman of the committee on education, presented report No. 1 of that committee.

W. C. Johnson, chairman of the committee on books and periodicals, presented report No. 2 of said committee, which was read. It is as follows:

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

Your committee, to whom was recommitted report No. 2, concerning the communication of Logan D. Dameron, proposing negotiations for the transfer of the property of the Southwestern Book and Publishing Company, at St. Louis, to the Southern Methodist Publishing House, have again duly considered their report, and with it they have also considered the amendment referred to them, offered by C. I. Vandeventer and A. H. Redford, in these words:

"Provided, That the book agent and book committee take no steps toward effecting the proposed transfer of property without the consent of the patronizing Conferences."

In view of the fact that the property, being owned by stockholders, can be transferred without the consent of "the patronizing Conferences," your committee do not think that the above proviso should be accepted by them, or adopted by the General Conference.

Your committee perfectly understand that the financial condition of the Publishing House at this time would not warrant the purchase of the property at St. Louis; but this difficulty perhaps may be obviated by future events, and particularly by the terms of the transfer.

The following resolution is offered again for adoption by the General Conference, viz.:

Resolved, That the book agent, with the book committee, be authorized to negotiate for the transfer of the property of the Southwestern Book and Publishing Company, at St. Louis, to the Southern Methodist Publishing House, if such transfer can be effected without damage to the publishing interests of the church; provided that the transfer shall not be made if the debts and liabilities of our Publishing House shall thereby be increased.

Respectfully submitted.

W. C. JOHNSON, Chairman.

Dr. Scott said that he was not prepared to offer a minority report, but would offer the following substitute for the report of the majority:

Resolved, That the book agent and book committee be instructed to avoid all increase of the present liabilities of the Publishing House, except such as are indispensable to the completion of the Publishing House and the proper carrying on of its regular business.

Dr. Green said he wished to be heard on this question:

1. If this General Conference say they may do this thing, it is a tacit expression in favor of doing it.

2. The Publishing House owes a large debt. The creditors understand the condition of the house perfectly. They were satisfied that they would be no losers by it. He thought it unfortunate to do anything here to lead the creditors to believe that we were enlarging our liabilities, or complicating ourselves in the least, and involve their hope of receiving what is due them. He thought the result would be unfavorable. Nothing should be done to lessen the credit of the Publishing House.

Dr. McFerrin said that he had some views on this question which might create a stir. He was a connectional man. The great Methodist Episcopal Church South knew no locality.

He thought that if St. Louis, with all her great, rich and liberal people, were to offer this establishment to the church, with an endowment of $250,000 or $300,000, they should like to receive it.

He did not think they ought to be restrained in their donations.

Dr. Redford said that he had examined the report of the committee with a great deal of care, as also the paper of Dr. Scott. He did not think concurrence with the report would embarrass the Publishing House at all. The debt was rapidly being liquidated at the rate of $5,000 a month, and he did not think another General Conference would see it in debt at all. The creditors had no apprehensions. They were protected, and he himself was personally responsible for half the amount. He did not presume that Mr. Dameron expected them to buy him out, but only that if, in the course of events, they found that a transfer of the property could be made in the interest of the church, this report would give them authority to negotiate. He infinitely preferred the report to the substitute.

On motion of E. E. Wiley the question was then put, and the amendment was adopted.

The report as thus amended was then adopted.

Report No. 1 of the committee on finance, in relation to the support of the ministry, was presented by Milton Brown, chairman of said committee, which was read and laid on the table under the rule.

B. Craven, from the special committee on the claims of the Publishing House against the United States government, presented the report of said committee, which was read, as follows:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE CLAIM OF THE PUBLISHING HOUSE AGAINST THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT.

Your committee have with patience and care examined the substance of the claim, the nature of the testimony by which it is supported, the course pursued, and the results achieved by the commission appointed by the General Conference of 1870, and the opinion both of the commission and their counsel, as to the final result. In our opinion the claim has been fully and clearly presented, the commissioners have discharged their duty wisely and faithfully, and we have good reason to believe that the Publishing House will receive proper compensation for the loss sustained, at no distant day. The apparent delay does not, in our opinion, arise from any indisposition on the part of the government to admit and pay our claim, but from the immense amount of business in the department to which it is referred, and from the numerous and varied investigations incidental to all such matters.

The following resolutions are recommended for adoption by the Conference:

Resolved, That by the occupation of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, in the city of Nashville, by the authorities of the United States, from 1862 to 1865 inclusive, a just claim has inured to the Publishing House for rents, damages, printing material and other property, pressed into the service of the United States, which claim has been fairly and justly presented by the commission appointed by the General Conference of 1870.

Resolved, That the commission appointed in 1870 be and hereby is continued, and that the committee be composed of A. L. P. Green and A. H. Redford.

Resolved, That the employment of Rev. R. Abbey, by the commission, as its agent, merits the approval and receives the sanction of the General Conference, and that he be continued as agent to prosecute the claim in question."

The report thus amended was adopted.

A motion of H. J. Adams to prolong the session fifteen minutes was lost.

The Conference adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by the Bishop.

IT WILL be noticed from the card of Mr. C. B. Soares, money broker, 32 St. Charles street, opposite the St. Charles Hotel, that he is dealing in State and city securities, and will pay city and State taxes at a liberal discount. Especial attention is given to the payment of taxes in St. Charles parish.

Seashore Camp Meeting.

The time selected (July 24) for the commencement of our annual camp meeting is rapidly approaching. It is now time that our church members were making [illegible] of it, talking about it, determining and acting in reference to it.

Let all those who intend to build their own tents be early at work, and not leave the labor of months to be crowded into the space of a few weeks or days.

We learn that the trustees have recently visited the camp ground, and found the improvements ordered by them progressing satisfactorily, and that other and important improvements have been projected and determined upon.

New streets have been opened and cleared up, including Central avenue, extending almost to the railroad, by which a better approach to the camp ground is provided. We are pleased to learn that a large number of private tents are to be erected.

We may hopefully anticipate a greatly improved state of things over last year, and a largely increased attendance. We had a good and profitable meeting then; we may have a better and more successful one this year. Pray for it, brethren, talk for it, and come up in the spirit, ready to work and labor, and to enjoy the occasion.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the trustees found in another column, and all persons who desire information respecting the camp meeting are requested to address them.

MONOCHROMATIC PICTURES.

These Pictures, for beauty, truth to nature and cheapness, take the lead of all other photographic inventions. Chemists and Photographers have always tried to introduce them in perfected form, and it is but recently that they were presented to New Orleans by Mr. H. HESCH, of California, in such perfection of finish as to defy the criticism of connoisseurs in the Fine Arts.

Having secured the services of the above named gentleman, I beg to announce to the public that I am now prepared to produce by this new discovery counterfeit presentments which, for fidelity to the original, will rival the touch of the great masters of art.

My prices are, for life size, $10; for head-size bust, $5; cabinet, $4; enlarging from card or small-sized tin-type into, with gold frame complete, $8. Ecclesiastical cards and work in the latest styles also executed. Those wishing Pictures can send negatives.

THE GREATEST

MEDICAL DISCOVERY

OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, HAS discovered in one of our common pasture-weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,

FROM

The Worst Scrofula Down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both blunderheads.) He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of Pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of biles.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst Canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all Humor in the Eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the Ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running Ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the Skin.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of Rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure Salt Rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of Scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

ROXBURY, MASS.

DEAR MADAM: The reputation of the Medical Discovery in curing all kinds of Humors is so well established, by the unanimous voice of all who have ever used it, that I need not say anything on the subject, as the most skillful physicians and the most rational druggists in the country are unanimous in its praise.

In presenting the Medical Discovery to your notice, I do it with a full knowledge of its curative power in relieving all, and curing most of those diseases to which you are unfortunately so liable. That most excruciating disease to an affectionate mother,

Nursing Sore Mouth,

is cured as if by a miracle. Your own temper is restored to its natural sweetness, and your babe from short and fretful naps to calm and sweet slumbers; and the Medical Discovery becomes a fountain of blessing to your husband and household. In the more advanced stages of

Canker

it extends to the stomach, causing

Dyspepsia,

which is nothing but canker in the stomach; then to the intestines and

Kidneys,

creating a sinking, gone feeling, and an indifference even to the cares of your family. Your stomach is your food distresses you, and you can only take certain kinds, and even of that your system does not get half the nourishment it contains, as the acrimonious food of the canker eats it up; then your complexion loses its bloom and becomes sallow or greenish, and your best day is gone. For want of nourishment your system becomes loose and flabby, and the fibers of your body become relaxed. Then follow a train of diseases which the Medical Discovery is peculiarly adapted to

Raw and Inflamed,

Cure:

Palpitation of the heart, pain in the side, weakness of the spine and small of the back, pain of the hip-joints when you retire, irregularity of the bowels, and also of that most excruciating of diseases,

The Piles.

How many thousands of poor women are suffering from this disease and pining away a miserable life, and their next-door neighbor does not know the cause. I wish to impress on your mind that good old proverb: "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." In you have both the preventive and the cure, with this great and good quality: that it will never, under any circumstances, do you any injury.

No change of diet is ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one tablespoonful per day; children over ten years, dessertspoonful; children from five to eight years, teaspoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day. Yours truly,

DONALD KENNEDY.

THE STARS AND THE DAISIES.

The stars they are the daisies light,
Opening and shining in the sky;
The daisies are the stars below,
Twinkling and sparkling as they grow.

The stars will blossom in the night,
And love the morn's calm, tender light:
The daisies twinkle in the day,
And watch the strong sun on his way.

The stars are worlds of mighty size,
Peopled perchance with good and wise;
The daisies but poor, frail le weeds,
Living to die and cast their seeds.

But stars and daisies, great and small,
Are made and kept in being all
By Him whose love will rain as far
To guard a daisy as a star.

Know, then, that angels in the sky,
And poor earth creatures, born to die,
Are precious both in his dear sight,
With whom alike are day and night!

Many a day
I've waited for you.
Now you are here,
The rest are coming—

And bees a-humming.

The Play-House in the Grass.

BY MARY L. SHERMAN.

Two little sisters, Mary and Tilly, started out one bright June morning for a good long play. Just outside the door, in the path leading to the barn, they stopped to talk about where they should go—whether to fish in the canal with pin hooks, play on the hay-mow, hunt eggs in the barn, catch "bumble bees" in the holly-hocks, make mud pies or build a play-house. There were so many nice things they might do, they could not tell what to do first; so taking hold of hands they trotted down the path that led past the holly-hocks to the barn. While they were watching for bumble bees in the holly-hocks a hen cackled. Very few little country girls can hear a hen cackle and not want to hunt eggs; so they ran round the corner of the shed to climb into the hay-loft, and there saw what they had never seen before—grass almost as high as their heads (for they had lived in the city until the last winter, and had not happened to come to this place to play since early spring.) They quite forgot holly-hocks and hens and eggs for that day. When they were here in the spring the grass was short and thick, and, with the bright, yellow dandelions, looked like beautiful green velvet, buttoned all over with gold buttons; now the grass stood up high and straight, like a beautiful green wall. The little girls shoved their feet into it just a little way, and screamed with delight; then they sat down in it and pulled out the long spires, looked at the beautiful head on each, so like the pussy-willow, peeped over the top and laughed, they did not exactly know why. Then they stood up and looked around. The tall grass reached away from the road to the canal, and down to Mr. Punchon's fence. That must have been the reason grandma wouldn't let them go to Mr. Punchon's cross lots. O how pretty! Every one of these thousands of spires ("spears" they called them) nodded and bowed its long, round head, may be to the dear, cunning little birds that hid their nests down at the very roots of the beautiful tall grass. When the wind blew over the top it made green waves roll from one side of the field to the other, so it seemed to really move like water.

In sitting down the little girls had broken some of the grass.

"O," said one, "isn't this nice? What a beautiful play-house this would make."

"O yes, so it would," was the answer.

"Let's make one."

"Two," said Tilly. "One for you and one for me, and then we'll play go a-visiting."

"So we will, and we'll bring our dishes and dollies," was Mary's reply.

So they set to work. They went a little way apart, and each made her house by turning round and round, bending the grass flat to the ground handful by handful, making the heads of the first round meet in the center, and after that forming circles—for they thought a round house much nicer than just a common square one, and in that way they made a beautiful carpet. All this happened years and years ago. Dear Tilly grew to be a woman, and has lain under the beautiful grass she so loved, ten long years, and yet her sister thinks she has never since seen a house with such beautiful walls and carpets as those made that bright June day, with the blue sky for a house-roof. The holly-hocks looked down on the little ones, as only honest, bright holly-hocks can, and bobolink skimmed over and around them, singing as if his throat would burst if he did not, and the little girls were so happy.

When the houses were done they went for their dishes; not beautiful little toy dishes, as city children have, but bits of broken plates, and tea-cups of old-fashioned China; they were as glad as grandma was sorry when the best glass preserve dish was broken; that completed their set. Their dollies were not of wax, with real hair; I doubt if they had even China heads; I am nearly sure they were rag dolls, and that they stripped the long, yellow silk from the tasseled corn, and pinned it to their soft tops for hair, and thought corn-silk doll's hair very nice indeed.

When the houses were finished and furnished they kept house, visited each other several times, and drank tea as many, scolded and punished their naughty children, nursed them through the whooping-cough and measles, scarlet fever and chicken-pox, beside teething and other severe sicknesses, and at last found themselves tired and very hungry. They had been very happy, perfectly happy, till about the time they went to the wood shed for the dishes. Was it not strange that neither of the little girls, who usually ran into the house to tease mamma and grandma and a whole family of aunts to come and see anything that pleased them—was it not strange they did not run in just a minute to tell them of this beautiful play-house, but that they hurried back for fear they would be seen? What was more strange, neither said to the other, "Mamma won't care," as they usually did when starting a new play. No one had told them they must not come here, and yet they took care not to make much noise. They were not sure they were doing wrong, but they were not sure they were doing right, and would not risk spoiling their play to find out.

By and by, beside being hungry and tired, they grew cross, and finally trudged back to the house in a very slow, sullen way, not daring to take back the dishes and dollies. Dinner was all over and the dishes cleared away. Grandma, mamma and aunties were frightened; they had looked and called, but the little girls did not dare tell them they had heard the calls and would not answer, because they thought they were wanted to pick up chips for the fire. I think the family had had chicken for dinner, and the sisters had lost not only their drum-sticks, but, even worse, the wish-bone, and grandma would give them nothing but bread and butter, to "learn them not to run away," she said, and mamma said she would "'tend to you by and by." They were very miserable, but still naughty, and would not tell the truth, thinking it quite enough not to tell a lie. Pretty soon grandpa came in, dear old grandpa, whom they loved to follow over the fields whether he plowed or sowed, hoed corn or dug potatoes, because he let them do as they pleased and never scolded; but now he came straight to where they sat crouched on the great brick hearth, munching dry bread and butter; stamping his foot, he said with a terrible voice, that sounded as they imagined the roar of a lion would sound:

"What have you young ones been a-doin'?"

Young ones! Oh, to be called young ones! They both said "nothing," and began to cry at the top of their voices, quite as angry as they were scared. Startled at the voice, grandma came running in.

"Why, grandpa," said she, "what is the matter?"

"Matter enough," was the answer, in such a voice that the little girls thought he was mad at grandma. "These young ones have spilt about a quarter acre of my seed timothy."

They had hoped grandma had come to "take their part," as she did sometimes when the aunties scolded, but she went back to the wood-shed without a word, and grandpa was more terrible than ever.

"You jest go an' gather up them traps an' pitch 'em into the canal, and then you pick up and straighten up every spear of that grass. Start your boots!" and they had to do it, only they felt sure that though "traps" might mean broken dishes, it could not mean dollies; they would have thought it almost murder to have thrown the dollies into the canal.

As they passed grandma in the wood-shed they groaned and complained loud and long, "headache and so tired," but she took no notice except to give a queer look over the rims of her spectacles. All that warm, tiresome, endless afternoon they bent over the poor, broken, wilted grass.

"It won't stand up, and grandpa knows it," they said to each other over and over, having to remember beside that mamma had promised to "tend to them," and that she never broke her promises.

They never played in high grass again, even when they might have done so. They would have been unhappy if grandpa had told them to. They had spoiled what might have been a source of happiness by doing what they only suspected was wrong.

Christian at Work.

THE BEARER OF BURDENS.—There were three men walking up a steep hill, each very tired, with a heavy burden on his back. Then there stepped up to them a strong, kind Man, who said to them: "Let me take your burdens; I will carry them for you." But the first man said, "I have no burden," for he had carried his burden so long that it seemed like his clothes, or like part of his body, so that he did not feel it, and did not know how much better he could walk without it. So the first man would not have his burden touched.

The second man was very selfish and unkind himself, and he thought all other people must be selfish and unkind, so he said: "You want to play me some trick; I do not believe you want to carry my burden; I will not let you touch it."

The third man was very tired indeed, and was saying to himself: "Oh, who can help me? for I feel that I cannot carry this terrible weight any farther;" and when he felt the Stranger touch him on the shoulder, and offer to take his burden, he said at once: "It is very kind of you; I am very thankful; please take it, for I see you can bear it and I cannot."

The strong Man is Jesus. The burden is sin.

If we do not feel our sin, Jesus cannot bear it for us.

If we do not trust in him, he cannot bear it.

But if we are tired of our sins and trust in Jesus, he will take the terrible weight of our sins away.—Parables for Children.

HOW TO KNOW A GOOSE.—"Mother! mother!" cried a young rook, returning hurriedly from its first flight "I'm so frightened; I've seen such a sight!"

"What sight, my son?" asked the old rook.

"Oh, white creatures—screaming and running and straining their necks, and holding their heads ever so high. See, mother, there they go!"

"Geese, my son—merely geese," calmly replied the parent bird, looking over the common. "Through life, child, observe that when you meet any one who makes a great fuss about himself, and tries to lift his head higher than the rest of the world, you may set him down at once as a goose."

Farm, Garden and Household.

Raising Turkeys.

It does not cost any more, or much more, to raise a pound of turkey than a pound of hen flesh. In the summer they require to be fed less, being masterly campaigners on their own account, while in winter very likely their nervous disposition demands somewhat more stimulus than other fowls. If well fed, they do not require nearly as careful housing as the hen, although it is good policy to make them roost indoors; but, left to themselves, they prefer to weather out the wildest storm in the tree-tops. Finally, when brought to market, their flesh is worth much more than that of the hen, so that, other things being equal, it is economy to keep them instead. Also—and this is well worth considering—allowing that the per centage of loss of young turkey chicks under most perfect management is greater than the loss of chicks of the common fowls, still the turkeys that survive reach such a great weight that a given number of pounds of turkey may perhaps be raised with less labor than the same quantity of flesh of the common fowls.

The breeding of turkeys is much better than formerly. The importance of the selection of the stoutest and largest gobblers for breeding is better recognized, and the facts that a too scanty range, insufficient food, and close in-and-in breeding, dwarf the stock and render it feeble, and cause the chicks to die off, are better known. Wild turkeys are also crossed with tame more frequently since the value of such infusion of blood has been seen. It is in this country, if anywhere, that we should naturally expect the domestic stock to reach its highest perfection, and our poultry-breeders may justly feel a peculiar pride in this strictly American production.—Poultry World.

SWEET APPLES FOR FOOD.—No orchard should be planted without a good sprinkling of sweet apples. They are excellent for baking, and, cut up in milk, make the children grow like weeds; and children of a larger growth can make a square meal of them served up in this way, and few such articles of diet will give a healthier color to the cheek. Well saturated with cream and sugar, they are no mean substitute for peaches. The pound sweeting is one of the largest and best of the winter sweet apples. The winter golden sweet is, however, a richer apple, and the Talman sweet, though rather below the medium size, is excellent, and one of the most profuse of bearers.

LEMON SYRUP.—To two pounds of loaf or crushed white sugar put two pints of water and the juice of eight good lemons, with the thinly-pared rind of three. First boil the sugar and water, skimming till clear. Then add the lemon-peel and unstrained juice, boiling ten minutes longer. When the syrup is done, strain while hot; then bottle. This quantity will fill two small claret bottles. By making this syrup in the spring, when lemons are plentiful and cheap, you may have lemonade, whenever you wish it, at a comparatively small cost. It will keep indefinitely.

TRANSPARENCY.—There is a species of animalcule called Rotifera, living in tufts of mosses, which, when placed under the microscope, is found to be transparent as crystal. You see all its internal organs, and the processes of life going on in the inside of its body, as you see the works of a watch through its covering of glass. We are like this creature, for we inhabit tabernacles which are equally transparent; and our motives, our feelings, our whole mental and moral economy, are showing themselves externally by signs which have no ambiguous meaning. I may not be able to tell why I think a certain person is not a genuine character, but I have an instinctive feeling that he is not what he pretends to be. So says every one of a false friend; and we may depend upon it that our character is truthful, and is producing its own proper impression, whatever our words or deeds may be—that it is what we naturally are, and not what we pretend to be, that is influencing others. In this way a man gets his deserts, as a rule. According to this principle, no one ever did good or evil without hearing of it again—without finding that there have been plentiful witnesses conversant of it, however secret. The eye of God is on us always, and the eye of man much oftener than the shrewdest of us imagine.

JEREMY TAYLOR said: "Hasty conclusions are the mark of a fool; a wise man doubteth—a fool rageth, and is confident; the novice saith: I am sure that it is so; the better learned answers: Peradventure it may be so; but, I prithee, inquire. Some men are drunk with fancy and mad with opinion. It is a little learning, and but a little, which makes men conclude hastily."

IF WE ASK for something and we receive it not, and love God all the more, or if we obtain the very opposite of our request, and yet love God twice as much as before, then we love him indeed.

WHERE DOES IT COME FROM?

Pints and quarts of filthy catarrhal discharges—where does it all come from? The mucous membrane, lining the chambers of the nose, and its little glands, are diseased, so that they draw from the blood its liquid, and exposure to the air changes it into corruption. This life liquid was to build up the system; but it is extracted, and the system is weakened by the loss. To cure, gain flesh and strength by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which also acts directly upon these glands, correcting them, supplying Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, the only method of reaching the upper cavities, where the discharge accumulates and comes from.

SOLE PROPRIETOR OF ABRAMS' CHILL TONIC,
a most effectual, reliable and entirely safe remedy for Chills and Fever, etc. Sold under full guarantee.
BRODIE'S ASTRINGENT CORDIAL
THIS MEDICINE, FOR THE CURE OF DIARRHŒA, FLUX, CHOLERA
and all diseases of the Bowels, is without exception the most reliable and indispensable remedy known, needing so no bad in its action that it can be given to infants with impunity, and yet so certain in its effect that it controls the most acute attacks. For adults its use is recommended in preference to the death dealing "Soothing Syrups," etc. No household should be without it.
LOCOCK'S COUGH ELIXIR.
A preparation invaluable to persons suffering from Colds, Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis, and all Pulmonary affections. It is specially adapted to the relief of Hoarseness and all diseases of the Throat caused by excessive use of the voice. It can be administered with perfect safety to infants, and is really the only known alleviator in Whooping Cough.
Ball & Lyons' Cod Liver Oil and Lacto-Phosphate of Lime,
FOR COUGHS, COLDS, CONSUMPTION,
Scrofulous and Tuberculous affections, Rickets and all complaints characterized by deficient nutrition. In this preparation the disagreeable taste and odor of the oil is completely masked, and the Lime, instead of being presented to the stomach in an indigestible and inert form, as in the old preparation of oil and pho phate of lime, is here held in solution and is readily assimilated. Given to delicate and puny infants and children, its use is also followed by marked improvement. This combination was suggested to us by a number of our prominent physicians, and has been perfected only after long continued labor and experiment.
Abrams' Compound Arnica Liniment.
This popular preparation well merits the reputation it enjoys. It is Unrivaled as a Rubefacient, and is employed with success in Cholera and Cholera Morbus, in which cases the extremities should be rubbed with it, and it should be used as a compress on the abdomen. Applied by rubbing, or by compress around the head, it is a sovereign remedy for Neuralgia and Sick Headache. In Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Cramps, Colic, Pain in the Back, Sprains, Bruises, and all cases where external remedies are applicable, it is very successfully used. It is equally good for man or beast, and can be given to animals internally for Colic or Cholera. All families should keep it on hand.

THE CONVERSATION FAN.

THE LAST AND MOST ABSORBING SENSATION OF THE DAY IS, TO USE A THEATRICAL phrase, "a great take." Everybody, to be en regle for the season, and to avoid the proscription of imperious fashion, must have A CONVERSATION FAN.

No family circle is complete in social diversions and entertainments without one, and in order to enjoy the pastime it should be distinctly understood that the answers do not materially follow the questions, but to spice the amusement an answer must be looked for that will afford a telling response to an interrogatory.

Where a direct answer is not to be found to a direct question, it will be discovered that it furnishes the sequel to a sustained conversation, so that couples can carry on tete-a-tete, which they may not wish to make audible, by silent indications of numbers.

THE CONVERSATION FAN

is an infallible remedy against dullness, breaking the spell of silence by a suggestive inquiry, furnishing congenial pleasures for an evening's entertainment, and opening up a novel and ingenious method of whiling away agreeable hours at home, in the promenade, at a party or private gathering.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the fifteenth instant:

Louisiana and Mississippi	bales... 3,461
Mobile	438
Texas	74
Total	3,126

On Saturday the market was inanimate throughout the day, with a moderate supply and light demand, and in the absence of any active competition among buyers factors were unable to realize upon small lots, which they were anxious to close off, unless by accepting lower rates. We heard of ordinary at 13½c., good ordinary at 15⅜c., high style do. at 16⅛c., and low middling, good style, at 17¾c. The sales were confined to 850 bales. On Monday, with nothing in the New York or Liverpool dispatches to stimulate the demand, there was, nevertheless, rather more inquiry at the opening, but at lower prices, and the sales during the morning reached 1,300 bales, mostly at figures more in favor of buyers, but without any quotable declins, after which the movement exhibited less animation, and the entire business of the day was confined to 1,950 bales. Only eight buyers participated, and, offering little or no competition, factors who wished to realize were compelled to make concessions in order to effect sales. Ordinary sold at 14⅜c., strict ordinary as low as 14c., good ordinary at 15⅝@16c., low middling at 17c., do., high style, at 17¼c., strict low middling at 17½c., and strict low middling to middling at 17⅛@17⅝c. On Tuesday the demand was checked, and prices were depressed by the dispatches from Liverpool and New York, referred to above, and the tendency was still more in favor of buyers, the bulk of the business, which summed up 2,650 bales (including about 900 in one lot,) was mostly at a further falling off of ⅛@¼c.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 4,850 bales, against 11,461 for the corresponding time last week and 5,898 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 1,155,738 bales, against 1,163,150 bales to the same date last year, and the increase in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 282,111 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 81,147 to Great Britain, of 118,157 to France and of 127,270 to other foreign ports. We quote:

Inferior	9¼ @ 10¼
Low ordinary	11¼ @ 12⅝

Strict ordinary	14 @ 14¾
Good ordinary	15⅝ @ 15⅞
Strict good ordinary	16 @ 16¼

WITH RHEUMATISM.

In view of the numberless sufferers afflicted with this painful malady, I feel induced to offer to the public my "ANTI-RHEUMATIC MIXTURE," which medicine prove to be the only successful remedy in this line, for it always gives instant relief, and in most cases cures permanently.

During the last fifteen years I have cured thousands of people, in this State and city, of this dreadful disease, with this medicine; and, what astonishes most, the patient recovered by the use of a single bottle of it. This medicine cures nothing but Rheumatism, and should the patient not recover by using the first bottle of it, that patient is not affected with Rheumatism at all. This being the first time of making my discovery known to the public after fifteen years of most successful results, I hope the sufferers will take advantage of this rare remedy, and by doing so add their names to the thousands already cured by it.

A motion of Anson West to lay it on the table did not prevail.

The report was acted upon item by item.

Article 1, on the trial of a Bishop, was read, as follows:

CHAPTER VI.—ADMINISTRATION OF DISCIPLINE.

Sec. 1.—Of the Trial of a Bishop.

Art. 1. When a Bishop is under report of being guilty of immorality, one of the other Bishops, or the presiding elder of the district in which the offense is supposed to have been committed, shall appoint three traveling elders to investigate the matter and report the result. If a majority of them believe that there should be a trial, they shall draw up the charges and specifications in due form, and indorse thereon the name of the prosecutor, if there be one, and the names of the witnesses, as far as known. If no prosecutor appear, one of the investigating committee shall become prosecutor.

Art. 2. If a trial be adjudged necessary, the Bishop to whom the report is made shall summon together, at the most suitable place for the trial, of which he shall be the judge, fifteen traveling elders, not less than nine of whom shall constitute a committee for the trial of the case, over which one of the Bishops shall preside, assisted by as many others as may be in attendance.

Art. 3. If a majority of the committee believe from the evidence that the accused is guilty as charged, the committee shall depose him from his office and from the ministry, and shall suspend or expel him from the church.

Art. 4. If a Bishop offend by imprudent conduct, or by indulging in sinful tempers or words not expressly forbidden in the word of God, or by disseminating, publicly or privately, doctrines which are contrary to our Articles of Religion, or by creating dissensions in our church by any means, let one or more of the Bishops, or, in the absence of a Bishop, one or more traveling elders, communicate with him on the subject and remonstrate against his conduct. If he persist in his course, let him be proceeded against according to articles 1 and 2.

Art. 5. If a Bishop be convicted under article 4 he may be suspended or deposed from his office and from the ministry, and suspended or expelled from the church, according to the judgment of the committee.

Art. 6. Charges of maladministration against a Bishop shall be heard and passed upon by the General Conference, through the committee on episcopacy, whose judgment shall be final.

Art. 7. The credentials of a deposed Bishop shall be demanded by the presiding Bishop, who shall return them with the record to the secretary of the General Conference.

Art. 8. If a Bishop willfully cease from traveling without the consent of the General Conference, he shall not thereafter exercise the episcopal office in our church, and shall be proceeded against as in case of imprudent conduct.

H. F. Johnson, chairman of the committee, stated that the object of the report was to present a uniform plan—one that would apply to Bishops, traveling preachers, local preachers and members of the church alike. This report had carefully answered all objections to the old plan, was shorter than the old, and differed materially from it only in the fact that it provided for the trial of a Bishop by a committee, thus giving him the right of appeal to the General Conference, according to the law in the Discipline of 1856.

On motion of J. H. Pritchett the article was amended by substituting the word "alleged" for "supposed."

A motion of Anson West to lay the whole section on the table was lost.

A motion of P. A. Peterson to strike out the words, "or the presiding elder of the district in which the offense is alleged to have been committed," was laid on the table.

G. M. Winton called for the previous question, and the call was sustained.

The question was put and the item was adopted.

Article 2 was read, and the committee accepted an amendment of J. E. Evans, to wit: "twenty-one" was substituted for "fifteen," and "thirteen" for "nine."

On motion of H. A. C. Walker the words "not less than" were stricken out.

The second item was then adopted.

Article 3 was read.

A motion of J. Hamilton to strike out the words "depose and expel" was lost.

A motion of J. O. A. Clark to strike out "depose him from his office and" was lost.

On motion of L. M. Lee the article was amended by inserting the words "of two-thirds" after the word "majority."

The vote was taken and division called for, and the motion was carried by a vote of 106 to 51.

A motion of J. B. Hunnicutt to reconsider the vote by which item three was adopted was, on motion of A. R. Winfield, laid on the table.

Articles 4 and 5 were read and adopted.

Article 6 was read.

W. Shapard offered the following amendment:

"Charges of maladministration against a Bishop shall be heard by the General Conference through its committee on episcopacy, and passed upon by the General Conference, whose judgment shall be final."

On motion of A. R. Winfield and J. B. McFerrin the following substitute for the item and the amendment was adopted by a vote of 72 to 61:

"6. Charges of maladministration against a Bishop shall be presented to the General Conference through the committee on episcopacy, and the action of the Conference shall be final."

Articles 7 and 8 were read and adopted.

On motion of M. S. Andrews the vote was reconsidered by which it was ordered that an afternoon session be held, and the Conference adjourned to meet to-morrow morning at nine o'clock.

The doxology was sung, and the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Kavanaugh.

Death of Mrs. Chamberlin.

MR. EDITOR: We, the citizens of Ocean Springs and vicinity, with the members of the different branches of the church of Christ, assembled around the grave of Mrs. Delia T. Chamberlin, desire to make an expression of our deep sorrow and affliction on this sad day. We recognize the strange Divine Providence by which our beloved sister and friend, Mrs. Delia T. Chamberlin, has been so suddenly called away from this life, and bow in humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well. We feel that her death is a public calamity, and will bring sorrow to many hearts, far and near. We therefore offer to her bereaved family and relatives our most sincere sympathy and condolence in their great affliction and sorrow, and our prayers for the grace and blessing of God, who alone can comfort them.

The Rev. W. H. Watkins, D. D., her pastor in former years, is hereby requested to prepare an obituary for publication, and he is also requested to preach her funeral sermon; and we further suggest, if agreeable, the approaching camp meeting at the Seashore camp ground as an appropriate time and place.

We request the publication of this paper in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

The Trial of a Bishop.

Pending the final action of the General Conference, May 19, on the trial of a Bishop—an entirely new plan introduced by the committee on church trials—Bishop McTyeire came forward upon the platform and said:

MR. PRESIDENT AND BRETHREN: It is with much diffidence that I rise to offer a few remarks upon this subject before final action is taken. I do not rise to argue the question, but to call attention to some points which I think have been overlooked; and when your attention is called to them I do not take it upon me to believe that it will alter the course of your legislation; but I think I owe it to the church that you shall not act upon this question without my making these suggestions. In the first place, I hoped to hear some reason given for changing the whole judicial legislation of the church. I have heard none but this: that the old law contains three thousand words and this two thousand! Our system of church trials is like the common law. It has grown up, developed, we know not how. Bishop Asbury touched it. Bishop McKendree, who was to Methodist jurisprudence what Chief Justice Marshall was to the law of the land, further touched and systematized it. The General Conferences looked at it from the standpoint of Methodist pastors, and shaped it to suit the necessities of the church. If they had been judges, who could issue bench-warrants—if they had been lawyers, who could force attendance of witnesses—they would, no doubt, have built up a very different system from the beginning. It has been, at various times, amended by the hands of the men who are to administer it—pastors, presiding elders, wise, church-loving officials. It is very hazardous, at one blow, to upset this whole system of a hundred years' growth, and attempt to adapt it to the analogies of civil law. I don't know the brethren on that committee—I am far from reflecting upon them. No doubt they are as devoted as I am, but, let me ask, have they not been reading Blackstone and Chitty, and looked at ecclesiastical law through those spectacles? They are none the worse for that; but I am afraid they have not entertained the difference between civil and ecclesiastical polity—the law which suits lawyers and the law which suits pastors. I suppose the purpose is either to protect the Bishops or to make sure of bringing them to account if they do wrong. I hope, Mr. President, that I shall never feel this law either one way or the other, but if a Bishop were disposed to do wrong, I see how there is a better opportunity for him under this low than under that which has stood since 1808. Suppose a Methodist Bishop to turn Colenso, and, with his name and office upon him, to be nevertheless heretical thoroughly. What will you do with him? Well, worry along a little while, and when the General Conference meets, made up of wise and learned doctors, and pastors and judges, the best lawyers of the land, and chancellors, why Colenso would be brought to a final end—you would soon unfrock him. But under the law as proposed here, if the presiding elder and brethren don't like the way he is acting in disseminating doctrines contrary to our creed, they get him before a committee of thirteen to be tried. Now suppose he is a man of great force of character—as these men generally are—operating with magnetic power on those about him. Seven of the committee pronounce him innocent; six pronounce him guilty. Very well; he has been tried now. By and by the church begins to be scandalized at his heresies. It won't do for this man to expound Methodist doctrines authoritatively. He comes up to the General Conference—this Methodist Colenso—corrupting the preachers and sapping the foundations of doctrine. You must arrest him. "Oh, no," he says, "I've been tried once for that and acquitted." You cannot get at his case but by appeal. You inquire who acquitted him. The reply is a committee of thirteen away down there in Sleepy Hollow. Who were they? A., B., C. and D. Were they doctors learned in the law? No, but they were good men. Could they discriminate the nice points of heresy? Perhaps not; but they were good men, and had the power to try and acquit.

He can defy you. A general superintendent has been made amenable to a local tribunal! This great synod of the church has divested itself of original jurisdiction in this case. His orthodoxy is questioned—the papers are writing about it, the people are talking, but this high judicatory is helpless to protect the church. You have parted with the power. All you have to depend on is the verdict of seven out of thirteen, of perhaps an obscure committee. The trial held in a place that you would have to search your geographies to find.

Again, suppose I—pardon me for bringing it home to myself, as I would not make such a supposition in regard to any of my colleagues—suppose I am guilty of imprudent conduct or downright immorality. My good neighbors and friends are partial to me; I let the case go to trial; I take my chances before the committee of thirteen, and I am cleared. The church at large is outraged. They must receive and sanction a man not officially passed upon by the General Conference representing the whole church. As I see it, you have reserved to this body the right only to look into charges for episcopal maladministration—the rest you have relegated to a lower court.

I trust the church may be ever blest of God with pure, sincere and holy men, but, if the wicked wish to come in to corrupt and to ruin, they will be more easily sheltered by the law which you have here framed than by that which has come down to us from 1808. The last conventional General Conference fixed this law substantially as we have it now. Let me ask: Has it ever failed to meet our needs? Have we ever failed under it to get at an offender? I was looking that the brethren, before sweeping this away, would show that the old law was weak or impracticable—that we needed something new—but they have not done so.

On the other hand, is this new law needed for the protection of the Bishops? "Yes," say the brethren, "our constitution—one of the six restrictive rules—provides that an accused person shall not be denied the right of trial and appeal, and we want to bring the Bishops in reach of that benefit." But the very conventional General Conference of 1808, which made that constitution, put into the Discipline the law which we now have, which leaves Bishops without appeal. It is the infelicity of some positions that they do not admit of the right of appeal. You must take them cum onere. Some have been impeached in these last years. Suppose a conviction—would they have had any right of appeal? A Methodist Bishop is safe in this—that he has the most responsible tribunal of the church to try him in the first instance. If such a body as this, made up of two hundred and eighty odd men, many of them skilled in law and discipline, unprejudiced by local considerations, and taking a calm view of things, were to try a local or traveling preacher, there would be no use of appeal. The man who has the first trial here may waive the theoretical benefit of an appeal. When the highest judicatory of the church has passed upon his case, he can go no higher—he must take it next to the court of Heaven.

As reference has been made to the Conference of 1854 at which the law now proposed was introduced, I now say that this was done under certain influences, which I will not stop now to give the history of. A mass of legislation got into the Discipline on this subject, which is a surprise to any one who takes the pains to study it out. The General Conference of 1870 swept out all that fungus and put back substantially the law of 1808. I hoped it would stand for the rest of our time. I felt rebuked at our comparative instability when, looking into the Discipline of the Northern Methodists, some time ago, I saw the same old law of 1808. Although they had been charged with views of the episcopacy which we do not entertain, nevertheless they had not, on this point, left the old landmark. But in their last Discipline I find the old landmark gone, and in its stead a law very much the same with that you are about to act on.

Allow me to say I do not speak to guard myself or colleagues, but the church's safety. It is a serious thing, for the sake of mere theory, in order to run out analogies, to root up a system of laws which have come to us like traditions. We may mend and have mended from time to time, but the proposal now is to sweep away all our former modes of trial—trial of Bishops, trial of preachers, local and traveling, and trial of private members—and bring new methods. It is not a small matter to set twenty-five hundred Methodist preachers administering new laws to bring six hundred thousand members, who have grown up under the old law, which they have learned without reading, under new procedures, new appeals, new courts. Perhaps that which is proposed is better in itself—more consistent with the pure reason—and perhaps if we had no law of trial already it would be well to adopt it; but we have one, and we have had—one that is intertwined with all our usages—which we have inherited from our fathers, which has developed and grown out of our very system. I respectfully submit you had better pause before you sweep it away. (See report on sixth page.)

The Board of Missions.

The Daily Christian Advocate of May 15 says:

The Board of Missions held its last meeting, for the quadrennium which has just closed, on Monday afternoon, at Broadway church. Its meetings during the whole term of its existence have been characterized by kindness and harmony, and the closing scene was one of peace and love. Among other important matters that passed under review were those connected with our promising mission in Mexico. This mission has cost up to date only about $13,000, including the valuable church property which has been purchased. This is regarded as a very economical management of the mission. The board adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the board has heard with peculiar pleasure the report of Bishop Keener, of the condition and prospects of our missionary work in Mexico.

Resolved, That we will address ourselves with renewed zeal in aid of this new field of labor.

NOTICE.—The brethren concerned will please look in the appropriate place for the time of several quarterly meetings on the Mobile district.

THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

ELEVENTH DAY.

WEDNESDAY, May 13, 1874.

Conference met at the appointed hour, Bishop Pierce in the chair.

Religious exercises were conducted by J. P. Duncan.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

On motion of H. J. Adams the rules were suspended to allow of the presentation of a paper to be referred to the Bishops.

The paper was read and referred, as follows:

Be it resolved by the Delegates of the Methodist Episcopal Churches South, in General Conference assembled, That the Bishops be requested to address a pastoral letter to our people, bringing prominently before them the social meetings of the church; presenting their advantages, and urging attendance upon them; setting forth the true meaning and intention of the General Conference of 1866 by its action respecting class meetings; and that in this address the obligation of every member of the church to fast, to pray, to read the Holy Scriptures, and of every head of a family or of a household to observe family prayer, be plainly, affectionately, yet earnestly enforced; also that they direct the attention of the preachers and the laity to the frequent and increasing violation of that rule of the Discipline which forbids the taking such diversions "as cannot be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus;" and make known to all who are intrusted with the administration of the rules and regulations of the church that this General Conference is profoundly convinced of the fact that a very important work now to be done by Bishops, presiding elders, preachers in charge, leaders and stewards is to unite in a patient, earnest, prayerful, faithful, judicious administration of church discipline.

Dr. Albert S. Hunt came forward and said:

BRETHREN: When I stood here on Friday last I came strengthened and supported by the consciousness of the divine presence, and I have felt during every hour of my tarry in this city that God has been near to all of us. It is becoming, then, that the first expression of our thanks be made to the common Head of the church. Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost, for the peace which has prevailed among us. I think, brethren, that we would return home just as well assured that we carry with us your hearts, yet we thank you for this expression which you have made. We shall ever prize it as the choicest thing in our history.

As one of our colleagues has been called off on business, and will not be here to speak for himself, I say to you, for him, and for myself, that on every hand we have been pressed with the tenderest tokens of Christian affection. May the blessing of God rest upon you!

In the midst of applause Dr. Chas. H. Fowler was called for. He said: I will only add that which I could not have thought I would be able to say. When I received the appointment upon this commission I thought that perhaps it was because I was a young man. A man in our church said to me: "It is well for you to go, as God is with you, and his blessing upon you and this people. Some of us who remember 1844 will have to go to heaven before we can have peace." But my presence with you has demonstrated the all-conquering spirit of Methodism. The men of 1844 have been as cordial and warm as the younger men. This demonstrates the power of the gospel to keep men young. I have found heads covered with the light of eternity, as towering mountains catch the light of heaven. I have seen this heavenly halo about their brow. I find them all young and glowing with the warmest sympathy in behalf of our church. I wish to say that since we have been here I have received letters from our leading men, full of the strongest congratulations upon the manner in which we have been received. I bid you Godspeed.

The resolution was adopted with the suggestion of Dr. Granbery, making the first a preamble to the second.

At the suggestion of Governor Polk the secretary was instructed to furnish the delegation with a copy of the resolution.

On motion of T. Polk report No. 1 of the committee on boundaries was taken up, and the fifth item read.

The item of the report was adopted.

On motion of E. W. Sehon the session was prolonged fifteen minutes.

Prof. McIntosh was introduced by the Bishop to the Conference. He led the Conference in singing several beautiful pieces in the new hymn and tune-book published by order of the General Conference of 1870.

The Conference then adjourned with the benediction by the Bishop.

TWELFTH DAY.

THURSDAY, May 14, 1874.

Conference met at the stated hour, Bishop Kavanaugh in the chair.

Religious exercises were conducted by Morris Evans.

Bishop Wightman took the chair.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

The chair then called for reports of standing committees.

John E. Edwards, chairman of the committee on itinerancy, presented report No. 3 of said committee, which was read and adopted.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

1. All the papers relating to the presiding eldership, and to the number of circuits and stations allowable in a presiding elder's district, coming up from various sources in the form of resolutions, signed by leading clerical and lay members of the General Conference, have been carefully examined and patiently considered by the committee, and, after the most mature deliberation, with remarkable unanimity (considering the number of resolutions submitted to the committee) we recommend that no change be made in the existing laws and regulations relating to the subject.

2. The memorial from the St. Louis Annual Conference, instructing their delegates to the General Conference "to oppose all further extension of the pastoral term," and the memorial from the Baltimore Annual Conference, instructing their delegates to the General Conference to oppose any measure in the way of General Conference action that "might tend, in any way, to impair the fundamental basis of our peculiar church government, or modify the method of her instrumental activities," have received the respectful attention of the committee, with the conclusion that no recommendation to the Conference is deemed necessary, other than the notice hereby submitted, touching these memorials.

JOHN E. EDWARDS, Chair'n.

W. G. E. Cunnyngham, chairman of the committee on missions, presented report No. 1 of the committee on missions, which was read and laid on the table under the rule.

REPORT NO. I OF THE COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.

Your committee have had under careful review the whole field of missionary operations connected with our church; they have examined the annual report of the secretary and the proceedings of the Board of Missions for the past four years.

Every department of the work has been thoroughly explored, and its condition and wants carefully considered.

While some parts of our missionary machinery have not worked as well as could be desired, we consider this due to organic defects in the constitution rather than to any want of fidelity or energy in the agents employed. Our investigations have discovered nothing wrong in the proceedings of the board or in the administration of its affairs by the secretary.

We have revised and endeavored so to change the constitution as to adapt it more perfectly to the character of our missionary work; in this we have found great difficulty, and may not have succeeded. As few changes as possible have been made—such only as the experience of the last four years seemed to demand. The constitution as revised, and which we now submit for your adoption, is as follows:

CHAPTER X.—MISSIONS.

The missionary operations of the Methodist Episcopal Church South shall hereafter be conducted under the following provisions and regulations:

Art. 1. There shall be a Board of Missions, which shall have charge of the foreign missions and of all others not provided for by the Annual Conferences.

Art. 2. Said board shall consist of a president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and eleven managers, to be elected quadrennially by the General Conference, and to continue in office until their successors are appointed. The Bishops shall be ex officio members of the board.

Art. 3. The board shall have authority to regulate its own proceedings; to appropriate money to defray incidental expenses; to provide for the support of superannuated missionaries and widows and orphans of missionaries who may not be provided for by any Annual Conference; to print books for the Indian, German and foreign missions; to build houses for worship, for schools and for missionaries; and to defray the necessary expenses of the work under its care. It shall also publish annually a statement of its transactions, naming the missions supported by it, and the amount appropriated and paid to each, and lay before the General Conference a report of its operations.

Art. 4. The board shall meet annually to determine what fields shall be occupied as missions; the number of persons to be employed in each, and to estimate the amount that may be necessary for the support of the missions under its charge, and to divide the same among the several Annual Conferences—having reference in said division to the extent and importance of the domestic work in each Conference, and to the ability and disposition of the people to give.

Art. 5. The board shall employ only effective men for its work, and shall require each one to make a quarterly report to the secretary of his operations, and of the state and prospects of the work in his charge.

Art. 6. The revenue of the board shall be derived from annual collections in every congregation, and at District Conferences, and from collections in the Sunday school and church missionary societies, and from special collections by the secretary and the Bishops, and from donations and legacies.

Art. 7. The secretary shall be a minister of the gospel, and may be a member of any Annual Conference, but shall reside where the board is located. It shall be his duty to keep a permanent record of the proceedings of the board, and to publish an abstract of them in the church papers, to conduct its correspondence, to attend to all its legal business, to prepare its annual report, and to publish monthly (either in a missionary paper or in the church papers, as the board shall direct) statements of the condition, needs and prospects of the various missions. The salary of the secretary shall be fixed by the board, and all necessary traveling expenses shall be allowed.

Art. 8. The treasurer shall hold the funds of the board in safe deposit, which deposit shall be made by him as treasurer, subject to his drafts as such, and to those of his successors in office. He shall also furnish an annual report, to be published with that of the secretary.

Art. 9. The board shall fill all vacancies that may occur.

Art. 10. Nine members shall constitute a quorum at an annual meeting of the board, and seven at a called meeting.

Art. 11. This board shall be located in the city of ——.

Art. 12. Each Annual Conference shall organize a board of missions, which shall appoint its own officers and regulate its own affairs, and have absolute control of the missions it may establish, with the consent of the president of the Conference, within its own bounds, and of the funds raised for their support.

Art. 13. The Conference board shall disseminate missionary intelligence among the people, hold an anniversary meeting at each session of the Conference, publish a full report of its operations every year in the minutes of the Conference, and annually estimate the amount that may be necessary for the support of its own missions, and apportion the same to the presiding elders' districts for collection.

Art. 14. The apportionment to a Conference for the general work shall be divided by the Conference board among the districts, and the preachers in charge shall take up a collection in every congregation to meet the same.

Art. 15. Any person or Sunday school or church or Conference may assume, in whole or in part, the support of a mission or a mission school established by the general board, and send their contributions directly to such mission or school, of which the general treasurer shall be immediately notified; provided that the Conference in whose territory such moneys may be given shall have credit for the same in settling the apportionment of the general board.

Art. 16. The collections for the Conference and general boards shall not be taken up on the same day.

Art. 17. The treasurer of the Conference board shall transmit to the treasurer of the general board all moneys he may receive for general purposes.

Art. 18. It shall be the duty of the presiding elder to bring the subject of missions prominently before the Quarterly Conferences of each circuit and station, and to hold a missionary meeting during the session of the District Conference; and it shall be the duty of the preacher in charge to form a missionary society in every Sunday school or church of his work, and whatever moneys are raised in these societies shall be exclusively for the general board.

W. G. E. CUNNYNGHAM,
Chairman.

Laid on the table under the rule, and made the order of the day for Monday, May 18, at ten A. M.

Also report No. 2 of said committee, which was received and adopted.

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.

The committee on missions beg leave to return to the General Conference the preamble and resolutions concerning our missions in Mexico, signed by James Wickersham and James Mackay, and referred to us. We do this at the request of the brethren who presented the paper, and ask that it be returned to them.

W. G. E. CUNNYNGHAM,
Chairman.

W. C. Johnson, chairman of the committee on books and periodicals, presented report No. 3 of said committee, which was read, and on motion of L. M. Lee it was laid on the table until to-morrow, and ordered to be printed in the Daily Christian Advocate.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

1. Your committee having considered the resolution offered by H. H. Montgomery, J. T. Heard and P. Tuggle, concerning the publication of a Methodist Quarterly Review by the book agent at Nashville, submit the following resolution for adoption by the General Conference, viz.:

Resolved, That in the judgment of the General Conference there is no present necessity for the establishment of a Methodist Quarterly Review, to be published by the book agent at Nashville.

2. The resolution offered by E. E. Wiley, W. M. Leftwich and A. R. Winfield, instructing your committee to ascertain and report by what action of the General Conference authority has been given to print on the title page of the cover of the Southern Review these words: "Published under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal Church South;" and also what is the legal relation, if any, of the Southern Review to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, has received much attention from the committee, and they present the following report:

The committee have ascertained that the words above mentioned were placed on the title page of the cover of the Southern Review by the first publisher after the General Conference of 1870, he believing that he was justified in so doing by the action of that General Conference.

The committee state further that in their judgment the Southern Review, by the action of the last General Conference, sustains a formal relation to the Methodist Episcopal Church South, but no such legal relation as makes the church responsible either for its financial support or for its utterances.

The committee recommend the adoption of the following resolutions, viz.:

Resolved, That while we cannot indorse all the utterances of the Southern Review, edited by Dr. Bledsoe, yet we regard it as in the main an able exponent of the doctrines and polity of our church, and heartily commend it to the liberal patronage of our people; provided Dr. Bledsoe accept an editorial committee, who shall prescribe the general policy of the Southern Review, and have special oversight of its theological department.

Resolved, That the editorial committee consist of Bishop Marvin, Dr. McAnally and Governor Polk.

Respectfully submitted.

W. C. JOHNSON, Chairman.

Laid on the table, Thursday morning, May 14, 1874.

Also report No. 4 of said committee, which was read and acted upon, item by item.

REPORT NO. IV OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

1. The communication of J. B. McFerrin, former agent of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, and with it an exhibit of the house, March 1, 1862, intended for presentation to the General Conference appointed for that year, have been considered by the committee. The General Conference did not meet in 1862, and this exhibit was mislaid and not recovered until after the General Conference of 1870. Though not an official document, this exhibit should be preserved as part of the history of the Publishing House. Therefore the following resolution is recommended to the General Conference:

Resolved, That the exhibit of the Southern Methodist Publishing House, March 1, 1862, with the communication of J. B. McFerrin respecting it, be put in charge of the book agent for preservation among the papers of the Publishing House.

2. The resolution of M. Evans and R. Hiuer, with regard to the blank forms for church use, has been considered, and the committee recommend its adoption, viz.:

Resolved, That the book agent be instructed to print and keep for sale all such blank forms as Annual and Quarterly Conferences, presiding elders and preachers in charge may need to secure uniformity in style and completeness in statistical detail.

3. The committee have considered the resolution offered by W. M. Leftwich, W. M. Rush and A. T. Scruggs, instructing the committee to inquire into the expediency of authorizing the book agent and book committee to establish branch houses for the sale of our books and periodicals, at any time after the session of the General Conference, and at any place in our connection where the way may be opened, and, in their judgment, necessity may exist, also to publish church papers at such branch houses. The committee report that it is not expedient to confer such authority.

Respectfully submitted.

W. C. JOHNSON, Chairman.

Adopted Thursday, May 14, 1874.

I. G. John, chairman of the special committee on the price of church papers, presented the report of said committee.

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON THE PRICE OF CHURCH PAPERS.

The committee to which the question of securing a uniformity of price among our church papers was referred, beg leave to report:

After a free interchange of opinion between the representatives of our church papers we find no difference in judgment respecting the importance of raising their price.

Uniformity in price is deemed especially important, as the reduction of the price of one paper compels others to adopt the same policy, or lose patronage which may be essential to their support.

Your committee recommend the adoption of the following:

Resolved, That the price of our church papers shall be fixed at not less than $2.50 per annum in currency, and that this change shall go into effect on the first day of July, 1874, and shall be published simultaneously in our church papers, that the agents and patrons of each one may know that this action is indorsed by all our church papers.

I. G. JOHN, Chairman.

On motion of T. M. N. Jones the report was laid on the table.

The following resolution was then offered and read:

Resolved, That our Bishops be and they are hereby requested, in their pastoral address, to call attention to and express their disapprobation of operatic performance in our churches, which drowns the sense of our hymns, and utterly destroys congregational singing.

F. E. PITTS.
A. R. WINFIELD.
P. A. PETERSON.

Dr. Leftwich said that this was a very difficult matter to press. He loved singing, and no man's heart had been more thrilled with music than his own; but he did not think special legislation was the proper remedy for the evil which had been referred to. Choirs should be recommended to use old-fashioned music. A wise encouragement would be of more importance than special legislation. He offered the following substitute, which was accepted by the original mover:

Resolved, That the Bishops be requested to urge, in their pastoral address, the importance of congregational singing in our churches.

Adopted.

The Conference then adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by the Bishop.

THIRTEENTH DAY.

FRIDAY, May 15, 1874.

Conference met at the appointed hour, Bishop Wightman in the chair.

Religious exercises were conducted by A. Hunter.

The minutes of the last meeting were read, corrected and approved.

Bishop Marvin took the chair, and called for reports of standing committees.

J. E. Edwards, chairman of the committee on itinerancy, presented report No. 4 of the committee, which was read.

REPORT NO. IV OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The resolution signed by A. R. Winfield and Leroy M. Lee, asking that the resolution adopted by the General Conference held in Memphis, 1870, "authorizing the Bishops to appoint one or more preachers to any proper work beyond the bounds of the Annual Conferences, be and is hereby repealed;" and the resolution signed by L. Pierce, N. H. D. Wilson, J. A. O. Clark, S Babo, J. E. Evans and others, requesting "that the committee on itinerancy be instructed to inquire into the expediency of making some provision, to be inserted in the Discipline or otherwise, by which a Bishop, on the request of an Annual Conference, may appoint a preacher to any proper pastoral work beyond the bounds of the Annual Conferences," have been considered and discussed by the committee in all their bearings and relations, and, after patient and protracted deliberation, we recommend the adoption of the following resolutions by the General Conference, viz.:

Resolved, That the resolution adopted in 1870, referred to in the first-mentioned resolution, be and the same is hereby repealed.

Resolved, That during the next four years the presiding Bishop of an Annual Conference, when requested by said Conference, may appoint, at his discretion, one or more members of the Conference to any proper pastoral work beyond the bounds of the Annual Conferences.

JOHN E. EDWARDS, Chair'n.

Adopted Friday morning, May 15.

The first resolution was then read and passed without debate.

After much debate the second resolution was adopted by a vote of 111 to 81.

The order of the day, report No. 2 of the committee on Sunday schools, was taken up, and with it the minority report, both of which were read.

M. S. Andrews moved the adoption of the report of the minority for the report of the majority. Adopted.

A. R. Winfield presented minority report for report No. 2 of the committee on missions, which was laid on the table for the present, and ordered to be printed in the Daily Christian Advocate.

MINORITY REPORT FOR REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.

We beg leave to present the following as a substitute for report No. 2 of the committee on missions:

Art. 1. The officers of this society shall be a president, —— vice presidents, two secretaries, a treasurer and twenty-one managers. They shall all be members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and shall be elected quadrennially by the General Conference, except the treasurer, who shall be elected by the officers and managers.

When, from any cause, the General Conference shall fail to meet at the time appointed, the officers and managers shall continue in office until the next meeting of the General Conference. The Bishops shall be ex officio vice presidents, and shall act with the board of managers in all of the business of the society.

Art. 2. It shall be the duty of the president to preside at all meetings of the society, to preserve order, and to call the society together when necessary; and to discharge such other duties as shall be imposed upon him.

Art. 3. The vice presidents shall assist the president, and in his absence shall preside. Should the president and vice president be absent at any regular or called meeting, a president pro tem. shall be elected.

Art. 4. The secretaries shall reside at the place where the society is located, but may be members of any Annual Conference. It shall be their duty to journalize the proceedings of the society, to correspond with all our missionaries, both foreign and domestic, and shall procure all information concerning fields of missionary enterprises not under our control; and shall publish from time to time, through our church papers or otherwise, such information as the society may direct or they may think proper. They shall furnish each Annual Conference, at its regular sessions, with a condensed report of our missionary operations, and the necessities of the society; and shall make quadrennially to the General Conference a full account of all our missionaries, missions and such other facts as may be necessary; to travel, as far as practicable, throughout the connection, superintending the interests of the society. They shall visit such Annual Conferences and do such other work as the society, from time to time, may direct. The salaries of the secretaries shall be fixed by the board of managers, with the consent and approval of the president.

Art. 5. The treasurer shall hold all the funds of the society in safe deposit, which deposit shall be made by him as an officer of the society, subject to his drafts as such, and to those of his successors in office. He shall pay all drafts drawn on him by any one of our Bishops, and countersigned by either one of the secretaries, and such other sums as may be directed by the board. He shall also furnish an annual report to the Annual Conferences, and a quadrennial report to the General Conference.

Art. 6. The board of managers shall held an annual meeting at the regular meeting of the College of Bishops. They shall provide for a regular anniversary meeting of the society and for a quadrennial meeting. They shall, by and with the consent of the Bishops and other officers of the board, make all appropriations necessary to carry on the operations of the society. They shall determine what amount is needed for our foreign and domestic missions, and shall divide it among the Annual Conferences, upon the basis of the salaries of the Bishops or any other way they may judge best. They shall, from time to time, determine what fields are to be occupied as missions. All of our missions shall be under the control of the parent board. All funds raised for missionary purposes shall pass through the hands of the general treasurer. The board shall have authority to print books in Indian, German or any other language, build school-houses, houses of worship, residences for the missionaries, provide for superannuated missionaries, and for the widows and orphans of deceased missionaries not provided for by an Annual Conference; to defray such incidental expenses as may be necessary; to make by-laws for their own government; to examine annually the books of the secretaries and treasurer; to see that all our missionary operations are properly conducted, and to make a faithful report to the General Conference. Twelve shall constitute a quorum at the annual meeting and seven at a called meeting.

Art. 7. Our missionaries shall be allowed a sufficient sum to support them in their work. The board shall require each missionary to furnish a quarterly report of his labors to the secretaries, giving information of the state and prospects of the work on which they are employed. No one shall be recognized as a missionary or receive support from the board who has not some definite work assigned him, or could not be an active laborer on a circuit, except such as are provided for in article 6.

Art. 8. The revenue of the society shall be derived as follows: From annual collections from the Annual Conferences, made thus: A society shall be organized in every Church Conference, District Conference and Annual Conference, as auxiliary to the parent society, with such officers and regulations as they may agree upon; no preacher shall fail to present the subject of missions to every congregation in his charge. From collections made by the secretaries, from donations and legacies, and from the anniversaries of the parent society.

Art. 10. Any person may become a life member of the parent society by the payment of $20 at any one time, a life director by the payment of $50, and a patron by the payment of $100.

Art. 11. Each Annual Conference shall either organize a board or a society, auxiliary to the parent society, and through its treasurer shall remit all moneys collected for missions to the treasurer of the parent board. And while we recommend the system of auxiliary societies, as provided for in articles 8 and 9, we leave it with each Annual Conference to determine the time and manner of its own missionary collections, provided they raise the amount assessed.

Art. 12. The superintendent and teachers, together with the preacher in charge, shall organize a missionary society in every Sunday school, and teach the children to contribute regularly to the cause of missions; and the money so collected shall be paid to the preacher in charge (taking his receipt for the same,) to be sent by him to the general treasurer as a part of his missionary assessment.

Art. 13. All money collected by the Church Conference missionary societies shall be paid by the treasurer to the preacher in charge (taking his receipt for the same,) to be carried by him to the Annual Conference.

Art. 14. All moneys collected by the District Conference missionary societies shall be paid to the different pastors as the donors may direct. Any surplus shall go to the charge where the District Conference is held.

Art 15. The general treasurer shall acknowledge, from time to time, all moneys coming into his hands through the official organ of the church.

Art. 16. The book editor and agent shall provide certificates for life members, life directors and patrons, to supply the preachers in charge throughout the church, the cost of which shall be paid by the general treasurer. Annual membership must be regulated by the different societies.

Art. 17. The society shall be located and domiciled in ——, State of ——.

All of which is respectfully submitted. A. R. WINFIELD.

Laid on the table under the rule, Friday, May 15, 1874.

R. Alexander, chairman of the committee on boundaries, presented report No. 2 of that committee, which was read and laid on the table for one day. Also a minority report presented by W. H. Conway and others of said committee.

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOUNDARIES.

Your committee on boundaries would respectfully beg leave to submit their report No. 2, as follows. We recommend:

1. That the memorial of the Western Virginia Conference be granted, and the line between the Western Virginia and Baltimore Conferences be so changed as to transfer the counties of Monroe, Greenbrier and Pocahontas to the Western Virginia Conference.

2. That the memorial for a change of boundaries between the Baltimore and Holston Conferences be granted, and that the same be so changed as to run a straight line from Jacksonville, in Floyd county, to Central Depot, in Montgomery county, so as to embrace the territory known as the New Hope circuit in the Holston Conference.

3. That your committee deem it inexpedient to grant the memorial from Elizabeth City and other Quarterly Conferences, at this time, asking that the Virginia Conference be divided, and they recommend that the prayer be not granted.

4. That the Prestonburg, Big Sandy and Piketon circuits be transferred from the Kentucky Conference to the Western Virginia Conference.

5. That the territory of the Louisiana Conference lying in the northwest corner of the State, north of Soda lake and west of Red river, be transferred and added to Trinity Conference.

6. That the memorial to transfer a part of Attala county, Mississippi, to the Mississippi Conference, be not granted.

7. That the memorial to change the name of the Mississippi Conference to that of the "South Mississippi" Conference be not concurred in.

8. That the name of Trinity Conference be and the same is hereby changed to that of "North Texas" Conference.

9. That the words "Island creek" be substituted in the place of the words "Battle creek," where the same occurs in the description of the boundary line between the Holston and North Alabama Conferences, so as to make "Island creek" instead of Battle creek the southwest boundary line of the Holston Conference.

10. That the memorial from the West Texas Conference, asking to have the Colorado river made the eastern boundary of said Conference, be not granted.

11. That the eastern boundary of the West Texas Conference be so extended as to include the following described territory, viz.: Commencing on the present eastern line of the said Conference at a point where the county lines of Travis, Hays and Caldwell counties intersect; thence due north to the mouth of Barton's creek; thence with the Colorado river until it intersects the present boundary.

12. That the "Catawba circuit" be and the same is hereby declared to be in and form a part of the Holston Conference.

13. The memorials from the White River, Arkansas and St. Louis Conferences respectively were, by the petitioners, withdrawn by the consent of the committee, and hence no action on them will be had.

Respectfully submitted.

R. ALEXANDER, Chairman.

R. S. ANDERSON, Sec.

We, the undersigned members of the committee on boundaries, dissenting from the vote of the majority by which the Lewisburg district of the Baltimore Annual Conference was detached from said Conference, and attached to the Western Virginia Conference, ask leave to present this minority report, and respectfully ask that the boundaries between the said Conferences shall remain as now established.

In reference to the preamble and resolution offered by George M. Wiuton and George M. Jones, requesting the Board of Missions to appropriate $1,000 for the free distribution of Dr. Haygood's essay on missions, your committee would respectfully report:

That while we highly appreciate the admirable essay of Dr. Haygood, we do not think the state of the missionary treasury would justify the board in making such an appropriation; and besides, we believe the merits of the essay will insure its general circulation among our people. W. G. E. CUNNYNGHAM, Chairman.

Adopted Friday, May 15.

Der Familienfreund, adopted by the General Conference of 1870 as our German church paper, is published every other week in New Orleans, at $1 a year, and is edited by the Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens; the Rev. Edward N. S. Blogg associate editor. It is a bold and thorough, honest and faithful journal, devoted to the advancement of Christianity, and the advocacy among the Germans of the doctrines and polity of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, many thousands of whom are accessible to us, particularly in Louisiana and Texas. The paper, we are informed, is a regular visitor in every family of our German membership in Louisiana and Texas, and besides, it has many readers elsewhere, and even among those who are not members of our church. The fact that it visits every family is certainly noteworthy—it shows alike the merit of the paper and the thorough training of our German membership in this line of duty; and it is commended as an example to our English-reading membership.

Der Kinderfreund, our German Sunday school paper, is published monthly at the same office as Der Familienfreund, and we are glad to learn that it is received and read by every German Sunday school in our church. This example also may be commended for imitation.

Editorial service on these papers is performed without salary, thus reducing the cost of publication to the lowest figures. The office has property on hand consisting of types, stands, plates, furniture, etc., valued at $900, and money due, $600; total, $1,500. The amount of indebtedness is $100, which, subtracted from $1,500, leaves $1,400 as profit in four years.

The Publishing House at Nashville has issued in German the hymn-book, Discipline, catechism, Sunday school song-book and Sunday school tune-book—all edited by the Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens. To these publications the book agent is expected to add others whenever the demand shall justify it.

It is very desirable that Der Familienfreund should be published weekly, and that it should be furnished with a better and fuller supply of printing material. But as it is not expedient to devolve any part of the expense of the paper upon the Publishing House, other means should be devised to obtain the funds necessary to accomplish the object in view.

The following resolutions are offered for adoption by the General Conference, viz.:

Resolved, That the publishing committee of our German papers be authorized, according to their request, to solicit contributions with which to purchase printing material for the purpose of enabling them, at an early day, to publish Der Familienfreund weekly, and in a better manner.

Resolved, That the Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens be appointed editor of our German papers for the next four years, with the Rev. Edward S. Blogg corresponding editor of Der Familienfreund, and that the publishing committee consist of the Rev. F. Vordenbaumen, the Rev. John A. Pauly and the Rev. J. B. A. Ahrens.

Respectfully submitted.

W. C. JOHNSON, Chairman.

Laid on the table for one day, Friday, May 15.

J. W. Hanner, chairman of the committee on revisal, presented report No. 4 of said committee, which was read and laid over under the rule.

REPORT NO. IV OF COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

On sundry papers the committee offer the following recommendations:

1. Non-concurrence with a resolution of W. M. Cook and J. W. Whitten, to define what number of stewards and trustees constitute a quorum.

2. Paper signed J. S. Kennedy and C. Long, proposing to fix the membership of local preachers in certain cases. No further legislation necessary.

3. Concurrence with a resolution of C. Long and J. W. Gant, to strike out the phrase, "with closed doors;" page 110, chapter 5, section 3, answer 1, so that the paragraph as amended shall read: "Answer 1. Love-feasts shall be held quarterly, or at such other times as the preacher in charge may consider expedient, to which, beside church members, other serious persons may be admitted by him."

4. Non-concurrence with the resolution of C. I. Vandeventer and J. E. Ryland, to publish the "Bishops' address" of 1870 in the Discipline.

5. On a resolution of L. S. Reed and R. Pollard, to discourage operatic singing in our churches. Your committee believe the directions given on pages 108-9 are sufficient, and deem further legislation on this subject needless.

6. On a resolution of M. Price and E. A. Martin, respecting the powers of a presiding elder. No legislation is needed.

7. A resolution of L. D. Palmer and others, to change the word "present" to prosecute is returned to the General Conference with the request that it be referred to the committee on church trials.

8. On sundry papers, signed by C. W. Miller, H. A. Boarland and others, asking a change in the Ritual for baptism, your committee concur with recommending the following proposed changes in chapter 13, section 2, page 188: After the word "us," in the first line of the exhortation, strike out all to the pronoun "I," and insert in lieu thereof: "Our Savior Christ commanded his apostles to go and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost." Then substitute the word goodness for "mercy," being for "may be," may also be baptized with for "and," living for "lively," so that the paragraph as amended shall read:

"Dearly beloved, forasmuch as our Savior Christ commanded his apostles to go and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost, I beseech you to call upon God the Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that of his bounteous goodness he will grant to this child that which by nature he cannot have; that he, being baptized with water, may also be baptized with the Holy Ghost, and received into Christ's holy church, and be made a living member of the same."

It is also recommended that the prayer on page 190, chapter 13, section 2, third paragraph, be changed by striking out the phrase, "did shed out of his most precious side both water and blood," and in lieu thereof inserting, "did shed his most precious blood." Then strike out the words, "the supplications of thy congregation; and grant," and insert, "our supplications," so that the paragraph as amended shall read:

"Almighty, ever living God, whose most dearly-beloved Son Jesus Christ, for the forgiveness of our sins, did shed his most precious blood, and gave commandment to his disciples that they should go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, regard, we beseech thee, our supplications that this child, now to be baptized, may receive the fullness of thy grace, and ever remain in the number of thy faithful and elect children, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

Furthermore, it is recommended that the exhortation on pages 193-4, section 3, chapter 13, be conformed to the proposed changes, as above, so that this amended paragraph shall read:

"Dearly beloved, forasmuch as our Savior Christ commanded his apostles to go and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost, I beseech you to call upon God the Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that of his bounteous goodness he will grant to these persons that which by nature they cannot have; that they, being baptized with water, may also be baptized with the Holy Ghost, and received into Christ's holy church, and be made living members of the same."

9. With a resolution of W. G. Veal and others, to amend the Discipline, page 107, paragraph 2, by inserting after the words "shall be," invested in other church property. Paragraph as amended:

"2. The trustees, with the consent of the preacher in charge and the Quarterly Conference, shall have power to sell any church or parsonage property which has gone out of use, or should be removed to another place, the proceeds of which shall be invested in other church property, under the direction of the Quarterly Conference." Your committee concur.

10. On a resolution of same, to have the Discipline published with marginal references to proof texts of doctrines, your committee recommend that your book editor be instructed to append to each article of religion references to some of the texts by which it is sustained.

Respectfully submitted.

The paper signed by W. M. Leftwich and A. T. Scruggs, asking for an expression of opinion as to the legality of continuing an effective traveling preacher ten or fifteen years in one pastoral charge, by the appointment of Bishops and presiding elders, was considered at length, and the committee return the following answer:

They are unable to see how, under any proper administration of the Discipline, the case supposed in the resolution of W. M. Leftwich and A. T. Scruggs could occur, except in violation of the Discipline, and we hereby express our disapproval of such a policy. See the Discipline, page 61, question 3, section 2.

The committee on episcopacy have thoroughly discussed the question presented in the paper signed by A. E. Goodwyn and J. Harvey Brigham, asking them to inquire into the expediency of electing two additional Bishops at this General Conference, and by a decided majority passed the following resolutions:

That we do not concur in their recommendation to increase the number of Bishops; but, to supply a felt want of the church west of the Mississippi river, we request the Bishops so to distribute their episcopal labors as to give the West more of their time and service than heretofore, especially in Texas and California.

REPORT NO. V OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

1. The paper signed by J. S. Kennedy and J. M. McTeer, asking that the Discipline be so changed as that the authority for "licensing proper persons to preach, and of renewing their license annually, and of recommending suitable candidates to the Annual Conference for deacon's and elder's orders in the local connection, and for admission on trial," etc., "be transferred from the Quarterly to the District Conference," has received due attention, and the committee, with great unanimity, recommend non-concurrence.

2. The preamble and resolution signed by P. A. Petereon, M. S. Andrewe, A. M. Shipp and A. R. Winfield, "Inquiring into the expediency of changing the second restrictive rule so as to make the aggregate of ministers and laymen in connection with the Annual Conferences the basis of representation of said Conferences in the General Conference," has been examined and considered, and the committee recommend that the change be not made.

3. The resolution signed by W. H. Potter and W. F. Cook, of the North Georgia Conference, "inquiring into the expediency of changing the law of the church in relation to the representation of local preachers in the Annual and General Conferences;" and the resolution signed by W. A. McCarty and Linus Parker, relating to the same subject, have received the attentive consideration of the committee, and while they express their high appreciation of the local ministry of our church, and feel a jealous regard for all their rights and immunities, they nevertheless recommend that no change be made at present in the existing law of the church touching the subject referred to in the resolutions.

4. A memorial from the Marion District Conference, South Carolina, dated November 16, 1869, and addressed to the General Conference of 1870, signed by "William C. Power and C. D. Rowell, L. P. committee," requesting the transfer, by the General Conference, of the authority "to grant and to renew licenses to preach, and to recommend candidates for admission into the itinerancy," from the Quarterly to the District Conferences, has received respectful notice by the committee; but, having disposed of this question in a previous part of this report, recommend non-compliance with the petition of the memorialists.

Respectfully submitted.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Bishop McTyeire took the chair.

The chair decided that the minority report was not in order.

The reports were recommitted by a vote of 105 to 78.

Report No. 1 of the committee on boundaries, laid on the table May 8, was taken up and acted upon, item by item.

J. M. Boland moved to amend item 9 (which recommended that the request of the North Alabama Conference to change the name of the Alabama Conference to South Alabama be not concurred in) by striking out the word "not." He claimed that the name Alabama had been buried once and then exhumed; that the North Alabama Conference had not been fairly treated; that the Alabama Conference seized the records of the three older Conferences from which they both had sprung, and that they were not entitled to the name.

Judge Coleman replied that any change of name would seriously involve titles to property, and preclude the possibility of obtaining another charter under the present laws of Alabama, and that the name had been taken with a view to the legal complications.

Dr. Hamilton said that the North Alabama Conference had been represented in the division, that the Alabama Conference had not seized the records, but held them open to the inspection of the North Alabama Conference. He repeated what Judge Coleman had said about titles to property. The amendment was lost and the item adopted. All the other items were adopted without amendment.

An invitation was received from J. P. Morton & Co. to visit their printing-rooms.

Conference then adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by Dr. Thomas Maddin.

General Conference Notes.

At this writing (Saturday, May 23) the more important business is nearly done, and it is probable that the final adjournment will take place on Tuesday or Wednesday next. Our hearts were saddened this morning by the announcement of the death of Rev. Fountain E. Pitts, an old member of the Tennessee Conference, and well known throughout the bounds of our connection. He was here as a delegate, and until within a few days was in his place and actively engaged in the business of the General Conference. He told us, some two weeks ago, that his health was excellent, and that he never felt more capable of work in his life. He was, however, an old man—old in appearance and in reality. We suppose he must have about reached threescore and ten. He was a great preacher—especially great and powerful as a camp meeting preacher—and the souls converted under his long ministry must number many thousands. The General Conference attended his funeral, at the Walnut Street church, in a body this afternoon. The services were participated in by several of the oldest and most intimate of his brethren. It was an unusual and most impressive occasion. His last hours were peaceful and triumphant.

Dr. A. L. P. Green, another eminent member of the Tennessee Conference, left for his home in Nashville, several days ago, in feeble health, and apparently in a precarious and critical condition. His speeches on the Conference floor have been characterized by the humor and good sense for which he is noted, and his address at the Sunday school mass meeting, two weeks since, was one of the happiest and most inimitable that was ever heard. It is with deep sorrow that we record the prediction made by himself, but a few days since, that his work was about done. We hope that many years yet remain to him. His rare gifts as a preacher, his sound judgment in affairs, his fine administrative abilities and his genial spirit have made him the object of almost universal esteem and affection. In the General Conference, where so many of the venerable and talented remain, his absence creates a vacuum which none can quite fill.

Among things done our readers will note that the Sunday school superintendents are hereafter to be elected by the Quarterly Conference. This is as it should be, only the church has been too long in making the law. It is the best, because the safest and most practicable, taking the whole work into account, and we trust the present arrangement will be the law henceforth and forever. Some objection was made on the ground that the rights of the laity were limited by it. It must be remembered, however, that the Quarterly Conference is substantially a lay body, and that the preacher who nominates is the pastor of the children and in charge of the religious services of the church. There need be no friction, and the measure will, we believe, prove satisfactory in its workings. A two thirds vote was obtained in amending the General Rules so as explicitly to prohibit the manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors. This must have the sanction of the Annual Conferences, by a vote of three-fourths, before it can be placed in the Discipline. A modified plan of our missionary machinery has been adopted. There is to be a General Missionary Board, having charge of foreign missions and some part of the domestic, which may need special help, while the Annual Conferences are to have their own local boards and take charge of their own special affairs. The new plan requires that the collections for the general and the Conference boards be taken separately. Rev. Dr. McFerrin has been re-elected secretary.

On Wednesday last the General Conference was favored by the presence of Bishops Bowman and Simpson, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. They were introduced to the Conference, and occupied seats on the platform. For the past two days the report of the committee of nine on our relations with the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the matter of fraternal greetings, has been under discussion. The report was recommitted on yesterday, and came back this morning substantially the same, and was adopted by a decided majority. That report is calculated to guard our own people and others against all misapprehension. We are willing to fraternize when the way is made clear, while any thought or possibility of organic union, under all circumstances, is disclaimed. Delegates to bear our Christian salutations to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church are provided for, and a commission authorized to meet a similar commission and to settle all existing difficulties.

The committee on revisals has made several voluminous reports, but no very important changes have been adopted. A measure adopted more than a week ago was to set off our German work in Texas and Louisiana into a separate Conference. This will be consummated, we suppose, some time during the coming fall or winter. For the remaining two or three days of the session there will be much to do to reach one-half of the reports on the table and awaiting action. The more important will probably be disposed of. The rest will go into oblivion, or be revived by those who may be in attendance four years hence.

lief might be deemed proper, has received the consideration of the committee, with the recommendation that no change be made in the existing law of the church on the subject.

Respectfully submitted.
JOHN E. EDWARDS, Chair'n.

John E. Edwards, chairman of the committee on itinerancy, presented report No. 7, on the journals of the Annual Conferences, which was read, and, pending the reading, the order of the day having arrived, it was postponed to continue the action on the report.

The report was full and elaborate, and on motion of W. M. Rush was adopted.

REPORT NO. VII OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

On Conference Journals.

The committee on itinerancy have had under careful examination the journals of the several Annual Conferences, embracing the Conference sessions held since the General Conference of 1870, and regret to be compelled to report no very marked improvement in these records as compared with the report made at the last General Conference.

At the General Conference of 1866 an order was made requiring "secretaries of the several Annual Conferences to record all the acts of the Conference of every kind whatever, in the consecutive order of their occurrence, or in an appendix," including "complaints, charges, specifications, with the decisions in all cases, all resolutions, reports of committees, statistics, memoirs, appointments of preachers, and whatever else enters into and constitutes a complete historical record of an Annual Conference." It was further ordered by the General Conference of 1866 that the Bishops should "supervise the Conference journals" and "direct the secretaries to the requirements of the General Conference as to the manner of keeping their journals," and that they should "affix their signatures in all cases to the minutes of the Conferences over which they preside."

The General Conference of 1870 further provided, by resolution, that the secretaries "be requested to keep up a running heading from page to page of the journals, stating the date of the Conference session," and that the Bishops "be respectfully requested to see that the regular questions are recorded by the secretaries in their numerical notation, and answered; and that they give particular direction as to the recording of the memoirs of the deceased preachers, and the reports of committees."

After all this particularity, we are sorry to find the journals of so many of the Conferences defective in the record of resolutions, reports of committees, statistics, and in various other particulars, necessary to constitute these journals "a complete historical record of each Annual Conference."

1. We note a very general failure to record the regular questions under which, according to the Discipline, the business of the Conference should be journalized.

2. A general omission of charges and specifications in cases of trial.

3. Very defective records of reports of committees, etc.

4. A want of discrimination as to the official relation of preachers ordained, in the reports of the Bishops to the secretaries. Query: "Is it the duty of the secretaries to make this discrimination?"

5. In very many instances we discover that the minutes are not read and approved.

6. In several instances the journals are without the signatures of the presiding Bishops.

7. Reports of statistics and other reports are, in several instances, in the form of printed slips, cut from newspapers, and the printed minutes are pasted in an appendix to the journal.

8. A general failure to keep up a running heading to the pages of the journals, and very frequently an absence of marginal notes and references.

9. The business of the Conference transacted under a wrong notation of the questions.

10. In several instances "a preacher in the chair," without any record of how he came there.

11. Frequently of preachers received on trial and into full connection, and also elected to orders, without any reference to examination or the course of study prescribed by the Bishops.

With these preliminary observations, to which we invite the particular attention of our Bishops, with the design of invoking their special attention to the records of the several Annual Conferences over which they may preside, hoping thereby to prevent the recurrence of the errors and defects to which we particularly allude, we proceed to submit the following criticisms on the Conference journals.

Baltimore Conference.—The journal of this Conference is pronounced above criticism. We take pleasure in reporting it as a faultless specimen of journalism, in the record of all the proceedings of an Annual Conference, and as meeting all the requirements imposed on Conference secretaries.

Virginia Conference.—The journal reflects much credit on the secretary. It is unexceptionable except in the following particulars:

The roll-call stands on the record, at the opening of the Conference sessions, before the minute in relation to the religious exercises.

The report of the ordinations by the Bishops, at each of the Conferences under review, is without any discrimination between local and traveling preachers.

The journal is without marginal references and notes. In many instances questions not recorded, and where recorded full answers not given.

There is a want of uniformity in the minutes in relation to the notice taken of the examinations on the course of study. Many of the reports are in the form of slips cut from the printed minutes and pasted in the appendix.

In addition to the foregoing we note the omission to record the fact that an applicant for elder's orders, on the part of a local deacon, was accompanied by the "note certifying his belief in the doctrine and discipline of our church."

The running headings, from page to page, and from day to day, are not kept up.

Western Virginia Conference.—The appendixes of the journal are largely made up of printed matter, clipped from newspapers, and pasted on the pages of the record-book. In many instances, and for the most part where the appendixes are written, the same, instead of being neatly recorded in the pages of the journal, have been pasted therein, giving these appendixes more the appearance of a rough scrap-book than of a well-kept journal.

Subjects in the form of notes, foot and marginal, which ought, in some instances, to have been inserted in the body of the proceedings, and in others to have been omitted altogether, are found recorded. Of the former is a note on page 137, and another on page 146, embodying communications from Bishop Kavanaugh, concerning the ordination of certain preachers. Of the latter is a note by the secretary, on page 153, explaining why he was called away from the Conference; and also a marginal note by the secretary, on page 194, with reference to the report of a committee in his own case, which is out of place and in bad taste. In the case of J. C. Tinsley, noticed on page 147, and in appendix, page 166, in which a trial was had, neither charges nor specifications are distinctly stated.

With the above exceptions the minutes are recorded with fullness and accuracy.

Holston Conference.—Journal for the most part correct. Twice during the Conference session of 1870 we find a member of the Conference in the chair without any note of his appointment by the Bishop or otherwise. (See pages 316, 319.) Each session during the quadrennial term closed without reading the minutes of the last meeting, as also of the evening session, 1873, page 108.

The record of 1873 is defaced by blurs and erasures. Aside from these minor defects the record is almost a perfect model of journalism.

North Carolina Conference.—For some reason the journal of this Conference has not been submitted to the committee for inspection. We take it for granted, however, that from miscarriage, or from oversight of the secretary, which he can explain, it has not come to hand.

South Carolina Conference.—This journal also has much in its praise. We note, however, the following inaccuracies. At the session of 1872 the character of several elders passed under question 18, instead of question 20. Under question 1 two persons were admitted on trial without any reference to recommendation or examination. Page 197, question 6 is quoted as reading: "Who are admitted from other Conferences?" which is neither the language nor the sense of question 6. Page 222, under question 17, the character of one elder is arrested, and the character of several others passed—business that should have come under question 20. Page 228, the character of several elders pass under question 18. On page 222 the character of Samuel Lander is passed, and he left effective. Page 225, under question 20, the character of Samuel Lauder is again passed (if this is the same person,) and he is made effective. Query: Can a Conference make a man effective? Page 232 we read: "The relation of S. A. Weber was changed and was made effective." Did not the reconsideration of the vote by which he was made supernumerary or superannuated leave him effective?

North Georgia Conference.—Many excellencies in this journal, but still there are defects worthy of notice.

Session of 1870. Top of pages without date; pages 149, 155, examinations of elders without question being recorded; page 151, question 12 should be 20; page 156, John W. McGehee located without the question 16, and not stated whether elder or deacon; page 164, elders ordained without question 13; page 11, deacons ordained with same omission; page 166, minutes not read and approved; reports kept in printed slips, pasted in appendix.

Session of 1871. Top of pages without heading; page 180, questions 17 and 18 not recorded; page 186, R. J. Howell passed examination of character without question, and not stated whether an elder or deacon; same in regard to E. P. Burch; page 206, J. B. Payne superannuated without stating his previous relation, and without question 18.

Session of 1872. Page 224, elders examined without question 20, also examinations without stating official relation to the Conference; no record of last day's proceedings being read and approved.

Session of 1873. Page 244, preachers admitted without question 1 being asked; all done under question 2.

South Georgia Conference.—The journal of this Conference is well and neatly kept. At the session of 1870, page 83, the examination of character is taken up without the record of the question. This omission frequently occurs. Page 85, Daniel Popo was "admitted," but the record does not say how or to what; page 91, minutes not read and approved; page 104, the minutes do not show who are the superannuated; page 129, report of committee on missions cut out of a printed paper and pasted on the journal; page 153, W. H. Rogers admitted on trial without the question. With these minor exceptions the journal is worthy of high commendation. It is proper to add that there is no roll of members recorded at any session of the quadrennial term. We notice also the absence of a running heading.

Florida Conference.—The journal of this Conference, containing the records for 1871-72, was lost by accident. The journal for 1873-74 is, in the main, correct and neatly kept. There is the absence of a running heading. Both sessions omit the statement that the Bishop took the chair, or occupied the chair. On page 3, in proceedings of the session for 1873, there is the mention of certain resolutions being made the order of the day for a subsequent day, without any allusion to the mover, or to the fact that the resolutions had been offered. On page 4, and elsewhere, reports of committees presented and adopted without being signed by the chairman or any one else. At the session of January, 1874, page 16, the roll of members called, and twenty-one answered, so says the record, but no names are given. So of the lay delegates. At the session of 1873 no mention of the minutes being read and approved. At the session of 1874 the record says: "Minutes of previous day read and confirmed." The journal of 1873 not signed by the presiding Bishop.

Alabama Conference.—Journal in the main is well kept, though frequently marred by unsightly erasures and interlineations. A prefatory note to the session of 1870 calls it the first session of the present Alabama Conference, and yet calls it the thirty-eighth session, because that would have been the number had the old Alabama Conference continued to exist. Page 11, "T. O. Summers in the chair," but the record does not show whether by appointment or election. Question 3 not recorded, yet it appears that "R. F. Nolan and A. G. Gillespie were discontinued at their own request." Page 24, minutes not read. Question 20 omitted, but answer given in the statistical report in appendix.

To the minutes of the second session of 1871 there are no marginal notations. Questions 3, 11 and 19 do not appear to have been asked, but on page 87 it is stated that the committee on missions made their report, which is duly recorded.

At the third or fortieth session, page 135, "Rev. J. Hamilton in the chair," but does not state whether by appointment or election. Minutes of the last day's session not read and approved.

At the fourth or forty-first session, page 207, no mention of presiding officer. Page 210, question 29 not recorded. Page 213, question 31 asked, and not answered till after adjournment.

North Alabama Conference.—Session of 1870. No roll of clerical or lay members. Examinations of character without suspending rule requiring closed doors. Page 18 we read, "Examination of character of elders resumed," without any record of the subject being called up before. Page 20, minutes of last session not read and approved.

Session of 1871. No roll of members. Page 42, election to orders before passage of character. Third day, minutes not read and approved. Page 45, examination of character without suspending the rules. Page 47, committee in the case of P. G. Jamison reported trial necessary, without any record of charge and specifications. Page 50, committee in the same case report: "We, the committee, etc., find him guilty, etc., and therefore expel him from the church." Page 51, report adopted without reference to its being recorded. Minutes of last day's session not read and approved.

Session of 1872. Substitute offered; lost, but not recorded. Page 77, minutes not approved. Same omission repeated. Statistical report badly recorded, blotted and marred by erasures.

Session of 1873. No roll of members. No suspension of the rule in the examination of character. Page 89, we note imperfect record as follows: "Rev. Mark S. Andrews, D. D., of the Alabama Confsrence"——. Page 96, election of delegates to the General Conference hard to understand. Page 98, we have a record, very much out of place, of missionary anniversary; also of meetings on Sabbath, with comments on sermons, speeches, etc., such as "Bishop Marvin preached a most powerful and edifying and able sermon." Pages 104, 109, 111, reports adopted, but no note of record. Questions not all asked at either of the sessions. In many respects the journal, as a whole, is deserving of a highly creditable measure of commendation.

Louisiana Conference.—The heading of the minutes of the twenty-fifth session gives the correct date, January 4, 1871. The record of the opening of the Conference states: "Confersnce assembled, January 4, 1870. (See page 146.)

The minutes of the second day of the same session do not show who presided at the opening of the Conference, but after the record of considerable business it is stated: "Bishop Marvin took the chair." (See pages 148 and 149.) Bishop Doggett presided the first day. A similar omission occurs on page 203, second day of twenty-sixth session.

Supernumerary and superannuated relations, granted by the Conference, are recorded under question 20. (Page 148.)

On page 166, at "question tenth, resumed," the word deacons should be substituted for elders.

Questions 19 and 20 should be 27 and 28, on page 209. On page 218 we find the following: "Question 20—What has been collected on the foregoing accounts? (widows, orphans, superannuates and Bishops,) and how has it been applied?" This question embodies the substance of question 28, with some enlargements and additions.

Question 5 is omitted throughout the minutes of the whole quadrennial term. Questions 16, 29 and 30 are omitted in the minutes of the sessions held in 1871 and 1872. Questions 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26 are omitted at the sessions of 1872 and 1873. Questions 9, 11, 12, 13, 15, 17 and 18 are omitted at session of 1871. Beginning on page 178, and extending to page 179, we find this entry, viz.: "Questions 21, 22 23 24 25 and 26 were taken up, when the statistics were read by the secretary. These questions, however, are nowhere stated in the minutes of this session.

On page 169 the adoption of a report on the "religious interests of the colored people" is noted, but no part of the report recorded. A similar omission occurs on page 203—"response to proffer of hospitality by Vicksburg." Throughout the minutes only the resolutions accompanying reports are entered upon the journal, except the reports of committees on memoirs, which are recorded in full.

In the minutes of the twenty-fifth session no distinction is made in the record of ordinations between traveling and local preachers. (See page 172.)

The minutes of several days' proceedings do not show that the minutes of the preceding meetings were read and approved. (See minutes of evening session, fifth day Monday, January 4, 1871, page 176; also fifth day, Monday, January 8, 1872, page 211, and afternoon of same day, page 220; also afternoon of Monday, January 13, 1873, page 252.)

The statistics spread on the journal in tubular form precede all other records of the sessions of the Conference held January, 1872, 1873 and 1874; and the questions to which the statistical tables answer are stated at only one place in the journal—page 303, in the proceedings of the fifth day of the session held January, 1874—and neither here nor at any other place in the minutes of the Conference is any reference made to the pages of the journal on which the answers of these questions may be found.

On page 303—the only place where these questions are recorded—some aggregates are stated under these questions, and the Sunday school aggregates thus stated do not correspond to the aggregates found in the statistical tables.

The statistical tables of the session held January, 1871, covering twelve pages, are inserted between parts of the minutes of the second day's proceedings of this session, though that day's minutes show the transaction of no business pertaining to these statistics.

Twenty pages intervene between parts of the minutes of the second day of session held January, 1873; and two pages of the minutes of this day are found on the leaf of this journal next after the page containing the signatures of the president and the secretary of the Conference, at the close of the records of the session; the pages of this leaf, however, are marked in consecutive order with the page on which the minutes of the second day begin, so that pages 241 and 242 stood between pages 262 and 263 of the journal, and page 243 faces 240.

On page 240 we find the following: "On motion of S. S. Scott Conference reconsidered the vote by which J. Gorton Miller was located." No further record of the case.

On pages 242 and 243, in stating the recognition of the orders of two ministers coming from another denomination, no mention is made of the recommendation of either by a Quarterly Conference.

Notwithstanding the exceptions taken to this journal, there is much in the style and form of its minutes worthy of commendation. Each page has a heading, showing the day of the session, of the week and of the month, as well as the year in which the proceedings there recorded were had. Full and neat statistical tables are found in the journal, answering to each year of the quadrennial term.

There is a marked improvement in the style of the minutes of the last two sessions of the Conference. Marginal notes indicate the subjects found on each page of the minutes of the sessions. The minutes of the last session show a decided improvement over the minutes of any previous [illegible] of the whole term.

Mississippi Conference.—The following omissions, etc., attract attention: December 16, 1870, page [illegible] under the first question, Who admitted on trial? the names of those admitted are recorded, but it is not stated that they were severally recommended or that any vote of Conference was taken upon their admission. A similar record for 1871, December 13, page 2. Same also December 12, 1872, page 28. Same December 12, 1873, page 67. Question 2, on page 28, December 12, 1872, it is stated that James J. Smylie was passed and elected to deacon's orders. It is not recorded that he was examined on the course of study of second year. Under the fourth question it is not stated that those admitted into full connection were examined either upon the course of study or by the Bishop before the Conference. (See page 20, December 12, 1872; also page 31, December 13, 1871, page 318, December 13, 1870.) Under eighth question, H. P. Brown admitted and elected to deacon's orders, page 29, December 12, 1872.

Under question 20, local preachers elected to deacon's orders; not stated that their recommendations were presented. Similar omission under question 14, in the election of local preachers to elder's orders. Page 30, December 13, 1872, it is stated that "Oliver H. P. Davis, an elder from the Congregational Methodist Church, was recognized as a member of the Conference, in the same standing."

Page 18, December 19, 1871, "J. Heard in the chair," but not stated how he came there by request of the president. No reports recorded except statistics. Nothing but mere abstracts appear. Minutes of last two sessions not read and approved. With these exceptions the journal is correct.

North Mississippi Conference.—The journal is admirably well kept, and deserves high commendation. We note, however, a few defects. At the session of 1870, in answer to question 7, we read: "Thomas P. Ramsey having stood an approved examination on the course of study, and Pinkney A. Johnson not having passed the examination, their characters passed." At the session of 1871 we note an omission (page 70) to record the reading and approval of the previous session. Like omissions on pages 73 and 75; on page 72 occurs minute of the trial and expulsion of R. A. Roach from the church, but no record of charges and specifications; on page 100, session of 1873, an omission to note the reading of the minutes.

Memphis Conference.—Journal remarkably well kept in all particulars, and yet a few defects attract attention. There are no dates at the top of the page. On page 207 the asterisks do not satisfactorily denote the absent members; on page 317 the word Mississippi is left out of the name of the North Mississippi Conference. Same page the journal says "question 8 was resumed," when this is the first time that question is called and recorded at that session of the Conference; on page 371 the journal shows that a member was appointed by the Bishop and also elected by the Conference took the chair and presided over the Conference.

Tennessee Conference.—The journal of 1870 and 1871 was destroyed by the fire that consumed the Publishing House at Nashville. The record of the sessions for 1872 and 1873 meets all the requirements of correct, thorough and complete journalism.

Kentucky Conference.—The journal, in the main, is accurately and neatly kept, and is worthy of almost unqualified praise. The following errors and omission require notice. The journal is without a running heading. At the session held in Paris, September 9, 18—, the Bishop's signature is placed before the record of the appointments of the preachers.

Louisville Conference.—The record of the session of 1870 is full and correctly journalized. We note only two omissions of important Conference proceedings. On page 95 it is stated that "nominations of officers of Sunday school society were presented, as follows," but there is no record of the names nor the action of the Conference. Nor is there any record of the appointment of the "joint board of finance." There are some verbal inaccuracies, as, for instance, "admitted" instead of "elected" in question 12, page 65; and a number of minute questions are answered without recording the question, as to the statistical report and the list of appointments. Bating inaccuracies like these, the journal for the session of 1870 is worthy of commendation.

The journal for the sessions of 1872, 1873 are more defective. The report of the Board of Missions for 1871 is not recorded, and there is confusion in the record concerning the report of the committee on memoirs, pages 144 and 160. Frequent omission to state who was in the chair, pages 188, 205, 251 and 253.

Resolutions introduced and motions made, but no record of the action of the Conference in relation thereto, pages 193, 255, 258, 260, 270, 271, 272, etc. No running heading kept up from page to page. There is need of more care in recording the regular questions in the order of business. The distinction between 12 and 13 is not properly observed. With the exception of such defects as these the journal of the Louisville Conference is kept with great neatness and accuracy. The records are made, in the main, without erasures, interlineations or important omissions. The penmanship is excellent, and the general appearance of the journal in every way commendable.

St. Louis Conference.—With very many excellencies deserving praise in the journal of this Conference, we have occasion to call attention to the following omissions and errors: Page 46, October 19, 1872, J. C. Duncan and C. E. Duncan (?) are called and passed and admitted; not stated that they were examined by the Bishop before the Conference, or by the committee on the course of study presented by the Bishop; minutes not read and approved, October 19 and 20, 1872; no statistics of 1873 recorded; journal of 1873 not signed by the presiding Bishop. The journal is wanting in marginal references.

West St. Louis Conference.—The journal of this Conference has much to commend and but little to criticise. There are, nevertheless, inaccuracies that cannot be permitted to pass without notice. Page 61, P. W. Dunean is located on motion of a brother, but the cause of location not stated; page 73, committee on finance presented report, which was adopted, but not recorded. At the opening of the session in 1870 it is stated that Bishop D. S. Doggett was present and presided, but no mention is made of any one being in the chair from that day onward to the close of the session. The journal is signed by the presiding Bishop.

Missouri Conference.—The journal of this Conference is neatly kept, and manifestly by a good secretary; and yet the committee feel called on to report some errors and omissions.

Session of 1870. Page 186, under question 2, "Who remain on trial?" characters were passed without any statement of examination. Page 187, question 6 ought to be 7, "Who are deacons of one year?" Seven preachers' characters are passed without any statement that they had been previously examined. Page 188, question 8, "Who are elected deacons?" no record of their being examined. Page 192 constitution of a missionary society read, with reference to appendix, but not recorded. The questions in relation to statistics not asked. Statistics not recorded; or, if so, in no record before the committee.

Session of 1871. Question 2, pages 222 and 223, "Who remain on trial?" no statement of examinations; and this omission often occurs in the records of this Conference. No statistics of the number of baptisms, Sunday schools, local preachers or of members in any record submitted to your committee.

Session of 1872. Statistics omitted as before.

Session of 1873. The only reports recorded for this session are on education, Conference collection and Bishops' fund.

There is the omission, in all the sessions, of the questions in relation to statistics. It is verbally stated to the committee that there is a separate statistical record kept by the Missouri Conference.

Western Conference.—The pages of the journal, for the sessions of 1870, 1871 and 1872, are omitted; 1870, no marginal index; 1871, index imperfect.

Session of 1871. Question 2, a name is mentioned as having passed to the second year, but it is not stated that he had passed his examination. Same omissions under questions 7 and 12.

Session of 1872. Second day, minutes of previous day not read and approved. Under question 1 several preachers received on trial without any statement of recommendation by Quarterly Conferences or examination by committee. Third day, minutes not read and approved.

Session of 1873. No answers found to questions 9 and 13; though, in answer to 12, it is stated that one preacher had been elected to elder's orders; and, in answer to question 8, that several had been elected to deacon's orders.

With the above exceptions the journal has the qualities of a correct record of Conference proceedings.

Indian Mission Conference.—Session of 1870. Page 259, the given names of persons appointed on committee not stated. Page 260, no statement of who occupied the chair at the opening of the morning session. Page 271, like omission. Page 278, comments on what had been done outside the Conference recorded.

Session of 1871. Third day, page 291, minutes not read and approved. Page 294, record of what occurred on Sunday after the Conference adjourned. Page 300, question 20 improperly recorded. Pages 314 and 315, minutes read: "Conference adjourned on Saturday;" after which the following record appears: "Sunday morning, October 6, the following brethren were ordained deacons and elders" (giving the names,) "and then the appointments were read out, and the Conference adjourned."

Arkansas Conference.—We find a number of defects and errors in the journal. In the record for 1870 no marginal notes and no statistical report. Several of the questions do not appear to have been asked. The minutes of the fourth, fifth and sixth days not read and approved. So of one day's proceedings at the session of 1872. The record of 1873 is found unexceptionable, and deserving of high commendation.

White River Conference.—The journal is praiseworthy in many respects, but is, nevertheless, marked by inaccuracies.

At the session in 1870 W. R. Young was elected to elder's orders under question 4, without explanation. A few notable inaccuracies in orthography, and a little bad grammar attract notice. Questions 12 and 13 are omitted at the session of 1872. On page 51 the record says, "The following persons were added" to a certain committee, but the names are not given. Page 53, question 4 is unnumbered 3. Question asked, but no answer recorded. No marginal notes in the record of 1871. In recording the appointments for 1872 the preacher's name is put first, and then the circuit or station.

The record for the Conference session of 1873 appears faultless. Altogether it is a respectable specimen of journalism.

Little Rock Conference.—Journal defective in several particulars. Session of 1870. Page 137, minutes of last day's proceedings not read and approved, and so of the last day for four consecutive sessions.

Session of 1871. Names of lay delegates not entered at the opening of the session. Page 147, question 2 not recorded; so of question 7. Page 157, preachers are located and superannuated without any question or motion, so far as the record shows. Page 261, question 1 "laid over;" "C. G. Gadden and Z. T. McCann laid over," and afterward admitted under question 2.

Session of 1872. Page 305: "Who are admitted on trial?" Answer. "James L. Nabors not admitted."

The secretary enters the names of those ordained on Sunday, as though the Conference were in session on that day.

With these and a few other like imperfections the journal contains a correct record of the Conference business.

Trinity Conference.—This journal, while it shows great freedom from blots and great neatness in execution, is, nevertheless, so wanting in accuracy, in perspicuity, in fullness and detail of Conference business as to render it exceedingly defective in all the purposes of a Conference journal. The effort to abridge often leaves the facts to be reached by nothing short of guessing. Important documents are usually referred to appendixes, which are not to be found. Disciplinary questions are often omitted altogether, and questions are frequently asked but not answered (page 127.)

A session begins in the afternoon and ends in the forenoon of the same day (pages 122 and 123.)

Candidates are reported and advanced; but by what authority, whether Quarterly Conferences, presiding elders and committees had done their duties in the premises, does not appear (page 133.)

The name of a Bishop is given, but what part he took in the Conference, or whether he was present, is not stated (page 134.)

The journal was not read and approved (pages 143 and 156.)

The secretary only designated important reports as Nos. "3," "8," "6" and "7," and not even the page given to the wanting appendix where Nos. "3," "8," "6" or "7" are said to be found.

Finally, the journal is so wanting in proper captions that, should the record Trinity be lost from the back of the book, the Conference would be in danger of losing not only much or all of its records, but its very name also.

East Texas Conference.—There is no roll of members for the session of 1870, and no marginal notes or references. Verbal inaccuracies and false orthography occur. Page 21, Samuel Morris is said to have transferred from Arkansas Conference; whereas on page 1 he is reported to have transferred from Little Rock Conference. Session of 1871. Page 12, question 27 not in the exact language of the Discipline, and question 28 omitted as a distinct question. Session of 1872. Page 9 (secretary's number,) there is a reference to a book of reports, but no such book accompanies the journal. Similar references on page 12. No records of reports of committees at this session, except now and then of a special committee. The minutes appear to be signed for the presiding Bishop by the secretary, but no note made of it. Session of 1873. Journal not paged. Reference to a report, but no record of it to be found.

In other respects the journal is correct.

Texas Conference.—At the thirty-first session, held at Chappell Hill, December 14, 1870, the journal contains no record of the names of deacons ordained by the presiding Bishop, though elections are noted.

Questions 3, 6, 9 and 11, and from 12 to 20, as also from 20 to 30, not asked, as appears from the journal, and much business transacted, covered by regular questions, which are not recorded, though answered.

Thirty-second session, 1871. Questions 3, 6, 9, 11, 13, from 14 to 20, and from 20 to 31, not recorded, though the general run of business, covered by these omitted questions, was transacted. Several locations granted, not recorded under the proper question. Appointment of preachers under question 30, instead of 31.

Thirty-third session, 1872. But nine questions of all the thirty-one are recorded, though the business under the omitted questions was transacted. The minutes of the third day's proceedings not read and approved.

Thirty-fourth session, 1873. Many questions not recorded. Proceedings of the fifth and sixth days not read and approved. No report of ordinations by the presiding Bishop.

With the exceptions noted the journal of this Conference is scarcely surpassed by any in the clearness, fullness and completeness of its records. Great care has evidently been bestowed upon it, and it would be unjust not to mention its very many excellencies. The plan of keeping the statistics is especially worthy of notice and of high commendation.

Northwest Texas Conference.—Journal exceedingly defective. We give but a specimen of its errors, omissions, etc.:

Session of 1870. Page 102: "The roll was called and several members, not present yesterday, responded to their names and took their seats." Names not recorded. Page 103, and elsewhere, undergraduates advanced without mention of previous examination on studies. Same page, local preachers elected to elder's orders without any record of recommendation or note of their belief in our doctrines and discipline. Questions omitted, but answers given substantially (page 204.) This error frequently occurs. November 19, statistical report recorded in advance of its presentation to Conference—no report of action on it. Page 111, a motion to locate S. S. Yarborough put and lost, but no cause assigned for locating him. Page 117, minutes not read and approved. Page 123, report on education not signed by chairman.

Session of 1871. Page 144, same omission as at former sessions in relation to the election of local deacons and elders to orders—no recommendation. Page 145, same omissions in relation to preachers received on trial. Page 145, and elsewhere, no space left in the journal from day to day. Page 146, "Conference adjourned to meet at half-past three P. M." No

Seashore Camp Ground.

The next camp meeting on the Seashore camp ground, two miles west of Biloxi, Mississippi, will commence on Friday, the twenty-fourth of July.

The trustees call attention to the following rules:

All persons having selected lots for the purpose of building tents are required to report to the trustees, one month prior to the date of the commencement of the camp meeting, whether they intend to occupy the lot; failing so to give notice, the lot will be forfeited and appropriated to other parties.

All tents erected are required to be of value not less than $40, and shall be completed at least one week before the commencement of the camp meeting.

The Rev. William M. Jordan is appointed surveyor of the camp ground, and allowed $1.50 each for fixing the lines of the lots, to be paid by the lot-holder; and to supervise the location of each tent, with reference to the preservation of the shade-trees.

Pleasantly situated lots are furnished free to persons desiring to erect permanent tents thereon.

A limited number of small tents unfurnished, and cots, with sheet and pillow, will be for rent at reasonable prices; and public boarding and lodging, to a limited extent, will be provided at a reasonable charge.

All persons attending the camp meeting are advised to arrange for their comfort by the erection of their own private tent, or making other suitable arrangements beforehand, and to this end are requested to correspond with the trustees: Dr J. J. Lyons, J. H. Keller, B. O L. Rayne, New Orleans, Louisiana; William Otis, John Ellsworth, Mobile, Alabama; H. C. Vaughn, Moss Point, Mississippi; G. W. W. Goodwyn, treasurer, Philip Hallaran, secretary, W. H. Foster, president, New Orleans, Louisiana.

THE GREAT JACKSON ROUTE.—The traveling public are much indebted to the indomitable energy and skill of the general manager, Colonel Frost, for so fully restoring this route to its original condition of security and good order. The trains leave daily, and travelers may be sure that the improvements of the facilities and provision for the comfort of passengers has kept pace with the most advanced enterprise of the country. Major S. E. Carey, general ticket agent, will be found to be a most courteous and obliging officer, a cultivated gentleman, and fully acquainted with the duties of his position.

COTTON GINS.—It is time for planters to begin to forecast plans and preparations for harvesting the crop now growing, and it is not too soon for those who wish to provide themselves with cotton gins to begin to correspond with agents and machinists for the purpose of obtaining information on the subject. In this view of the matter we direct the attention of cotton planters to the advertisement of the Eagle cotton gin elsewhere.

SUMMER TRAVEL AND ROUTES.—As the time approaches for the usual summer begira, the question of routes becomes one of interest to travelers, and we take pleasure in directing the attention of our readers who, for purposes of business or pleasure, expect to visit the Eastern cities, to the great Louisville route, by way of the Pan-Handle and Pennsylvania Central railways, which, in meet the advanced requirements of travelers, have made their arrangements for comfort so complete that the jaunt is now one of great pleasure. The facilities presented cannot be surpassed. The roadway and the rolling stock are the most perfect in America, and, as a consequence, the comfort of the traveler is assured and safety guaranteed—the route being double tracked and stone-ballasted. The scenery along this route is grand—elegant agricultural panoramas, beautiful rivers and cascades, picturesque valleys, splendid mountains, large cities, flourishing villages, all pass before the view in rapid succession. It would be difficult to select a highway of travel with all the essentials that this route presents; in fact, it is a magnificent system of railroads from New Orleans to New York.

PHŒNIX.—In virgin-like freshness ariseth from its ashes the seed store, formerly located at No. 98 Gravier street, to the building, No. 91, to which the proprietor has temporarily removed. The community cannot afford to have a man so useful to the country as Mr. E. F. Virgin put down, even by fire; but Mr. Virgin has the enterprise in himself and the confidence of his fellow-citizens to help him, and we shall still know where to get good seeds. See his advertisement, and go to 91 Gravier street until further notice.

THE Crescent confectionery and restaurant, No. 500 Magazine street; under the management of Victor Bera, is prepared to supply weddings and soirees at short notice, and keeps all kinds of confections, ice creams, etc. See advertisement in another column.

IMPROVED

EAGLE COTTON GINS.

The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. He has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinders of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only a ten-inch cylinder, and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in larger-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

ROXBURY, MASS.

DEAR MADAM: The reputation of the Medical Discovery in curing all kinds of Humors is so well established, by the unanimous voice of all who have ever used it, that I need not say anything on the subject, as the most skillful physicians and the most careful druggists in the country are unanimous in its praise.

In presenting the Medical Discovery to your notice, I do it with a full knowledge of its curative power in relieving all, and curing most of those diseases to which you are unfortunately so liable. That most excruciating disease to an affectionate mother,

Nursing Sore Mouth,

is cured as if by a miracle. Your own temper is restored to its natural sweetness, and your babe from short and fretful naps to calm and sweet slumbers; and the Medical Discovery becomes a fountain of blessing to your husband and household. In the more advanced stages of

Canker

it extends to the stomach, causing

Dyspepsia,

which is nothing but canker in the stomach; then to the intestines and

Kidneys,

creating a sinking, gone feeling, and an indifference even to the cares of your family. Your stomach is

Raw and Inflamed,

your food distresses you, and you can only take certain kinds, and even of that your system does not get half the nourishment it contains, as the acrimonious fluid of the canker eats it up; then your complexion loses its bloom and becomes sallow or greenish, and your best day is gone. For want of nourishment your system becomes loose and flabby, and the fibers of your body become relaxed. Then follow a train of diseases which the Medical Discovery is peculiarly adapted to

Cure:

Palpitation of the heart, pain in the side, weakness of the spine and small of the back, pain in the hip-joint when you retire, irregularity of the bowels, and also that most excruciating of diseases,

The Piles.

How many thousands of poor women are suffering from this disease and pining away a miserable life, and their next-door neighbor does not know the cause. I wish to impress on your mind that good old proverb: "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." In you have both the preventive and the cure, with this great and good quality: that it will never, under any circumstances, do you any injury.

THE MEDICAL DISCOVERY

No change of diet is ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one tablespoonful per day; children over ten years, dessertspoonful; children from five to eight years, teaspoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day. Yours truly,

DONALD KENNEDY.

SPRING WORSHIP.

As some fond mother loves to run
And in her darling's cradle prep,
And feast upon him in his sleep,
And finds her dotlng never done;

To watch his blossomhood expand,
Detect fresh beauties every day,
Nor lets an hour slip away
Without some favor from her hand—

So I, when Candlemas is o'er,
And leaden days of gloomy cheer,
Delight to watch the budding year,
To see it flourish more and more.

I think it then a natural sin—
When shooting germs begin to prick,
And rubies gem the budding quick—
A kind of crime to stay within.

Then daily I frequent the lane,
And where the crystal runlets rise,
And thank God for his balmy skies,
And feast upon the fair champaign;

Watch lovingly the growth of green,
From lattice work to copious shroud,
And every flight of feathery cloud,
And every aspect of the scene:

The fallows, mellowing richly dark;
The woodlands, purpling every hill;
The flylag hows, the hickering rill;
The heavens, inviting up the lark.

The woodland violet, white or blue,
The native topaz of the bank,
Assailed from heavens on either flank
By wild wood music, fluting through;

The snow drop with its airy bell,
The crocus with its golden cup,
The dainty cowslip starting up,
The daisy meek in many a dell.

The spiritual lilies of the vale,
The spotted foxglove, quaint of hue,
The classic hyacinth steeped in dew,
The pansy, lady of the dale.

For thy sworn lover, Spring, am I;
I watch thee with assiduous love,
Crowned from eternal fonnts above,
My heart is something like thy sky.

And in thine eyes I get a gleam—
A gleam of everlasting youth;
Ah, me, the imperishable truth,
The purity and deathless dream!

Report of the Committee on Church Trials.

Your committee on church trials respectfully report that we have had under consideration chapters 6, 7 and 8 of the Discipline, and the amendments proposed thereto, referred to us by the General Conference, and, after duly considering the same, your committee recommend the adoption of the following chapter in the place of chapters 6 and 7 in the Discipline:

CHAPTER VI.—ADMINISTRATION OF DISCIPLINE.

Sec. 1.—Of the Trial of a Bishop.

Art. 1. When a Bishop is under report of being guilty of immorality, one of the other Bishops, or the presiding elder of the district in which the offense is supposed to have been committed, shall appoint three traveling elders to investigate the matter and report the result. If a majority of them believe that there should be a trial, they shall draw up the charges and specifications in due form, and indorse thereon the name of the prosecutor, if there be one, and the names of the witnesses, as far as known. If no prosecutor appear, one of the investigating committee shall become prosecutor.

Art. 2. If a trial be adjudged necessary, the Bishop to whom the report is made shall summon together, at the most suitable place for the trial, of which he shall be the judge, fifteen traveling elders, not less than nine of whom shall constitute a committee for the trial of the case, over which one of the Bishops shall preside, assisted by as many others as may be in attendance.

Art. 3. If a majority of the committee believe from the evidence that the accused is guilty as charged, the committee shall depose him from his office and from the ministry, and shall suspend or expel him from the church.

Art. 4. If a Bishop offend by imprudent conduct, or by indulging in sinful tempers or words not expressly forbidden in the word of God, or by disseminating, publicly or privately, doctrines which are contrary to our Articles of Religion, or by creating dissensions in our church by any means, let one or more of the Bishops, or, in the absence of a Bishop, one or more traveling elders, communicate with him on the subject and remonstrate against his conduct. If he persist in his course, let him be proceeded against according to articles 1 and 2.

Art. 5. If a Bishop be convicted under article 4 he may be suspended or deposed from his office and from the ministry, and suspended or expelled from the church, according to the judgment of the committee.

Art. 6. Charges of maladministration against a Bishop shall be heard and passed upon by the General Conference, through its committee on episcopacy, whose judgment shall be final.

Art. 7. The credentials of a deposed Bishop shall be demanded by the presiding Bishop, who shall return them with the record to the secretary of the General Conference.

Art. 8. If a Bishop willfully cease from traveling without the consent of the General Conference, he shall not thereafter exercise the episcopal office in our church, and shall be proceeded against as in case of imprudent conduct.

Sec. 2.—Of the Trial of Preachers.

Art. 9. The law which governs the proceedings in the trial of a Bishop shall also be applicable in proceedings against any other preacher, except an unordained local preacher, but the presiding elder of the district within which the offense is supposed to have been committed, in whole or in part, shall perform the duties assigned to the Bishop, and the trial shall take place in that district; but, if committed without our bounds, the proceedings shall take place within the district where the accused resides or last resided.

The committee of investigation may consist of one or more persons, and the committee of trial of not less than seven persons, if that number can be obtained; otherwise a committee of three may try the case, who may be taken from any part of our Conference territory.

Art. 10. Ordained traveling preachers, including superannuates, shall be tried by ordained traveling preachers, and any other preacher may be tried by local preachers, or by laymen, if local preachers cannot be had, of which the presiding officer shall be the judge.

Art. 11. If a presiding elder be the accused party, or if he be incompetent to preside on account of his relation to either the prosecutor or the accused, or his connection with the matter to be investigated, a Bishop may appoint a traveling elder to take charge of the proceedings.

Art. 12. If a traveling preacher be reported to his Annual Conference as so unacceptable, inefficient, secular or involved in debt that he cannot be useful as a member of the Conference, the Conference shall investigate the case, and if it appear that the report is well founded, and that he will not voluntarily retire, the Conference shall locate him.—Charges and specifications shall not be required, and the judgment of the Conference shall be final.

He shall be at liberty to defend himself before the Conference in person or by his representative; and, if he be located in his absence, without having been previously notified of an intention thus to proceed against him, he may apply to the Conference, at its next session, to be heard in his defense, and the matter shall be reconsidered for that purpose.

Art. 13. A member of an Annual Conference in the traveling connection, who fails without reasonable excuse to attend to the work assigned him, shall be proceeded against as for imprudent conduct, and may be suspended until the ensuing Annual Conference. The Conference may locate him according to article 12.

Art. 14. If a local elder or deacon be reported to the Quarterly Conference as being so unacceptable or inefficient as to be no longer useful as a preacher, and the Quarterly Conference refuse to pass his character on that ground, the Quarterly Conference next succeeding shall investigate the case, and if it appear that the complaint is well founded, and he do not give the Conference satisfaction that he will amend or voluntarily retire, the Conference may depose him from the ministry. He shall have notice of the proceeding, and shall have the right to defend himself before the Conference in person or by his representative; and, if deposed, he shall have the right to appeal to the Annual Conference.

Art. 15. Charges of maladministration against a traveling preacher shall be tried by the Annual Conference.

Art. 16. Charges preferred against a Bishop, traveling or local preacher, under articles 1, 4, 9 or 13, shall have the effect to arrest his character, and he shall not thereafter exercise the functions of his office until he shall have been tried and acquitted.

Sec. 3.—Of the Trial of Members.

Art. 17. If a member of the church, whose trial has not heretofore been provided for, be under report of being guilty of immorality, the preacher in charge shall require the class-leader, or some other member of the church, to investigate the report, and, if it seems well founded, such members shall prepare charges and specifications against the accused person and report them to the preacher in charge. The proceedings shall be similar to those in the case of an accused Bishop. The pastor shall have charge of the proceedings, unless he be incompetent for the reasons set forth in article 11, in which case the presiding elder shall appoint a traveling preacher to attend to that special business. If convicted, he shall be suspended or expelled. The committee shall consist of not less than five persons, who may be taken from any part of the charge or from adjoining charges.

Art. 18. If a member offend in any of the ways specified in article 4, the pastor or leader, or both, shall reprove him and exhort him to a different course. If he persist, he shall be proceeded against according to article 17; and, if convicted, he may be suspended or expelled, or, if penitent, he may be borne with.

Art. 19. If a member voluntarily confess to the church or a committee that he has violated some law of the church, if penitent, he may be borne with without further proceeding, or he may be suspended or expelled according to the Discipline.

Art. 20. In case of any dispute between two or more members of our church concerning the payment of debt or otherwise, which cannot be settled by the parties concerned, the preacher in charge shall recommend to the contending parties a submission of the matter to arbitration. Each party shall choose an arbiter, and the two arbiters shall choose the third one, all of whom shall be members of our church.

Art. 21. If one of the parties be dissatisfied with the decision of the arbiters, he may apply to the ensuing Quarterly Conference for a second arbitration. If there be sufficient reason for it, the Quarterly Conference shall grant it. In which case each party shall choose two arbiters, and the four arbiters shall choose the fifth one—all shall be members of our church—and the judgment of the majority shall be final. Either party refusing to abide by such judgment shall be proceeded against according to articles 18 and 17.

Art. 22. If any member of our church refuse, in case of debt or other dispute, to submit the matter to arbitration, when recommended by the preacher in charge, or shall enter into a law-suit with another member before these measures are taken, he shall be proceeded against according to articles 18 and 17, unless the case be of such a nature as to require a process at law.

Art. 23. Articles 20, 21 and 22 shall be applicable to preachers.

Sec. 4.—Of the Mode of Trial.

Art. 24. The Bishop, presiding elder or preacher in charge, to whom charges shall be reported according to the Discipline, shall notify the prosecutor and the accused of the time and place of trial, and furnish the accused with a copy of the charges and specifications, allowing sufficient time for the parties to prepare for the trial.

He shall also see that the charges and specifications are drawn up in due form, and that all the requirements of the Discipline are fully complied with.

As far as he can, he shall aid in securing the attendance of witnesses, the taking of depositions and procuring documentary evidence.

He shall see that a record is kept of all the proceedings on the trial by a secretary of his appointment.

He shall decide all questions of law arising during the trial and have his decisions entered on the record, but the application of the law shall be with the committee.

Art. 25. The record shall be signed by the presiding officer and the secretary, and shall be reported to the president of the Conference to which an appeal may lie, and shall be filed and kept in its archives.

Art. 26. If the accused fail to appear, the trial may proceed as if he were present, or he postponed, according to the judgment of the committee.

Art. 27. The prosecutor and the accused may appear in person or by their representatives.

Art. 28. The prosecutor and the accused shall have the right of unlimited challenge for cause, to be decided by the presiding officer, and two peremptory challenges in a committee of more than five, and one in a committee of five or less. Other committee-men may be summoned if necessary to make up the required number.

Art. 29. If the charges and specifications are so defective that a trial cannot be had upon them, they may be amended or quashed. If quashed, new charges and specifications may be preferred and the trial proceed at once, unless the committee believe that time should be granted to take new testimony.

Art. 30. If no prosecutor appear, the presiding officer may appoint one, or the committee may examine the testimony and decide the case according thereto.

Art. 31. The prosecutor and the representative of an accused person must be members of our church, but no other qualification shall be required.

Sec. 5.—Of Appeals.

Art. 32. A Bishop shall have the right to appeal to the General Conference, a traveling preacher to the Annual Conference to which he belongs, an ordained local preacher to the Annual Conference within the bounds of which he resides or last resided, and other church members, including unordained local preachers, to the Quarterly Conference; provided that, if present, by himself or representative, he shall signify, at the time of his conviction, his intention to appeal, and shall within five days thereafter file a statement of the grounds of his appeal; but if not present he shall, so soon after he is informed of his conviction as he conveniently can, notify the prosecutor and the preacher who presided over the trial of his intention to appeal, and shall furnish each one of them a written statement of the grounds of his appeal.

Art. 33. The appeal shall be presented by the appellant or his representative, and, if it appear that he has complied with article 32, the appeal shall be allowed, otherwise it shall be dismissed. An appeal to the Quarterly Conference shall be tried by the Conference itself.

An appeal to an Annual or the General Conference shall be tried by a committee of its own appointment. Challenges shall be allowed according to article 28.

Art. 34. The committee shall be presided over by one of the Bishops, or by some one appointed by the president of the Conference.

Art. 35. The appeal shall be tried upon the record which may be referred, without reading, to the committee.

Art. 36. The committee may reverse the judgment and dismiss the case, or grant a new trial, to be conducted according to the Discipline, or affirm the judgment. Its finding shall be reported to the Conference and entered upon the journals without debate.

Art. 37. In case of an appeal to the Annual Conference, each party shall be entitled to have the decision of the president of the Conference on all questions of law, when presented in writing, and all such decisions shall be reported to the College of Bishops, according to the Discipline, chapter 3, section 2. If the College of Bishops believe that manifest injustice has been done the accused by wrong decisions on points of law, a new trial may be ordered, at the discretion of the Bishops.

The committee recommends the adoption of the following amendment to paragraph 1, section 1, chapter 8, page 142 of the Discipline. Insert after the word "otherwise:" "The preacher presiding at the trial shall demand them and." Also strike out the word "traveling" and the words "of which he was a member," so that the paragraph shall read:

"When any elder or deacon is deprived of his credentials of ordination by expulsion or otherwise, the preacher presiding at the trial shall demand them, and they shall be filed with the papers of the Annual Conference."

Respectfully submitted.

H. F. JOHNSON, Chair'n.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Finance.

Whereas, "The Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel;" And whereas, The duty of providing for the support of the ministry properly devolves on the lay membership of the church, and it is their duty, as far as possible, to relieve the preachers of the gospel from the necessity of making public collections—a thing always disagreeable and embarrassing to those who have an eye single to the cause of souls and not of money, and sometimes impairing their influence for good by giving the wicked an opportunity of appealing to popular prejudice by insinuations and charges of sordid motives—your committee on finance, composed entirely of lay members, has had this subject under advisement, as a matter of great importance to the advancement of our holy religion.

At our first interviews as a committee we had among ourselves a great variety of opinions as to the best mode of making collections for the support of the ministry, growing chiefly out of personal experience and local usages. We had all, or nearly all of us, at some period of our lives been stewards, and each one of us was inclined to think the plan of collection to which we had been accustomed was the best. We listened to various plans, and the experience of those who had worked under them, and found that no plan could be presented to which no objection could be raised.

But we all agree that our present disciplinary plan is defective.

1. The Discipline does not declare with sufficient force of language the duty of every member to contribute to the support of the ministry.

2. It does not declare with sufficient force and energy of language the obligation resting on those who at the beginning of the Conference year agree to pay given amounts and then fail to keep their promises, leaving others to save the credit of the church by paying what they have promised and then failed to pay.

To remedy this, in as mild a form as possible, the committee unanimously recommend the adoption of the following clause to be added to the Discipline.

To chapter 9, at page 145, add:

"4. Each member of the church is expected to pay according to his or her several ability for the support of the ministry, and the stewards of each station or circuit shall determine whether payments are to be made weekly, monthly or quarterly during the year. They shall then ascertain how much each member is able and willing to pay in the installments fixed by the stewards; and, whatever amount each member agrees to pay, he or she shall be under solemn obligation to pay, and can only be released from this obligation by the order of the stewards, or by vote of the Church Conference for good cause shown."

MILTON BROWN,
Chairman Com. on Finance.

Laid on the table under the rule, Tuesday morning, May 12, 1874.

A GLACIER.—A glacier, to speak to popular apprehension, is a mass of snow accumulated in an Alpine valley, which, assuming as it proceeds the appearance of a stream of ice, slides, little by little, to a lower level, carrying with it dirt and debris and grazing and leaving scratches on the rocks during its passage downward. The remarkable thing about the moving mass is that although any particular part or fragment of it is hard and brittle, yet, under the pressure of its own weight, it is to a certain extent viscous or rather plastic, and, taken as a whole, behaves as if it were semi fluid, and glides and winds its way forward with less or more velocity, according to the degree of slope and other circumstances. In the mass there are generally deep cracks, called crevasses, sometimes dangerous to those who are unskilled in explorations; and the surface is, for the most part, so rough as to require from the traveler the steadying use of an alpenstock.—Chambers' Journal.

BEECHER ON PREACHING.—The ninth lecture of the course on preaching was given at New Haven by Henry Ward Beecher, the subject being the way to make men conscious of their sinfulness. Among other things Mr. Beecher said:

"An ignorant villager, who had painted a lion for a sign and thinks he has genius, will never be convinced that he has none by arguments, but if a fine painting of a lion be placed beside his bungling work he will at once say: 'I was an a-s.' So we may preach that men are without holiness, but if we do not show this by speaking of their specific sins they will not realize it. In preaching we must follow the scriptural rather than the theological method."

EXERCISE your wit as much as you can, my boy; but there are two kinds of roads that I advise you for the most part to eschew. One kind are the roads that lead to the edge of the great darkness which skirts our little patch of light on every side. The other are the roads that go in a circle, leading you round and round to the point from which you started. I do not say never travel on these; you cannot always help it. But for the most part exercise yourself on the roads which lead to some place.—Mrs. Charles.

WE MOUNT to heaven mostly on the ruins of our cherished schemes, finding our failures were successes.—Alcott.

A WONDER TO HERSELF.

TANKTOWN, DELAWARE CO., OHIO, March 20, 1873.

DR. R. V. PIERCE: Your Discovery needs only a fair trial, and it will do all you recommend it to do, and more too. When I was fifteen I caught cold, and for twenty eight years I have been a perfect wreck of disease, and all the medicines and doctors' bills have run up at times to two and three hundred dollars, and never any better, but worse, when I gave up all hope, last spring, of living the summer through. I received one of your Account Books, and told my husband, after reading it, that it was too late to try further; but he said it was never too late. He went and bought two bottles, and I found it was helping me very much. Since 1811 I was troubled with Catarrh and Sore Throat, and was almost entirely deaf in one ear, and my voice was as dull as could be. There was constant pain in my head. Now my head is as sound as a dollar, my voice is clear, and I have used ten bottles of your Discovery. It has cured me of Catarrh, Sore Throat, Heart Disease, Spine Affection and Torpid Liver. My liver was very bad. My skin was rough. When I put my hand on my body it was like fish-scales. Now it is as smooth and soft as a child's. In conclusion I will say I have been well for three months. I am a wonder to myself and friends. This is but an imperfect statement—half has not been told.

Yours with respect, HESTER LACKEY.

MONOCHROMATIC PICTURES.

These Pictures, for beauty, durability and cheapness, take the lead of all other photographic inventions. Chemists and Photographers have vainly tried to introduce them in perfected form, and it is but recently that they were presented in New Orleans by Mr. H. BUSCH, of California, in such perfection of finish as to defy the criticism of connoisseurs in the Fine Arts.

Having secured the services of the above-named gentleman, I beg to announce to the public that I am now prepared to produce by this new discovery counterfeit presentments which, for fidelity to the original, will rival the touch of the great masters of art.

My prices are, for life size, $19; for life-size bust, $5; cabinet, $1; enlarging from card or small-sized tin-type into, with 8x10 frame complete, $3. Enameled cards and work in the latest styles also executed. Those wishing Pictures can send negatives.

Louisiana and Mississippi	bales...	4,115
Lake		4
Arkansas		110
Mobile		41
Texas		31
Total		4,301

On Saturday the demand was limited throughout the day, only five brokers participating in the business, the bulk of which was confined to 550 bales, at 16⅞@17c. for low middling. Sales, however, could not have been forced unless at liberal concessions. On Monday, with no dispatches from Liverpool, where the market was closed for the Whitsuntide holiday, and with the New York market reported dull, and ⅛@⅜c. lower to sell, but the previous quotations retained, there was very little inquiry at the opening, and the movement appeared to have been suspended; but at about noon sales were reported of 350 bales, partly at a price indicating a falling off of ⅛c., after which further transactions transpired, including one list of 475 bales toward three P. M., which swelled the day's business to 1,650 bales at irregular prices, showing a decline of ⅛@¼c. Strict ordinary sold as low as 13½c., good ordinary at 15½c., good ordinary to strict good ordinary at 15⅝c., strict good ordinary at 16c., strict dn. to low middling at 16c., and strict low middling at 17⅛c. On Tuesday the business summed up 3,150 bales. Nothing transpired to show any quotable variation, but the lower grades were neglected, and, if pressed upon buyers, could not have been moved unless at concessions. The medium and better qualities were steadier, and in some cases stronger, in accordance with the improved tone which characterizes the market generally.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 5,350 bales, against 5,250 for the corresponding time last week and 11,490 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 1,183,772 bales, against 1,174,585 bales to the same date last year, and the increase in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 299,101 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 76,231 to Great Britain, of 114,546 to France and of 12,466 to other foreign ports. NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Alphabetically Arranged Under the Heads of the Business or Articles Advertised.

NOTE.—We take no advertisements except from those who we have good reason to believe are respectable and reliable. The publisher urges his solicitor and agents to seek the advertisements of the most worthy and reliable representatives in every branch of business, and not to apply to or accept business from persons of doubtful character. We have refused business to the extent of thousands of dollars each year for want of satisfactory information in reference to applicants. We think we may safely claim for the list below that it embraces, as a rule, the very best men and firms in the different branches represented.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GOOD TEA AT LAST!

Tea-drinkers who long for and truly delight in a good, pure, honest CUP OF TEA should visit or send to the Great China and Japan Tea Warehouse,

NO. 170 CANAL STREET.

Our establishment is presided over by a professional Tea Taster, whose extensive experience, both in this country and in Europe, enables us to please the most critical taste. Old Country Folks, who have vainly been sighing and longing these many years for something like the good Old-fashioned Tea, are particularly charmed and delighted with the flavor, fragrance and freshness of our goods.

We are selling Black and Mixed Teas at from 50 cents to $1 per pound; Green Teas of all kinds at from 50 cents to $1.40, all of which will be found of good value at their respective prices.

For a good economical Tea we recommend our Black or Mixed, at 60 cents per pound, which will be found in many instances superior to goods sold in this city at $1 and $1.25 per pound.

For a best Tea our Black or Mixed, at $1 per pound, cannot possibly be excelled anywhere.

Persons who cannot conveniently visit our establishment should send their orders by mail. We deliver goods to all parts of the city free of charge. Country orders by express C. O. D. ☞ Remember that we have but one address—GREAT CHINA AND JAPAN TEA WAREHOUSE, 170 Canal street, opposite Varieties Theater. my7 1m

Address of the Bishops

IN REFERENCE TO THE LIABILITIES OF THE CHURCH IN WASHINGTON CITY.

To the Members of the General Conference:

DEAR BRETHREN—Our attention has been called to the financial condition of our church in Washington city, and from a consideration of the facts in the case we deem the matter of sufficient importance to demand your attention at this time.

Our brethren there undertook, soon after the war, when they were few in number, to build a house which should meet not their own needs only, but also the wants of our people who might have occasion to visit the national capital. For this purpose they made an outlay far beyond their own ability to meet, and up to this time have been carrying a burden of debt too grievous to be borne. While the house represents us respectably, yet, considered as a representative building, at the great central point of the whole country, it is far from being extravagant.

In carrying this great burden of debt our brethren have been compelled to look abroad for aid, but up to this time the response has been sufficient only to meet accruing interest and reduce the debt by a small amount.

This is a debt-distressing incubus on the local church which bears the weight of it, making development and progress almost impossible. Indeed it is a matter of very painful solicitude with those immediately concerned.

Let it be remembered that this debt was created in the interest of the church at large, and that it meets a demand which all feel to be imperative—it supplies our people visiting Washington city with the ministry of the church of their choice. Let it be remembered also that our brethren there contributed freely at first, and have now patiently, for some years, borne up under this most trying embarrassment. We commend to you, and to the church through you, any effort that may be made for relief in this case.

CHICAGO, June 1.—The Times publishes crop reports from various points throughout the States of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, Missouri, Minnesota and Kansas, from which it appears that on an average the acreage of wheat sown is much in excess of last year, and the yield promises to be quite up to the average, and in corn, oats and barley fully up to the average.

MR. EDITOR: The Rev. Thomas P. Crymes, for many years a valuable member of the Alabama Conference, died at his residence this morning, at half-past two o'clock, after a painful illness of seven weeks' duration. He died of heart disease. He requested me to send the following message to the members of the Alabama Conference: "Give my love to the brethren of the Alabama Conference, especially Drs. J. Hamilton, A. H. Mitchell and Allen S. Andrews. May God bless them all abundantly." He died in great peace. He lived near Brooksville, Mississippi.

PERSONAL INFLUENCE.—Upon the higher Alps the snow is sometimes piled so high, and so evenly balanced, that a crack of a whip or the shout of a voice may give sufficient vibration to the air to bring down the whole mass upon the travelers below.

So in our moral world there are souls just hovering over the abyss of ruin; a word or even a look from us may cause them to plunge down into the depths from which there is no return; or a helping hand stretched out to them in the moment of peril may lead them back to the safe, sure paths of virtue and peace.

Knowing that we have such power, shall we not humbly pray: "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil?"

ANTIQUITY OF CHESS.—Before the first stone of the Egyptian pyramids was laid, before the Petteia of the Greeks and the Latrunculi of the Romans were thought of, Chaturanga, the primeval chess of the Hindoos, had for centuries been the cherished pastime in India. Even that limited branch of chess—"chess problems or end-games"—was practiced in Arabia and Persia as early, probably, as the sixth century. We know that these subtleties were a source of delight to the renowned Haroon-er-Rasheed, and, curiously enough, one of the oldest on record is the composition of his son, Mutalim Billah.

FAME is like an eel—rather hard to catch, and a good deal harder to hold.

Report of Committee on Fraternal Relations with M. E. Church.

ADOPTED MAY 23 1874.

The committee to whom was referred the matter of the fraternal greetings conveyed to this General Conference by delegates duly commissioned from the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, respectfully report:

We have considered the action of the General Conference of that church, at its session in Brooklyn, New York, in May, 1872, and which is partially incorporated in the certificate of the delegates in the following terms, to wit:

"To place ourselves in the truly fraternal relations toward our Southern brethren which the sentiment of our people demands, and to prepare the way for the opening of formal fraternity with them, be it hereby

"Resolved, That this General Conference will appoint a delegation, consisting of two ministers and one layman, to convey our fraternal greetings to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South at its next ensuing session."

On Friday, May 8, this delegation, consisting of the Rev. Dr. Albert S. Hunt, the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Fowler and General Clinton B. Fisk, having announced their presence, were formally received, and their communications heard by the Conference.

It is with pleasure that we bear testimony to the distinguished ability and to the eloquent and courteous manner in which these Christian brethren discharged their trust. Their utterances warmed our hearts. Their touching allusions to the common heritage of Methodist history, to our oneness of doctrines, polity and usage, and their calling to mind the great work in which we are both engaged for the extension of the kingdom of their Lord and ours, stirred within us precious memories.

We are called upon by the terms of the action of their General Conference to consider measures necessary "to prepare the way for the opening of formal fraternity." Every transaction and utterance of our past history pledges us to regard favorably and to meet promptly this initial response to our long-expressed desire.

It is admissible to review briefly what has been done or attempted by us in this direction. Our General Conference of 1846 "Resolved, by a rising and unanimous vote, That Dr. Lovick Pierce be and is hereby delegated to visit the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to be held in Pittsburg, May 1, 1848, to tender to that body the Christian regards and salutations of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South." In pursuance of this action Dr. Pierce, duly commissioned, was present at the seat of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and by a note courteously advised them of his errand. The answer of that body was a unanimous vote declaring that "there are serious questions and difficulties existing between the two bodies;" and they did not consider it proper, at present, to enter into fraternal relations with the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Had our delegate been received and allowed a hearing, a more definite understanding might have been obtained of those "serious questions and difficulties," and the result, we think, would have been in the interest of peace. He closed his letter to the General Conference, on receiving a copy of its action, in these words: "You will therefore regard this communication as final on the part of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. She can never renew the offer of fraternal relations between the two great bodies of Wesleyan Methodists in the United States. But the proposition can be renewed at any time, either now or hereafter, by the Methodist Episcopal Church. And if ever made upon the basis of the Plan of Separation, as adopted by the General Conference of 1844, the Church South will cordially entertain the proposition." He reported the failure of his mission to our General Conference in St. Louis, in 1850, which thereupon adopted the following:

Resolved, That we will steadfastly adhere to the ground taken in the last communication of our delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Pittsburg, in May, 1848, to wit: That we cannot, under their act of rejection and refusal, renew our offer of fraternal relations and intercourse; but will at all times entertain any proposition coming from the Methodist Episcopal Church to us, whether it be by written communication or delegation, having for its object friendly relations, and predicated of the rights granted to us by the Plan of Separation adopted in New York in 1844.

Here the matter rested until May, 1869, when the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church opened negotiations with our Bishops at their annual meeting in St. Louis, inviting them to "confer" as to "the propriety, practicability and methods of reunion." Our Bishops respectfully declined to consider that subject, but invited their attention to one having precedence—the cultivation of fraternal relations. They suggested the removal of causes of strife; and this was done in a manner and spirit that met the hearty approval of our church. They reaffirmed the position in which Dr. Pierce had left the matter, saying: "The words of our rejected delegate have been ever since, and still are, our words."

One passage of this correspondence we quote. The Northern Bishops, in their letter, used these words: "That the great cause which led to the separation from us of both the Wesleyan Methodists of this country and of the Methodist Episcopal Church has passed away." To which the Southern Bishops replied:

"We cannot think you mean to offend us when you speak of our having separated from you, and put us in the same category with a small body of schismatics who were always an acknowledged secession. Allow us, in all kindness, brethren, to remind you, and to keep the important fact of history prominent, that we separated from you in no sense in which you did not separate from us. The separation was by compact and mutual; and nearer approaches to each other can be conducted with hope of a successful issue only on this basis."

A deputation visited our General Conference of 1870, at Memphis, proposing to treat with us in the name of the Methodist Episcopal Church on the subject of union. They were received and heard with great respect. But it appeared, upon due inquiry, that they were not commissioned to us by their General Conference—the only body with which we can treat on connectional interests. Nevertheless, the General Conference referred their communication to a committee, whose report, unanimously adopted, contained these resolutions:

"Resolved, That the action of our Bishops in their last annual meeting in St. Louis, in response to the message of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has the full indorsement of this General Conference, and accurately defines our position in reference to any overtures which may proceed from that church, having in them an official and proper recognition of this body.

"Resolved, moreover, That if this distinguished commission were fully clothed with authority to treat with us for union, it is the judgment of this Conference that the true interests of the church of Christ require and demand the maintenance of our separate and distinct organization.

"Resolved, That we tender to the Rev. Bishop E. S. Janes and the Rev. W. L. Harris, D. D., the members of the commission now with us, our high regards as brethren beloved in the Lord, and express our desire that the day may soon come when proper Christian sentiments and fraternal relations between the two great branches of Northern and Southern Methodism shall be permanently established."

Thus stood the case when the distinguished delegates of the Methodist Episcopal Church, duly authorized by their General Conference of 1872, brought us their fraternal greetings. We hail them with pleasure, and embrace the opportunity at length afforded us of entering into negotiations to secure tranquility and fellowship to our alienated commissions upon a permanent basis, and alike honorable to all.

We deem it proper, for the attainment of the object sought, to guard against all misapprehension.

Organic union is not involved in fraternity. In our view of the subject the reasons for the separate existence of these two branches of Methodism are such as to make corporate union undesirable and impracticable. The events and experiences of the last thirty years have confirmed us in the conviction that such a consummation is demanded by neither reason nor charity. We believe that each church can do its work and fulfill its mission most effectively by maintaining an independent organization. The causes which led to the division in 1844, upon a Plan of Separation mutually agreed upon, have not disappeared. Some of them exist in their original form and force, and others have been modified, but not diminished.

The size of the connection, and the extent of territory covered by it, had preduced on some thoughtful minds, before the events of 1844, the impression that separation would be convenient and otherwise advantageous. The General Conference, upon any proper basis of representation, was becoming too unwieldy for the ends originally designed. If this reason was of force then, it is more conclusive now. The membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church South exceeds six hundred thousand; our Northern brethren have more than twice that number.

Our General Conference is now composed of nearly three hundred ministers and laymen; theirs is proportionately larger.

It will be remembered that the last formal deliverance of the Southern representatives, in the united General Conference, was a protest against the power claimed for and exercised by that highest judicatory of the church. The Northern members, who were a controlling majority, claimed for it prerogatives which seemed to us both dangerous and unconstitutional. In their view the General Conference is supreme. Although restricted in the exercises of its power by a constitution, it is the judge of the restrictions, and is thus practically unlimited. In our view the General Conference is a body of limited powers. It can not absorb the functions of other and co-ordinate branches of the church government, and there are methods by which all constitutional questions may be brought to a satisfactory issue.

Each church still maintains its own construction of these fundamental questions. They are not theoretical merely, but very practical in their bearing. Were the two Methodisms organically united it would lead to serious collision, and expose the minority to harassing legislation, if not to oppression.

The existence of slavery in the Southern States furnished an occasion, with its connected questions, fruitful of disturbance; and to this the division has been mainly attributed. The position of Southern Methodism on that subject was scriptural. Our opinions have undergone no change. We held ourselves in readiness to carry the gospel to the bond and to the free. Missions to the slaves constituted a large part of our work. Many of our ministers labored in this field, and much of our means was expended on it. These labors were eminently owned of God. At the beginning of the late war a quarter of a million of negroes were in the communion of our church, and thousands of their children were receiving catechetical instruction. The societies organized in the Southern States during the last ten years by our Northern brethren, and the members which swell their statistics, are made up largely of those who, in slavery, had been converted by our instrumentality. The colored preachers, exhorters and class-leaders by whom they have principally carried on their Southern work, and some of whom have been counted worthy of seats in their Annual and General Conferences, were Christianized and trained under our ministry in other days. Following the indications of Providence we have, without abandoning this work, adapted our methods to the changed condition of the descendants of the African race in the midst of us. Many of them had been drawn away from us by appliances that we were not prepared to counteract; but a remnant remained. At their request we have set off our colored members into an independent ecclesiastical body, with our own creed and polity. We have turned over to them the titles and possessions of the church property formerly held by us for their use and benefit, and we propose to continue to them such moral and material aid as we are able to give.

This method has met with encouraging success. We believe it to be the best for both races. They have now fifteen Annual Conferences, four Bishops, 607 traveling preachers, 518 local preachers, 74,709 members, 535 Sunday schools, 1,102 Sunday school teachers and 49,955 Sunday school scholars. They dwell in the land side by side with us, and between us and them exist the kindest relations.

Our Northern brethren have pursued a different plan, and they seem to be committed to it by honest and conscientious convictions. They have mixed Conferences, mixed congregations and mixed schools. We do not ask them to adopt our plan. We could not adopt theirs.

We refer to these things in order that our position may not be attributed by any to prejudice, resentment or other motives unworthy of Christians.

But while we are clear and final in our declarations against the union of the two Methodisms, we welcome measures looking to the removal of obstacles in the way of amity and peace. The existence of these obstacles is generally known, and they are frankly recognized in the addresses of the delegates sent to us.

Our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church will, we trust, appreciate our uniform and frequent reference to the Plan of Separation. No adjustment can be considered by us that ignores it. By that plan we hold all our church-houses, cemeteries, school buildings and other property acquired before the division. Under it we claimed and recovered our portion of the common fund in the Book Concerns at New York and Cincinnati.

When its validity was denied by our Northern brethren, and the share of the common property inuring to us under it was withheld by them, the Plan of Separation was taken for ultimate adjudication to the Supreme Court of the United States, and that highest civil tribunal, without a dissenting voice, affirmed its validity and our rights under it.

When the representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church asserted before that tribunal that they were the original church, and that we were a secession, the court said:

"It can no more be affirmed, either in point of fact or of law, that they are traveling preachers in connection with the Methodist Church as originally constituted, since the division, than of those in connection with the Church South. Their organization covers but about half of the territory embraced within that of the former church, and includes within it but a little over two-thirds of the traveling preachers. Their General Conference is not the General Conference of the old church, nor does it represent the interest or possess territorially the authority of the same, nor are they the body under whose care this fund was placed by its founders. It may be admitted that, within the restricted limits, the organization and authority are the same as the former church; but the same is equally true in respect to the organization of the Church South."

When the same parties attempted to set aside the Plan of Separation, on the ground that it was made without proper authority, the court said:

"But we do not agree that this division was made without the proper authority. On the contrary, we entertain no doubt but that the General Conference of 1844 was competent to make it; and that each division of the church, under the separate organization, is just as legitimate, and can claim as high a sanction, ecclesiastical and temporal, as the Methodist Episcopal Church first founded in the United States. The same authority which founded that church in 1784 has divided it, and established two separate and independent organizations, occupying the place of the old one."

However others may regard that instrument, the Plan of Separation is too important in its application to our status and security to be lightly esteemed by us. If it should be said that its provisions touching territorial limits have been violated by both parties, we have this to say: We are ready to confer with our Northern brethren on that point. A joint commission, having this feature of the compact under revision, might reach a solution mutually satisfactory.

Measures preparatory to formal fraternity would be defective that leave out of view questions in dispute between the Methodist Episcopal Church and ourselves. These questions relate to the course pursued by some of their accredited agents while prosecuting their work in the South, and to property which has been taken and held by them to this day against our protest and remonstrance.

Although feeling ourselves sorely aggrieved in these things, we stand ready to meet our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the spirit of Christian candor, and to compose all differences upon the principles of justice and equity.

It is to be regretted that the honored representatives who bore fraternal greetings to us were not empowered also to enter upon a settlement of these vexed questions. We are prepared to take advanced steps in this direction, and, waiving any considerations which might justify a greater reserve, we will not only appoint a delegation to return the greeting so gracefully conveyed to us from the Methodist Episcopal Church, but we will also provide for a commission to meet a similar commission from that church for the purpose of settling disturbing questions.

Open and righteous treatment of all cases of complaint will furnish the only solid ground upon which we can meet. Relations of amity are with special emphasis demanded between bodies so near akin. We be brethren. To the realization of this the families of Methodism are called by the movement of the times. The attractive power of the cross is working mightily. The Christian elements in the world are all astir in their search for each other. Christian hearts are crying to each other across vast spaces and longing for fellowship. The heart of Southern Methodism, being in full accord with these sentiments, your committee submit the following resolutions for adoption:

Resolved, That this General Conference has received with pleasure the fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church conveyed to us by their delegates, and that our College of Bishops be and are hereby authorized to appoint a delegation, consisting of two ministers and one layman, to bear our Christian salutations to their next ensuing General Conference.

Resolved, That in order to remove all obstacles to formal fraternity between the two churches, our College of Bishops is authorized to appoint a commission, consisting of three ministers and two laymen, to meet a similar commission authorized by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and to adjust all existing difficulties.

Report of Special Committee

ON THE FRATERNAL COMMUNICATION OF WESLEYAN METHODIST CONFERENCE OF GREAT BRITAIN.

The committee to which was referred the communication from the Wesleyan Methodist Conference have had the same under careful consideration, and beg leave to recommend the following reply:

To the Wesleyan Methodist Conference of Great Britain:

Dear Fathers and Brethren in Christ—Your kind and Christian letter of fraternal greeting has been received by us, through our venerable Bishop Paine, with great satisfaction, and we respond to it in the same spirit of Christian candor and kindness as that in which it is expressed.

It has always been the desire of our church to maintain cordial Christian relations with all bodies of believers who are essentially one in the common faith, and close fraternal relations with every branch of the great family of Methodism, of whatever distinctive name. But, being aware of the light in which the heated denunciations of sectional prejudice and misunderstood surroundings have caused us to be viewed, we have not judged it becoming in us to seek the recognition and fellowship of Christian bodies, and so have calmly waited for time to soften asperities of feeling, remove the clouds of prejudice by correcting errors of the public mind, and with calmer thoughts to do us justice. We do not now propose to even state the grounds of our former or present position or attempt any defense. Our church has made its record, which is open to the world, and we trust to impartial history in calmer times to fully vindicate our course.

Believing that, ecclesiastically, we have occupied no ground which is not strictly scriptural or different from that occupied by the venerable founder of Methodism and the other great bodies of the Wesleyan family, we have not been able to see why your venerable body has failed to recognize us hitherto. But we rejoice to know that an era of clear views has dawned, and we sincerely pray that nothing may occur to overshadow it for a moment, and that the fraternal intercourse thus auspiciously begun may ripen into the firmest and purest bonds of Christian brotherhood and co-operation.

It affords us great joy at all times to know your fidelity and devotion to the faith of Christ—your success in winning souls—and the godly example furnished by your church to the world, and, above all, your grand missionary work, the praise of which is throughout the Christian world, in all these things we would follow in your footsteps. Our missionary work, as well as our home operations, has been greatly retarded by the calamities through which our country has passed within the past few years, from which our section suffered most severely.

The great difference in the structure and conditions of society in our new and, in many sections, sparsely populated country, as compared with yours, is unfavorable to that compactness and organic completeness in our church that have been attained by yours; but in the six hundred and fifty thousand members who compose our body there are multitudes who fear God and serve with fidelity our common Master.

We rejoice to be able to say that we are not without manifest tokens of the divine favor among us. Tens of thousands are added to our communion annually by profession of faith in Christ, and, to the praise of divine grace be it said, we have from the beginning enjoyed peace and unity throughout our body to a remarkable degree. Our ministry is little given to vain and dangerous speculations, and our people are not easily moved from the faith of the gospel; and, though surrounded by the same forms of pretentious skepticism and arrogant sacerdotalism that lead so many astray in your country, we earnestly strive to maintain "the form of sound words" received through the ministration of the venerable Wesley, whose name is held in the highest reverence among us.

We have not been unmindful of our duty to our youth and to posterity, and are exerting ourselves to furnish our people, and as many outside of our pale as we can reach, the means of education, under the fostering care of the church and sanctions of religion. Besides numerous high schools and academies, we have eleven colleges, in which some sixteen hundred youths and young men are pursuing a classical and scientific course. Of these about one hundred and eighty are licensed preachers or have the ministry in view as their life-work. And we are just now engaged in measures for the establishment of a university upon a broad scale, for which we have secured more than $600,000.

The cause of Sunday schools and the religious training of the young are receiving increased attention among us; a profound conviction is taking hold upon the minds of our people that we must train the young in the way we would have them go in later life.

And now, Christian brethren, we send you our fraternal greeting in the Lord. You have our earnest prayers that you may greatly increase in numbers, and abound in every grace that constitutes a holy people, and mighty in the Lord—that the beauty of the Lord your God may be upon you, and that he may fully establish the work of your hands.

We shall rejoice to hear of your prosperity, and to receive messengers from you at all times.

J. HAMILTON, Chairman.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 22, 1874.

OUR MISSIONARY SYSTEM.—The modification of our missionary system, says the Nashville Christian Advocate, is not altogether to our mind; but the constitution will be found flexible enough for our use, and in such cases "that which is best administered is best." The liberty granted to the board by the General Conference, to elect an associate secretary, was a good prudential measure, and the election of our excellent confrere to that office will give universal satisfaction. The associate secretary will not only do good service as a bureau officer, but also in visiting Annual and District Conferences, etc., which he will be able to do in connection with his duties as Sunday school secretary. The one class of duties will chime in well with the other. Then the constitutional secretary, Dr. McFerrin, and the associate secretary, Dr. Haygood, understand each other, and will operate in perfect harmony. We predict that they will devise and execute plans which will bring into the treasury the $60,000 assessed by the board for the support of the missions which will be under its care during the next year. This expedient, adopted by the board, will commend itself to the connection, in that it secures the services of an additional secretary, without the expense of another salaried officer.

THE District Conference of the Selma district, Alabama Conference, will be held at Rehoboth, Wilcox county, Alabama, July 9, 1873.

L. M. Lee, chairman of the committee on episcopacy, presented report No. 5 of said committee, on making allowance for the families of deceased Bishops, which was read, the rule requiring to lie on the table one day was suspended, and the report was adopted.

REPORT NO. V OF THE COMMITTEE ON EPISCOPACY.

Your committee have had under consideration the resolutions referred to them, and signed by A. H. Redford and J. B. McFerrin, directing the committee on episcopacy to consider the subject of making provision for the families of deceased Bishops, and unanimously recommend the following resolution:

Resolved, That the Discipline, page 146, chapter 9, section 3, paragraph 1, be amended by inserting after the word "expenses," "and of the widows and orphan children of deceased Bishops."

The whole paragraph thus amended would read as follows:

"1. The allowance of the Bishops for salary and traveling expenses, and of the widows and orphan children of deceased Bishops, shall be estimated by the committee on episcopacy of the General Conference, and they shall divide the amount between the several Annual Conferences, according to the ability of the Conferences."

LEROY M. LEE, Chairman.

John E. Edwards, chairman of the committee on itineraney, presented a supplementary report to report No. 7 of said committee, which was read and ordered to be incorporated in said report.

John E. Edwards, chairman of the committee on itineraney, presented report No. 8 of said committee.

W. F. Cook, of said committee, presented a minority report signed by himself and eight other members of the committee, which was read.

Both reports were laid over for one day—the latter under the rule—a motion of W. F. Cook to suspend the rule not prevailing.

The following are the reports:

SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO. VII OF COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

North Carolina Conference.—The journal of this Conference is admirably kept in every particular. We cannot speak of it in terms of too high commendation. All the conditions of complete and thorough Conference journalism are met. More we need not say; but if we were to descend to minute particulars much more might be said in its praise and commendation.

JOHN E. EDWARDS, Chair'n.

REPORT NO. VIII OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The three several papers signed by Lovick Pierce and Joseph S. Key, asking, by resolution, for changes in the Discipline, especially relating to certain administrative qualifications in those preachers who may be received on trial in an Annual Conference, and assigned to pastoral oversight, as also of preachers in full connection who are in pastoral charge of circuits and stations, seeking to introduce such a change as shall make administrative ability and qualification a test of continuance on trial, and of reception into full connection on the one hand; and of making non-efficiency a ground of complaint against a preacher in full connection, on the passage of his character, on the other; together with a series of questions to be asked in a Quarterly Conference touching the official administration of the preacher in charge of pastoral work, have received the patient, careful and long-continued consideration of the committee. They have been considered the more carefully because of the high and honored source whence the inquiries emanate, as well also as for the importance of the changes which the papers seek to effect. But, after a calm and thorough review of the whole subject, the committee, by a small majority, think that, in view of the fact that the spirit and intention of most that is embraced in the proposed changes is already incorporated in the Discipline, and from the further consideration that some of the points involved in those papers have already been considered, and favorably reported on by the committee on revisal, it is scarcely necessary, in order to compass the end proposed, to make the changes drawn out in the resolutions before us. We therefore respectfully submit the following resolution, for the adoption of the Conference, as the most satisfactory mode, just now, of disposing of the papers in question.

Resolved, That the suggestions of the venerable Lovick Pierce, D. D., in regard to the administrative qualifications of probationers in an Annual Conference, and in relation to minute inquiry into the official administration of all who are in pastoral charge, are timely and deserving of serious thought; but, inasmuch as many of the points embraced in his papers are already in the purview of existing provisions in our Discipline, and some of the questions proposed to be asked in Quarterly Conferences are already recommended in report No.— of the committee on revisal, we therefore think that no special, independent action should be taken on the resolutions referred to the committee on itineraney touching these points, but that preachers in charge, and presiding elders, should heed the suggestions of our venerable father, and profit by his earnest wish that special attention should be given to the administrative qualifications of those in pastoral charge.

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN E. EDWARDS, Chair'n.

MINORITY REPORT FOR REPORT NO. VIII OF THE COMMITTEE ON ITINERANCY.

The undersigned, a minority of the committee on itinerancy, disagreeing with the majority in relation to the resolution signed by Lovick Pierce and J. S. Key, recommending changes in the Discipline, referring especially to the administrative qualities of a traveling preacher, propose for the adoption of the Conference the following, viz.:

1. That answer 3, chapter 3, section 5, page 75 of the Discipline, be so amended and changed as to read as follows:

"The Annual Conference may then admit him as a probationer, by a vote of the majority. Observe!—This relation of being on trial embraces the requisites of a competent pastorate, and must apply as well to proper administrative qualifications as to acceptable preaching ability. One on trial may be discontinued for want of efficiency in either of these respects, without doing him any wrong; otherwise it would be no trial at all."

2. That chapter 2, section 2, be amended by inserting as answer 4 to question 7, page 45, the following:

"Answer 4. But if the complaint be wholly on account of habitual failure in official administration, and any member of the Conference objects to the passage of his character, wholly on this account, the question: 'Shall his character pass?' shall be put on this point alone. And if a majority of the Conference refuse to pass his character, because he is not blameless in official administration, the Conference shall grant him an honorable location. Provided, nevertheless, if the delinquent preacher desires to be tried another year (making suitable acknowledgments,) and promises, if tried another year, to come up to the measure of his duty in these respects, the Conference may employ him another year, and upon the issues of that year shall depend his restoration or absolute location."

The annotation of the remaining answers to be changed accordingly.

3. That chapter 3, section 3, answer 6 to question 1, page 68, be so amended as to add after the words, "Whether the rules respecting the instruction of children have been faithfully observed," the following, viz.: "Whether the preacher in charge administers the sacraments, holds Church Conferences, enforces moral discipline, and attends to the collections assessed in his charge, and to report to the Annual Conference the names of all the delinquent traveling preachers within his district."

Respectfully submitted.

R. Alexander, chairman of the committee on boundaries, presented report No. 3 of said committee, which was read and laid over under the rule.

REPORT NO. III OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOUNDARIES.

The committee on boundaries submit the following report No. 3:

1. We recommend that all that part of the State of Indiana not included in the New Albany and Jeffersonville appointments be attached to the Illinois Conference, thus granting the memorial signed Westcott and Jones.

2. We recommend that the memorial from the East Texas Conference, concerning the boundary line between that Conference and Trinity be granted, so that the portion of Harrison county now included in the Trinity Conference, and so much of the counties of Upshur, Smith, Vanzandt and Kaufman as shall be required to make a straight line from the northwest corner of Harrison county to said point on the Trinity river, be and the same is transferred to and made a part of the East Texas Conference.

3. That the petition of Cypress Valley church to be placed in the Little Rock Conference be not granted.

4. That the petition to transfer Dade county to the North Georgia Conference be not granted.

5. The resolution of W. M. Leftwich and others, instructing the committee to inquire into the "expediency of so changing the Conference boundaries in Missouri as to make two Conferences, with the dividing line running north and south." After due deliberation the committee conclude that it is not expedient to recommend the proposed change. But, in view of the various memorials and resolutions from Missouri touching the question of boundaries, your committee recommend that the three Conferences in Missouri be and they are hereby authorized to readjust their boundaries at any time during the next four years, in any manner that may be deemed best for the general work, by and through any joint commission or consultation that they may agree to appoint for that purpose.

6. That the memorial of Bros. Long and McTeer to allow the church near Graysville to belong to the Holston Conference be granted.

R. ALEXANDER, Chair'n.
W. M. LEFTWICH, Sec.

H. W. Foote, from the committee on Sunday schools, presented report No. 6 of said committee, which was read and laid on the table under the rule.

REPORT NO. VI OF THE COMMITTEE ON SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

1. The committee has had under consideration the memorial from the Sunday schools in Galveston, Texas, on the subject of changing the system of uniform lessons, so as to adopt the text of the International series, and instructed me to report that they have previously considered and reported upon that subject, and that the General Conference has adopted their report.

2. The committee has also considered the resolution of Rev. Morris Evans and others, on the subject of organizing baptized children of the church for the purpose of instructing them, etc., and has instructed me to report that this resolution applies to all children, while the duties of the committee relate to Sunday schools only, and ask that said resolution be referred to the committee on revisals.

3. The committee has also had under consideration the resolution signed by Rev. W. M. Leftwich and others, which is as follows, to wit:

Amend answer 2 of section 5, on page 114 of the Book of Discipline, by adding thereto the following:

"And shall elect superintendents of Sunday schools, on the nomination of the preacher in charge, after consultation with the officers and teachers of such schools."

In which the committee concurs, and has instructed me to recommend the adoption of the amendment.

Respectfully submitted.

Trusten Polk, chairman of the committee on education, presented report No. 2 of said committee, which was read and adopted.

REPORT NO. II OF THE COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION.

To the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South:

RESPECTED AND BELOVED BRETHREN—Your committee on education, to whom was referred the memorial of the Virginia Annual Conference, praying this General Conference "to provide for the establishment of district schools throughout the church, according to the plan already adopted by the Holston Conference, beg leave to report that they have considered the memorial, and upon inquiry have ascertained that the Holston Conference have adopted no plan for the establishment of district schools. But, after mature deliberation on the subject matter referred to in the memorial, they have concluded to recommend that this Conference adopt the following resolution:

Resolved, That this Conference recommend that, as far as practicable, Southern Methodist schools be established in every district of our work; provided that they be strictly tributary to and in no case in conflict with our colleges, male or female, or any other of our institutions of a higher grade.

In this connection your committee beg to call the attention of every member of this Conference to the great importance of Christian and denominational education.

We fear that in the great work of educating our children we do not fully meet the obligations which rest upon us. We direct our attention and efforts too much to the faculties which are purely intellectual, ignoring the moral and religious.

We ought to strive to enlighten the conscience, instill elevated sentiments, inspire right feelings and pure desires, implant correct principles, cultivate the cardinal virtues, restrain and regulate the passions and appetites. In a word, our labor ought to be bestowed upon the heart, as well as and even more than upon the head. The heart, rather than the head, is the fountain and source of happiness to the individual man and woman, and also to the society of which they are members. It is the declaration of divine wisdom that "a good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good; and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is evil; for out of the abundance of the heart 'the mouth speaketh.'" It is not head, but heart. And again: "For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies."

And these utterances of "him who knew what was in man" are in full harmony with both the teachings of philosophy and the lessons of experience. We all know that the heart is the seat of the desires and the source of our motives, and that desire and motive govern and impel the race.

But neither desire nor motive springs from the naked intellect. Motives have their origin in man's moral constitution. And from this, therefore, as their source, proceed virtue and vice.

Lord Bacon has said that "knowledge is power"—that is, mere power—a power which may be wielded for good or for evil; and for evil as effectually as for good. A bad man is only made a worse one by having his merely intellectual faculties highly developed. It follows that what society needs—what the welfare of the race demands—is that the forces of the intellect should be guided and wielded by pure and lofty motives. But these motives can be supplied only by man's moral constitution. And does it not, therefore, also follow that our educational systems and enterprises should be directed, in the largest measure, to the development of the attributes of our moral nature? And does it not further follow that these powers of the moral nature condition and determine the character and the destiny of the man? Indeed, they not only make a man good, but no man can be truly great without them. They lie at the foundation of both greatness and goodness. Why was it that Cato, the censor, was a grander man than Cicero, the orator? Did the ambitious Cæsar fear the intellectual, the cultivated, the accomplished and graceful rhetorician as he did the stern, uncompromising moralist and patriot?

Considerations such as these urge themselves upon us with commanding emphasis at the present juncture. The cry of our times is education—education. But it is for the education of the pure intellect, and not of the moral constitution. And unfortunately, as we think, the tendency and aim of our systems of public and State education are to the development of the intellectual faculties, to the neglect and to the ignoring of the moral and the higher nature. We want an intelligent people, it is true, but it is also and especially true that we want a virtuous people—a people who have and practice and exemplify the cardinal virtues.

Your committee are of opinion that the institutions of learning under the patronage of our church are well adapted for the proper education of our nature, moral and intellectual; and they believe they deserve to be recommended to the earnest and universal patronage and support of the friends of education generally, and of Southern Methodism particularly. And to that end they beg to present to this Conference the following resolution for its adoption:

Resolved, That this General Conference recommends the institutions of learning under the control of our church to the active and zealous support of all our people and friends.

All of which is respectfully submitted by the committee.

TRUSTEN POLK, Chair'n.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 19, 1874.

W. C. Johnson, chairman of the committee on books and periodicals, presented report No. 6 of said committee, which was read.

REPORT NO. VI OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

The resolution from the —— Quarterly Conference, in the bounds of the North Carolina Conference, requesting the delegates from that body to call the attention of the General Conference to the great importance of having the Book of Discipline in cheap pamphlet form, and the resolution of Isham L. Burrow, F. M. Paine and W. T. Harris in regard to a reduction in the prices of our books, have been considered by the committee, with the following results:

Upon inquiry of the book agent the committee learn that the books issued by the Publishing House are sold at as low prices as those sold by other houses, except, of course, the publications of those societies which are sustained by charities solicited by agents, traveling all over the land. Prices of books at our Publishing House were fixed by the agent with the catalogues of all the leading houses of the country before him, and after the most careful thought.

While the committee recognize it as the business of the book agent to fix the prices of our books, they recognize also that it is the policy of the Publishing House, as established by the General Conference, to supply the demand of the church for books at the cheapest rates, as far as practicable. This policy, the committee recommend, should be constantly kept in mind, and carried out just to that extent to which the book agent may deem safe. The committee recommend particularly the cheapening, when it can be done, of the books in the course of study for undergraduates in the traveling connection.

Respectfully submitted.

W. C. JOHNSON, Chairman.

Dr. Haygood moved to amend by adding the following resolution:

Resolved, That the General Conference recommend the book agent to fix the price of the Christian Advocate at $2.50 per annum.

A. R. Winfield and W. A. McCarty offered the following substitute for the amendment, which was laid on the table:

Resolved, That the price of the Nashville Christian Advocate be referred to the book agent and book committee, with instructions to publish it as low as it can be done to conserve the interests of the church.

A. E. Williams moved to lay the amendment on the table. A division was called for, and the motion was lost by a vote of 89 to 106.

Thomas Branch offered the following amendment, which was read:

Whereas, The book agent informs the General Conference that he can publish the Nashville Advocate at $2; But whereas, The increase of the price of subscription to $2.50 is necessary to enable Conference papers and individual enterprises to live:

Resolved, That the price be raised to $2.50.

He spoke to the amendment in an animated and facetious style.

R. A. Young called for the previous question. The call was sustained, and the amendment of Mr. Branch was lost.

The question was then put on the amendment of A. G. Haygood, which was lost by a vote of 81 to 96.

The report of the committee was then adopted.

On motion of J. E. Evans the Conference resolved to meet this afternoon at three o'clock.

The Conference then adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by the Bishop.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

WEDNESDAY, May 20, 1874.

Conference met at the appointed hour, Bishop Paine in the chair.

Religious exercises were conducted by P. A. Peterson.

Bishop Pierce took the chair, and called for reports of standing committees.

J. W. Hanner, chairman of the committee on revisal, presented report No. 5 of said committee, which was read and laid on the table under the rule.

REPORT NO. V OF COMMITTEE ON REVISAL.

On various papers referred to them the committee offer the following recommendations:

1. Non-concurrence with a resolution of A. West and R. A. Hardaway on the subject of licensing preachers.

2. In respect of the papers signed by L. Pierce and others, concerning the reception of baptized infants into the church, your committee, believing that the Discipline is sufficiently explicit on the subject, recommend non-concurrence.

3. Resolutions of J. Geiger and T. C. Frogge. First one disposed of by previous action. With the second, on voting for delegates to the General Conference without the distinction of lay and clerical, and also a resolution of A. A. Coleman and J. Hamilton on the same subject, it is recommended that you do not concur.

4. Concurrence with a resolution of W. H. Bobbitt and others, proposing to add to answer 1, on page 88: "And they shall report in writing the extent and result of their labors to the fourth Quarterly Conference." Paragraph as amended:

"Answer 1. It shall be the duty of local preachers to aid the preacher in charge of the circuit, station or mission to which they belong in supplying the people with the ministry of the word. They shall accordingly be applied to by the preacher in charge, as soon as he enters on his work, to state what amount of service they are able and willing to perform; he may then draw up a plan by which their labors shall be regulated; and they shall be authorized to form new congregations, to take a list of the names of all candidates for church membership, and, if expedient, receive them into the church; provided that all such congregations, candidates and members be reported as soon as possible to the preacher in charge, in order that they may be placed immediately under his pastoral care. And they shall report in writing the extent and result of their labors to the fourth Quarterly Conference."

5. Non-concurrence with the resolution of C. I. Vandeventer and others, prescribing the duties of recording stewards and District Conference secretaries.

6. With the resolution of A. G. Haygood and others, recommending that "the report on Orphans' Homes" adopted by the General Conference of 1870, with the proviso that it be placed in the Discipline stricken out, as an amendment (Journal 1, page 344,) your committee recommend non-concurrence.

7. As to the resolution of J. W. Hinton and others, in regard to the division of money between presiding elders and preachers, your committee deem no further legislation necessary.

8. On the resolution of W. S. Black and others it is recommended that to answer 1, pages 47-8, chapter 2, section 3, you add: "But should it become necessary, from any unforeseen cause, to change the place after it has been fixed by the Conference, the presiding elder shall have power to make the change." Paragraph as amended: "Answer 1. There shall be held annually, in each presiding elder's district, a District Conference. The time shall be fixed by the presiding elder, and the place by the Conference; but should it become necessary, from any unforeseen cause, to change the place after it has been fixed by the Conference, the presiding elder shall have power to make the change."

9. On the resolution of R. Pollard and others, proposing to give the right of nomination, in the appointment of stewards, to any member of a Quarterly Conference, your committee recommend non-concurrence.

10. With the resolution of G. A. Dannelly and J. Mackey, to amend the language of the Discipline, page 80, chapter 3, section 8, answer 1, so that it shall read: "Answer 1. To administer baptism and solemnize the rite of matrimony in the absence of an elder;" also page 82, chapter 3, section 8, answer 1, so that it shall read: "Answer 1. To administer baptism and the Lord's Supper, and to solemnize the rite of matrimony, and perform all parts of divine worship," your committee concur.

11. With the papers on the installation of stewards, from the Hannibal District Conference, and C. W. Miller, your committee recommend non-concurrence.

12. On a resolution of M. Evans and others, the committee recommend that your book editor be instructed to throw the Discipline into paragraphs, omitting all unnecessary questions, and number them continuously from chapter 2 to chapter 12.

13. With a paper signed by L. Greer and J. Adams, recommending such legislation as would authorize the Bishops to ordain deacons and elders, in certain cases, before they have completed the course of study, your committee do not concur.

14. The papers from Morganfield circuit, Louisville Conference, J. Hamilton and W. Shapard, concerning the use of our houses of worship, and whether we should allow the ministers of those denominations to come into our pulpits who debar us theirs, have been considered, and your committee are of opinion that the powers of our trustees are large enough and sufficiently defined by existing law, and that the other matter should be left to the discretion of our preachers, and therefore recommend no legislation on these subjects.

15. Your committee unanimously recommend the resolution of G. A. Dannelly and J. Mackey, that you add to answer 2, section 4, chapter 2, on page 51, the following: "But the presiding elder and preacher in charge shall have authority, when they judge it necessary, to change the place." Paragraph as amended: "Answer. Four times a year, at such places as the Conference may appoint, and at such times as the presiding elder may designate. But the presiding elder and preacher in charge shall have authority, when they judge it necessary, to change the place."

16. The petition of A. G. Haygood and others, requesting that the action of the General Conference of 1870, on "orphans' homes," be inserted in the Discipline has been considered, and it is thought unadvisable to grant the prayer of the petitioners.

17. The quadrennial address of the Bishops and other papers, calling for "some strong deliverance as to worldly amusements," telling us that we "cannot make a new law, but can define the old," have been reviewed and discussed, and your committee, with some misgiving, recommend that on page 28 you place a foot-note to the item: "The taking such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus,"* as follows, viz.:

* Dancing, attending dancing parties, theatrical and circus exhibitions, and such like, are among the diversions which cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus.

(The secretary and chairman of your committee protest against defining, by legislative enactment, this old law in any such foot-note.)

18. The address of our Bishops, together with memorials from other wise and honored men, and from Annual Conferences, on the subject of class meetings, have been patiently considered; and while we are profoundly impressed with the value of this peculiarly Methodistic institution, and would have the General Conference commend it again to the hearts of our people, yet we do not recommend any further legislation on the subject.

19. A valuable paper signed by our venerable father in Israel, Dr. Lovick Pierce, and others, proposing to make attendance on Church Conferences a condition of continued church membership, has been most respectfully considered, and the conclusion reached that on this subject, at present, no further legislation is required. All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN W. HANNER, Chair'n.
H. A. BOURLAND, Sec.

Mr. Johnson, chairman of the committee on books and periodicals, presented report No. 7 of said committee, which was read and adopted.

Also report No. 8 of said committee, which was read and adopted.

REPORT NO. VII OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

The committee have carefully examined advance sheets of a work referred to them, entitled "A Manual of Architecture for Churches, Parsonages and School-Houses. By the Rev. W. M. Patterson, of the Memphis Conference." It contains designs, elevations, plans, specifications, form of contract, rules for estimating cost of building, with suggestions on acoustics, ventilation, heating, lighting, painting and other pertinent subjects, including valuable original contributions from the pens of Bishops Wightman and Marvin. The book, which is a quarto, is now passing through the press of our Publishing House at Nashville. The author is well known, and favorably, as a church builder. He has furnished designs for a number of the best edifices in the connection, and he deservedly enjoys the reputation of possessing superior qualifications for the work undertaken by him. The committee, after examination of advance sheets of this work, embracing designs for churches, parsonages and school-houses, take pleasure in expressing their decided approval of it, and their belief that it will meet a want long felt among us. It is not expected that the use of this manual will supersede the services of a professional architect in the erection of large and costly structures; but, while in instances of this kind its directions and suggestions will be valuable, its usefulness will appear chiefly as a guide to building committees, where it is thought to be either not desirable or not practicable to employ a professional architect. In the many cases of this kind this manual, it is believed, will contribute largely to the improvement of our church architecture, particularly in towns and villages and throughout the country.

The following resolution is offered for adoption, viz.:

Resolved, That "Patterson's Manual of Architecture" is recommended as a work which meets a felt want in our church.

Respectfully submitted.

W. C. JOHNSON, Chairman.

REPORT NO. VIII OF THE COMMITTEE ON BOOKS AND PERIODICALS.

1. The committee, after considering the resolution instructing them to inquire into the expediency of changing the form of the Christian Advocate, and printing it on thirty-two pages, report that this change is not expedient.

2. The resolution of W. G. E. Cunnyngham, C. Long and F. W. Earnest, requesting the committee to inquire into the propriety of directing the book agent to publish a magazine for ladies, has been taken into consideration, and the committee report that the undertaking is not advisable at this time.

3. The resolution of H. A. Bourland and J. H. Pritchett, proposing to instruct the book agent to have the Apostle's Creed printed in our Sunday school song-books, etc., so that it may be readily learned by the children and be convenient for use in closing Sunday schools, has received the attention of the committee, and they report in favor of leaving the proposition to the discretion of the book agent with the book editor.

4. The memorial of Oscar M. Addison, in regard to the necessity of publishing "an approved tune-book, suitably arranged for the use of our hymns," need no further attention, since the book agent has just published a new hymn and tune-book, which, it is believed, will fully supply the lack referred to by the memorialist.

Respectfully submitted.

W. C. JOHNSON, Chairman.

W. G. E. Cunnyngham, chairman of the committee on missions, presented report No. 6 of said committee, which was read, and on motion of W. W. Bennett was made the order of the day for to-morrow at half-past ten A. M., the vote being 124 to 42.

REPORT NO. VI ON MISSIONS.

Your committee would respectfully state that they have carefully reconsidered their report No. 1, which was recommitted to them. They have compared it, item by item, with the minority report signed by Dr. A. R. Winfield, and find it impossible to harmonize or combine the two. They therefore beg leave to return report No. 1, with a single verbal change in article 16, and the addition of an article requiring preachers in charge of circuits and stations to institute monthly missionary prayer meetings in their several congregations, as their final action on the subject.

The committee, in their efforts to revise the constitution, have given earnest heed to the voice of the church as it has reached them through the memorials, petitions, and especially that part of the Bishops' address devoted to the subject of missions, referred to us, and we have endeavored to obey it. Prominent in all the suggestions offered was a wish that our foreign missionary work should be separated from the home work, and "made to rely upon its own merits, motions and obligations." The Bishops, in their address, say: "Individualize the mission work. Separate it from all competition. Set it forth, in the grandeur of its claims, upon faith, hope and philanthropy, an imperious duty specified by divine command, encouraged by divine promise, already indicated by providence and grace, and destined to culminate, sooner or later, by gradual advancement or sudden triumph in millennial glory. Any plan recognizing the great underlying principles of this interest, and starting from the right standpoint, which will commend itself to the judgment of the church as feasible in its practical working, and which can be economically administered, will command her liberality. The current of benevolence, in this behalf, must not be wasted by side rills for local irrigation, but pour in steady volume into one reservoir for a specific use." Again they say: "If the General Conference could provide for the home field from some other fund it might be well."

Guided by these wise suggestions and their own convictions, a majority of the committee framed the plan of missionary operations contained in their report No. 1, and a subsequent careful review, under your instruction, served but to confirm their convictions. They cannot, therefore, change that report. To say that there was absolute unanimity would not be true, but the paper now returned is the best expression of their views they can present.

Thoughtful men among us deplore the want of missionary zeal and enterprise in the Methodist Episcopal Church South. We do not occupy the position among the missionary agencies of the Christian world which our numbers, wealth and intelligence demand. In the hope that our present deliberations will result in giving new life to this department of our work, this report is respectfully submitted.

W. G. E. CUNNYNGHAM,
Chairman.

R. Hiser, chairman of the committee on Bible cause, presented report No. 1 of that committee, which was read.

Also report No. 2 of said committee, which was read and adopted. (For reports see sixth page.)

The following report of the committee in the appeal case of L. D. Huston was then presented and read:

The committee on the appeal of Lorenzo D. Huston, expelled by the Baltimore Conference upon the charge of immorality, report to the General Conference:

The chair decided that this question was not debatable.

J. W. Hinton appealed from the decision of the chair. The decision was not sustained.

Pending the discussion the order of the day arrived.

The chair brought forward Bishop Bowman, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who was introduced to the Conference, and took his seat on the platform.

The first article of the proposed constitution, in the report of the majority, was read.

A. R. Winfield moved as a substitute the first article in the report of the minority.

On motion of H. A. C. Walker this motion was laid on the table.

Edwards moved so to amend as to strike out the following words: "And from District Conferences and from collections in Sunday schools and church missionary societies;" and to insert in lieu thereof: "And from such other plans as may be adopted by the church and congregation to raise money for the object."

As amended it read thus:

"The revenue of the board shall be derived from general collections in every congregation, and from such other plans as may be adopted by the church and congregation to raise money for this object; and from special collections by the secretary and the Bishops, and from donations and legacies."

The report of the committee on temperance, with the minority reports, were taken up, as follows:

MAJORITY REPORT NO. I.

Resolved, That the General Rules, chapter 1, section 2, page 27 of the Book of Discipline, be so altered that instead of "drunkenness or drinking spirituous liquors, unless in cases of necessity," it shall read as follows:

"Drunkenness, or drinking spirituous liquors, unless in cases of necessity, or making, buying or selling them to be so used."

Respectfully,

J. B. MCFERRIN, Chair'n.

LOUISVILLE, May 13, 1874.

MINORITY REPORT NO. I.

Strike out of the General Rules the following clause, Discipline, page 27, which is as follows:

"Drunkenness, or drinking spirituous liquors, unless in cases of necessity," then substitute the following: "Making, buying, selling or using, as a beverage, intoxicating liquors."

W. PRICE.
JOHN H. STONE.

MINORITY REPORT NO. II.

We, the undersigned minority of the committee on temperance, dissenting from the majority report, beg leave to present the following:

Whereas, The General Rules of our church, and the moral code of the New Testament condemn, by fair implication, the manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors to be used as a beverage; And whereas, The College of Bishops, with entire unanimity, holds the opinion that the existing law is all-sufficient for the arraignment and expulsion of such offenders; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the existing law is sufficient, and that we need no further legislation on the question.

W. A. MCCARTY.
J. J. WHEAT.
F. A. CONNOR.

J. E. Edwards moved the adoption of the second minority report.

On motion of F. M. Kennedy the order of the day was suspended until this subject be disposed of.

The report of the committee on the protection of missionaries in Mexico was presented by J. B. McFerrin, chairman. It was read and adopted.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE IN REFERENCE TO THE PROTECTION OF MISSIONARIES IN MEXICO.

Whereas, This General Conference has heard, with profound sorrow, of the murder of the Rev. John Stephens, a missionary of the American Board in Mexico, who fell a martyr at his post, with his Bible in his hand; and also of the murder, at the same time, of Don Jesus Islas, a convert to Protestantism; And whereas, We have deep interest in the work and welfare of all laborers in the Master's vineyard in foreign lands; therefore,

Resolved, That we deplore this sad event, and protest, in the most emphatic manner, against this appalling evidence of religious intolerance.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the American Board and all concerned in this cruel and unprovoked assault upon their rights and religious privileges, and the martyrdom of their devoted missionary.

Resolved, That we respectfully call the attention of the authorities of the United States of America and the authorities of Mexico to this disregard of the rights and privileges of American citizens.

Resolved, That we recommend to the book editor and agent to publish, in tract form, the graphic account of martyrdom of the Rev. John Stephens and his fellow-victim, as written by Feilpo de J. Pedrosa, of the city of Quadalahara, and published in the secular papers of Mexico, and republished in the columns of the Daily Christian Advocate.

On motion of J. E. Evans report No. 6 of the committee on missions, embracing the constitution, was adopted.

R. J. Morgan moved that a secretary and Board of Missions be elected this afternoon at four o'clock.

H. H. Montgomery moved, as a substitute, that it may be the order of the day for to-morrow at ten o'clock A. M.

The substitute was lost. The motion prevailed.

P. Tuggle called for the previous question. The call was sustained.

The vote was taken on the substitute moved by J. E. Edwards, and it was lost.

The vote was then taken on the first report of the minority, which was adopted by a vote of 135 to 38, being more than the two-thirds necessary for the change of one of the General Rules.

On motion of J. E. Evans the secretary was instructed to send the resolution around to the Annual Conferences for their action.

The following communication from the Bishops was read by the secretary:

The College of Bishops respectfully report to the General Conference the result of a vote of the Annual Conferences on a constitutional question that was submitted to them.

The committee on episcopacy of the General Conference which met in Memphis, May, 1870, introduced the following:

Resolved, That the last paragraph on page 44 of the Discipline, beginning with "provided," and ending with the words "null and void," be stricken out.

Resolved, That the following proviso, if it receive a two-thirds majority of this body, be sent round to the several Annual Conferences; and if it receive a three-fourths vote of the same, it shall be inserted in the Discipline in lieu of the aforesaid paragraph:

"Provided, That when any rule or regulation is adopted by the General Conference which, in the opinion of the Bishops, is unconstitutional, the Bishops may present to the Conference which passed said rule or regulation their objections thereto, with their reasons, in writing; and if then the General Conference shall, by a two-thirds vote, adhere to its action on said rule or regulation, it shall then take the course prescribed for altering a restrictive rule, and, if thus passed upon affirmatively, the Bishops shall announce that such rule or regulation takes effect from that time."

These resolutions were adopted by the General Conference—160 yeas, 4 nays.

The resolutions were submitted by us to the several Annual Conferences next ensuing, and they were concurred in by an aggregate vote of 2,024 yeas to 9 nays.

The College of Bishops, at their annual meeting in May, 1871, called in the book agent and book editor to count the vote, and thereupon publication was made accordingly.

On motion of J. S. Key a committee of five was appointed to nominate the eleven managers.

The chair appointed the following as that committee: Thomas O. Summers, A. H. Redford, William Burr, J. M. Sharpe and R. A. Young.

On motion of E. W. Sehon, Thomas O. Summers was elected president.

On motion of W. C. Johnson, E. W. Sehon was elected vice president.

On motion of M. S. Andrews, A. H. Redford was elected treasurer.

The ballot was then taken for secretary, and resulted as follows:

J. B. McFerrin received 83 votes; W. G. E. Cunnyngham, 20; T. M. Finney, 11; W. H. Potter, 19; A. G. Haygood, 3; J. S. Martin, 7; E. H. Myers, 5; I. G. John, 5; W. G. Connor, 5; E. W. Sehon, 5; R. A. A motion of M. S. Andrews to adjourn did not prevail.

The reports of the committees on fraternal greetings of the British Conference and the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was made the order of the day for to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

The Conference then adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by the Bishop.

Divine service was conducted by B. Craven.

Thomas O. Summers and A. H. Redford asked to be excused from serving on the committee of nomination of managers of the Board of Missions. They were excused, and W. M. Rush and B. Craven were put in their place.

J. B. McFerrin asked and obtained leave of absence to visit F. E. Pitts, a delegate from the Tennessee Conference, who was lying very sick at Anchorage.

Bishop Marvin took the chair.

W. C. Johnson, chairman of the committee on books and periodicals, presented report No. 9 of said committee, which was read.

Pending the discussion of the amendment the order of the day arrived.

J. Hamilton, chairman of the committee on the fraternal communication of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, presented the report of said committee, which was read by the secretary. (See report on first page.)

The report was adopted by a unanimous vote, and on motion of W. M. Rush a copy was ordered to be forwarded to the president of the Wesleyan Conference through the senior Bishop by the secretary.

C. W. Miller, from the committee on fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church, presented and read the report of said committee. (See report on first page.)

E. E. Wiley moved the adoption of the report.

Dr. S. Regester then rose and offered the following substitute:

SUBSTITUTE FOR THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON FRATERNAL GREETINGS OF THE M. E. CHURCH.

Whereas, After a period of thirty years of strife and estrangement between the two great co-ordinate branches of American Methodism, this General Conference has, in the good providence of God, been favored with the presence of fraternal messengers from the Methodist Episcopal Church; And whereas, We hail this auspicious event as the dawn of an epoch that must happily witness the cessation of every difference and bitterness between those who have so much in common; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the General Conference of the M. E. Church, That we are profoundly grateful to almighty God for the presence, addresses and Christian spirit of our brethren, Rev. Drs. Hunt and Fowler, and General Fisk, the accredited fraternal messengers of the Methodist Episcopal Church; and we hereby assure them and those they represent that we most heartily reciprocate their kindly greetings.

Resolved, That it is our firm persuasion and our decided judgment that the godly wisdom and Christian spirit of the two Methodisms in question, acting under the guidance of the Spirit of God, are fully equal to the delicate and difficult task of satisfactorily adjusting all matters, of whatever sort, that are in issue between the two kindred bodies.

Resolved, That as the spiritual unity and doctrinal identity of our common Methodism have been preserved unbroken amidst all our difficulties and alienations, it would be a reproach to our Christian character if the gracious and brotherly spirit now actuating thousands of hearts in both churches shall prove unproductive of any fair to develop some sound and just and mutually honorable principle and ground of permanent fraternal relations.

Resolved, That we will, as far as consistency and opportunity may allow and justify, promote this most desirable consummation by our personal dispositions and acts; and that we furthermore thus officially declare our perfect willingness to recognize any competent commission that may be instituted for the final settlement of all mere business matters and questions, and that we will most cheerfully treat with such commission.

Resolved, That our Bishops be and they are hereby authorized, at any time that circumstances may require such action, to appoint commissioners to co-operate with any that may be appointed on the part of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to act as arbitrators for the settlement of all ecclesiastical and business questions between us and the Methodist Episcopal Church; and our Bishops are further hereby authorized to appoint fraternal messengers to the approaching General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

SAMUEL REGESTER.
N. G. COE.

Religious exercises were conducted by A. R. Winfield.

On motion of J. C. Grumbery the book agent and book editor were instructed to prepare and publish church registers for the use of our churches.

An invitation was received from the president and directors of the German Protestant Asylum to visit that institution, and it was accepted.

Dr. Hamilton desired to amend the substitute, but that being out of order he asked the chair how he could reach his end.

The chair decided that he could only do so by a withdrawal of the substitute. This was not done.

Dr. Evans spoke in favor of the report. The issues of the past could not be ignored, and the report presented the facts of history in their consecutive order; it was perfect in all its parts, meeting the move toward fraternity, and providing for a settlement of past difficulties.

W. G. Veal spoke in favor of the report of the committee. He appreciated all that had been said by Dr. Regester, but was not willing to cower like a cur beneath his master's lash.

A motion of T. Branch and A. W. Wilson to refer the report and the substitute to a special committee, consisting of S. Regester, J. Jackson, J. A. Duncan, J. Hamilton and T. Polk, was on motion of H. J. Adams laid on the table.

W. W. Bennett moved to recommit the report with the substitute to the committee.

A resolution of E. E. Wiley to lay this on the table did not prevail.

The motion of W. W. Bennett was adopted, and, on motion of T. Branch, S. Regester, J. Hamilton and J. A. Duncan were added to the committee.

The balloting for secretary of the Board of Missions was then resumed.

There were 175 votes cast, of which J. B. McFerrin received 100; W. H. Potter, 28; W. G. E. Cunnyngham, 24; A. G. Haygood, 5; T. M. Finney, 4; R. A. Young, 2; J. S. Martin, 2; R. H. Rivers, J. E. Edwards, E. W. Sehon and L. S. Burkhead, 1 each.

J. B. McFerrin, having received more than a majority, was declared duly elected secretary of the Board of Missions.

Whereas, This General Conference has heard with emotions of sorrow of the death of one of its members, the Rev. Fountain E. Pitts, a delegate from the Tennessee Conference, which sad event took place at Anchorage last evening, Friday, May 22; therefore,

Resolved, That the members of this Conference are profoundly affected by the intelligence of the death of one of its members, the Rev. Fountain E. Pitts.

Resolved, That they rejoice to learn that the life of our deceased brother, which was crowded with so many and successful labors, was crowned with a triumphant end.

Resolved, That they will in a body attend the obsequies of Bro. Pitts, at the Walnut Street church, this afternoon at three o'clock, the service to be conducted under the direction of the committee on public worship.

Resolved, That the Conference sincerely sympathizes with the stricken widow and other relatives and friends of our deceased brother.

Resolved, That J. B. McFerrin, J. W. Hanner, R. P. Ransom and A. R. ALEXANDER, Chairman.
W. M. LEFTWICH, Sec.

By a suspension of the rule report No. 1 of the committee on finance was taken up. Mr. Brown, chairman of the committee, urged its adoption.

On motion of W. F. Cook the report was amended by striking out a clause referring to the taking up of collections by ministers, and as thus amended the report was adopted.

The report of the special committee to whom was recommitted the report of the committee on fraternal greetings, presented yesterday with the substitute, was presented and read.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE TO WHOM WAS RECOMMITTED THE REPORT ON FRATERNAL GREETINGS WITH THE M. E. CHURCH.

Your committee find themselves confronted with two questions—one in respect to fraternal greetings, and another in respect to certain practical issues now existing between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church South. We recommend such readjustment of the items of the original report as will place each item under its proper question.

J. Hamilton, S. Regester and J. E. Ryland, from the committee, presented a minority report as a substitute for the report of the majority, which was read, and its adoption moved as a substitute for the majority report. (For report see sixth page.)

After a lengthy debate T. M. Merlwether called for the previous question. The call was sustained.

General Conference Notes.

The last two days of the session were busy days. The speaking was generally brief, and many reports were acted on without the infliction of even "a word" or "an explanation." The motion to lay on the table, the previous question and indefinite postponement were used freely, and where the subject required more time and investigation it was very prudently postponed.

The pastoral address of the Bishops was read on Monday. It appears in this issue of the ADVOCATE, and our readers will judge of it for themselves. It is an admirable document, the topics are well chosen, and they are presented with clearness and strength. The address was ordered by resolution to be put, as an appendix, into the new edition of the Discipline, and the pastors are directed to read it to all of our congregations. This indicates the estimate put upon the address by the General Conference. The most interesting event of the last day was the reception and reading of a farewell letter from Dr. Lovick Pierce. It is as follows:

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference:

BELOVED BRETHREN—By the good providence of God I have been enabled to attend this the fifteenth General Conference, and here closes my membership in this grand council of Methodism.

My salutatory was lean of anything but heart, and my valedictory I would not present if it was not all heart. Our parting feelings, in as far as future General Conferences are concerned, are very different. You see other General Conferences coming this side your grave, while I see my grave coming in between this and 1878. I have, however, endeavored to serve my generation by the will of God, and now I resign all to those who are to come after me. I came here hoping to effect some changes in our practical itinerant pastorate, and in the enforcement of discipline. These I intended as my memorials in the ninetieth year of my life. They have all perished on the coast of a perilous travel. Of course my friends believed it wiser to kill off these projections of mine than to adopt them. So I go home disappointed—go with convictions deep-seated as ever. The necessity for these changes is only a question of time. You have overpaid me in loving kindnesses, and all I could ever desire is to feel that I deserve them, not because I have lived a long time, but because I have labored a great deal—once with marked success; of late years with much less visible results. I was, in the best Methodist sense of it, an effective preacher for sixty-seven years, which Dr. Punshon, of England, said in my room in Columbus, March, 1873, was the longest effective history among Methodist preachers. I ask you to give thanks to God for all his mercies bestowed on me, and pray for my safe arrival home and in heaven. I am too feeble to ascend the stairs again. A loving farewell.

L. PIERCE.

LOUISVILLE, May 26, 1874.

The communication was received by the General Conference standing, and every word was listened to with the profoundest attention. As the reading was concluded, the following appropriate verse was sung:

Together let us sweetly live,
Together let us die,
And each a starry crown receive,
And reign above the sky.

Drs. Sehon and Sargent expressed the deep emotions that stirred all hearts in a few brief but eloquent words, and Bishop Paine led in a prayer of great power and unction. Altogether it was an impressive scene, and to be remembered while life shall last. Bishop Pierce was in the chair, and in an appropriate manner gave utterance to his own filial affection, while he expressed his appreciation of the reverence and honor in which his venerable father was held by the General Conference. The expressions of disappointment in Dr. Pierce's communication would doubtless have been qualified or left out had he anticipated the action which was had on certain subjects proposed by him. The report embracing these measures was adopted but a few hours before the adjournment, and in a manner most gratifying and satisfactory to himself. Although confined to his lodgings by physical prostration, he declared that it had been the happiest day of his life.

At about two o'clock P. M. on Tuesday, May 26, the minutes of the morning were read, a hymn was sung, Bishop Paine pronounced the benediction, and the seventh session of our General Conference was ended. We have already noted some of the things done. The tone of the Conference was eminently conservative, and the measures adopted will, we trust, all conduce to the welfare of the church. The good people of Louisville are entitled to the hearty thanks which the Conference gave them for a large and considerate hospitality. The city authorities, the press and the people all contributed to the comfort and entertainment of the delegates. The pastors of our churches, and the laymen who acted with them in receiving the Conference, and attending to the many troublesome details of the occasion, are deserving of the highest praise. Dr. Sehon, as chairman of the committee on public worship, and as general supervisor of provisions and arrangements, had his hands full. He had a task most delicate and perplexing, but he was equal to the occasion, and we never saw him, amidst many trying passages, out of temper or for a moment divested of the sunshine which is so natural to him.

The Christian courtesy of the various sister churches was such as became the gospel of Christ. Bating the Anglican and Roman communions, there was the completest fellowship, and Louisville and the neighboring cities were for the month of May resolved into an evangelical alliance. The effect, in this respect, of drawing Christian churches nearer to each other will be lasting. For the rest we have not now space to enlarge. Our readers are indebted to the Daily Advocate for the proceedings which we have furnished them. The book agent and Dr. Summers, and Dr. Summers, Jr., deserve well of the whole church for the very creditable manner in which the Daily was brought out.

Pastoral Address of the Bishops.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Greeting:

DEAR BRETHREN—We have been requested by the General Conference, now in session, to present to you, in their behalf, a pastoral address. In compliance with this request, and in discharge of this duty, we salute you in the name of our common Lord, and in the words of the great apostle to the Gentiles: "Grace to you, and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ."

We render devout thanks to almighty God for the signal displays of his grace to us as a church during the past four years, in the enlargement of our coast, in the increase of our members, in our material prosperity, and in that agreement in the faith, that unity in the Spirit, and in that harmony and tranquillity which have everywhere pervaded our Zion. Extensive revivals of religion have crowned the labors of our preachers; and the life-giving energy of the gospel, in the conversion of sinners and in the sanctification of believers, has been seldom more apparent among us than during that period.

In these facts we have abundant evidence of the continued power and presence of the Holy Ghost in our ministrations, and that the boon of Wesleyan Methodism, as we received it from our fathers, has not been forfeited in our hands. Regarding it as the purest existing type of Christianity, and as a priceless heritage of doctrine and discipline committed to our keeping, we rejoice to believe that we retain it in all its essential features.

In this gratifying review, however, we find nothing to flatter our pride, but much to foster our humility, to awaken sentiments of repentance and to cherish purposes of amendment. Our piety, our self-sacrifice, our Christian enterprise have not been equal to our growth, much less to our standards and to our time-honored ecclesiastical landmarks. Fundamentally correct in our views of scriptural truth, and, in the main, commendably consistent in our conduct, we have departed, in some instances, from the simplicity of the gospel as we first received it. An inordinate love of the world, in the forms of wealth, of fashion and of amusement, has largely diffused itself among our people, and corrupted their spiritual integrity. The peculiar institutions and usages of Methodism have been frequently neglected or abandoned, and a relaxation of wholesome discipline has diminished our strength and impaired our testimony against the vices of the age in which we live.

To these tendencies, to which we are perpetually exposed by the pressure of the world, the flesh and the devil, and to these actual departures from "the old paths," we earnestly call your prayerful attention. In these respects we have encouraging reasons to believe that there is life enough in the church and a sufficiently high consciousness of the divine destiny of Methodism to induce a return to its unalterable requisitions, and a maintenance of its distinctive character before the world.

We have been instructed by the General Conference to urge upon your consideration several subjects of grave importance, especially at the present time. Without, therefore, encumbering this address any further with our own suggestions, we proceed to occupy its remaining portion with remarks upon those topics which have been referred to us.

1. It cannot be disguised that family religion has been sadly neglected in many of the households of our people. Our own observations confirm the too general complaint on this subject. The duty of offering the morning and evening sacrifice of prayer and praise upon the family altar has not only the sanction of scriptural authority, of the constitution of the domestic relations and of the practice of the Christian church in all ages, but it has been uniformly recognized and enjoined by Methodist economy as an indispensable exponent of consecration to God, and a rich and influential means of grace. It is hallowing in its effects upon parents, children and servants; enduring in its results; and it transmits to posterity, by the agency of the family organization, the legacy of the faith and the habits and associations of genuine piety. It transforms the household into a church, replete with blessing and capable of indefinite succession. Such was God's original and unrepealed command in all the generations of Israel. Such is his ordained method of giving stability and currency to his cause in the earth, and such is the grand bequest which heads of families are required to leave to their legitimate successors in the spiritual Canaan.

2. In addition to the instituted means of grace, the Methodist Episcopal Church South is amply supplied with those which are denominated prudential; which, though they claim no express scriptural sanction, have been adopted and authorized by our church as eminently calculated to promote a growth in grace. Among these are the class meeting, the love-feast and the Church Conference.

With respect to the class meeting we have been requested by the present General Conference to define the action of the General Conference of 1866, which abolished that part of the then existing rule which made attendance a test of membership in the church. So far as it falls within our province to respond to this request, we reply that, while the penalty for neglect of class meeting was abrogated, the institution itself was left in full force to stand upon its merits and its history, and is obligatory upon every member of the church. And we take occasion to add that, apart from the divinely appointed means of grace, no institution among us is so conducive to the Christian life; and we exhort our members not to forsake the assembling of themselves together in this capacity.

The love-feast is so precious a peculiarity of Methodism, so interwoven with its happiest memories, so full of gracious resources, and so generally recognized in these aspects that we deem it unnecessary to enforce its observance with very special formality, except to say that the Methodist Episcopal Church South cannot afford to dispense with so valuable a portion of her inheritance as the class meeting and the love-feast.

The Church Conference was, in our judgment, wisely conceived. Judiciously managed, it subserves a most useful purpose in our administration by distributing its duties among the membership, perfecting its operations by detail, eliciting their efforts, and awakening their interests in church affairs and benevolent enterprises. Properly conducted and zealously enforced, it cannot fail to impart compactness and completeness to our system, and largely to develop the social power of the church for good. We therefore enjoin the regular and perseveling observance of it upon our pastors and people.

3. An explicit utterance was given, by order of the last General Conference, in our pastoral address, on the subject of worldly amusements. We now repeat that utterance. We abate none of its teachings, with respect either to the manifest inconsistency of such indulgences with the spirit and profession of the gospel or the peril which they bring to the souls of men. Their multiplied and insidious forms are a source of perpetual temptation and damage, and are denounced by the word of God and by that part of our General Rules which forbids "the taking of such diversions as cannot be taken in the name of the Lord Jesus." This denunciation is explicit and comprehensive. "The name of the Lord Jesus," in this connection, is a decisive test, and we are content to leave the issue to its sovereign arbitrament. Among those indulgences which cannot stand this solemn test is the modern dance, both in its private and public exhibitions, as utterly opposed to the genius of Christianity as taught by us. When persisted in it is a justifiable ground of judicial action by the church authorities.

4. The mild but firm administration of discipline is an integral and essential part of our economy. The purity and integrity of the body of Christ must be preserved at all hazards, so that neither heresy in doctrine nor corruptness in life be tolerated for a moment, lest they increase unto more ungodliness. There is a growing tendency, we fear, in this direction, and we take the liberty of speaking a seasonable word on this behalf. Our legislation is sufficient on this subject. It only remains that its processes be faithfully followed, according to the provisions of our Discipline, by those intrusted with its execution. A solemn responsibility rests upon the respective authorities of the church to see that its sanctity be fully maintained. But we would remark that our laws are not inexorable, and that no process should be served without taking all the preliminary measures to secure the amendment of offenders. Herein consists the safety and the force of their execution. The times imperatively demand that the moral effect of Christian discipline should vindicate itself against those loose ideas which merge disciplinary distinctions into a mere time-serving policy.

5. Congregational singing, as contrasted with what are called operatic performances, has been brought to our notice by the General Conference. Abuses have undoubtedly been introduced into this branch of worship among us. The extraordinary cultivation of musical science in our day, and its fascinating influence upon the esthetic elements of human nature, have precipitated a crisis upon the order and simplicity of Christian worship. In this particular, alike subversive of its inspiration and its edification. We are not wise enough to dictate the precise limitations of improvement in sacred song, but we do not hesitate to say that no music should be introduced into public worship that is not decidedly devotional; that no tunes should be sung to hymns announced by our preachers in which the congregation cannot participate, and that the pastors of our churches, in virtue of their office, have general supervision of this as well as of any other department of public service. We give it also as our judgment that, whenever instrumental music is practiced in our congregations, preludes and interludes should be avoided, since they intermit the singing, and they consume the time allotted to the service.

6. The last topic referred to us was the injunction of private prayer, fasting and reading of the Holy Scriptures upon our members. So obvious and so essential are these duties, as the conditions of experimental godliness, and coming so entirely within the sphere of pastoral instruction, that no specific deliverance is demanded of us. There can be no healthy, no robust type of piety without their observance. We remit them, therefore, to the enlightened understanding of the church, not doubting that they commend themselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God.

And now, beloved brethren, we "commend you to God and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up and to give you an inheritance among all them that are sanctified." And may "we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ; that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; but, speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ, from whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

MONDAY, May 25, 1874.

Conference met at the stated hour, Bishop McTyeire in the chair.

Divine service was conducted by S. W. Moore.

The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

The committee on introductions brought forward the Rev. Alexander Clark, editor of the Methodist Recorder, the organ of the Methodist Church, who was introduced to the Conference. He spoke as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT AND BRETHREN: This unexpected honor I accept as conferred upon the minor Methodism which I represent. In this busy closing hour your hearts are beating homeward, and I dare not intrude upon your patience. But your characteristic charity may permit a simple statement touching our church and its purposes.

In 1858 the Northern and Western Conferences of the Methodist Protestant Church, about twenty in number, by conventional action agreed to suspend ecclesiastical relations with the Southern Conferences until such time as unity of sentiment and co-operation of agencies might again be possible. Secular troubles, dark, mighty and unmanageable, threatened our denominational destruction. It was a sad day to our people, North and South. Subsequent events still more disastrously separated the now unsettled little band of lay representative Methodists, until the intervening years largely obscured the prospects of the once united and happy household of a common faith. But method was becoming Methodists even in the inevitable processes of separation. Like your plan of 1844, our plan of 1858 was one of mutual honor and wrought out in the interest of peace. A division was made of the publication interests and of property claims, which has been faithfully observed by both parties until this day. During these years, when the rough world has had its way, these two organizations, once identical, have operated independently of each other, observing fraternal intercourse all the while, and each aiming to occupy its own territory and to prosecute its own legitimate work. The authorities have discouraged any interlapping of lines, lest they might not fall in pleasant places. Here and there, however, local friction has arisen from some violation of this plan, and consequent disquiet has followed. These irregularities have been exceptional. The two churches are too nearly alike to occupy the same ground under different names. Our two branches have been at peace, and have done equal honor, so far as opportunity offered, to the principles espoused by the fathers in 1828, in Baltimore, viz.: the rights of the laity to a participation in the councils of the church. We are all the more assured, sir, that this principle was right at the beginning, and now and forever, seeing that, within a few years past, the two great Episcopal Methodisms of this country have recognized laymen as necessary integral parts of their highest courts. Upon your own floor the voices of eloquent laymen from that same Baltimore, and from St. Louis, of the new West, and from the Chesapeake to the Golden Gate, have been heard with profound attention. I am especially happy, sir, to see such a large proportion of these practical business men mingling in your deliberations. You have given us courage and strength by your manly Methodism. You are quite in advance of your Northern brethren of the other church, for they allow lay representation in mere homeopathic application. We take your whole warm right hand to the very pulse on this question, and are made strong by the grasp. You honor your superintendents all the more by thus honoring the Methodistic free-will which votes. It seems eminently proper that Arminianism which votes into everlasting life, should have suffrage in the affairs of the probation. We hail you as brethren beloved, indeed, in this liberty of the sons of God.

During the years of suspension the northern wing of the Methodist Protestant Church formed a partial union with the American Wesleyan connection, in the interest of which compact our people consented to cancel the word "Protestant," forming a new body on a purely Methodistic basis, as was hoped. Hence our somewhat nameless name! But I am sure that no wrong ambition suggested this generic appellation by which we are in danger of being obscured altogether. It is the result of a compromise in outward forms, with a view to magnify the Spirit which giveth life.

We have no Bishops particularly, because our pastors are all Bishops. We have no special presiding elders, although any elder may preside at an Annual Conference. Our last General Conference elected a layman, Hon. F. H. Pierpont, of West Virginia, as its presiding officer, and he graced the position with almost an episcopal dignity.

Our people number about sixty-five thousand, and the Methodist Protestants a little less. Although organically distinct, we feel that our history runs in one current, with ripple and eddy here and there, to be sure, but one in volume and forward evermore. At the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church in Lynchburg, from which I am now on my way home to Pittsburg, the question of closer union was discussed in the spirit of Christ, and nine commissioners were elected to meet similar commissioners from the Methodist Church, and yours as well, if you so desire, with a view to canvass the situation, and if the way be clear to propose definite plans for nearer relationship, subject, of course, to ratification by the people. The discussion elicited much of that enthusiasm and sympathy so beautiful in the experience of old-time Methodism. The utterances were those of zeal and consecration.

We have a valuable Publishing House in Pittsburg, from whence issue our Weekly Methodist Recorder, and our Morning Guide, semi-monthly, Discipline, hymn-books, Non-Episcopal Methodism, and other denominational works; while the Methodist Protestant, the organ of the other branch, is published in Baltimore, together with other literature of value. At Adrian, Michigan, our people have a college of ample proportions and flourishing management, with a faculty equal to that of any institution of learning in the West. Our Methodist Protestant brethren have an excellent college also in Maryland. We are training men, as you are, for the work of the ministry. We glory in your superior facilities in this direction, and rejoice in your great university at Nashville, a fit monument to stand beside your magnificent Publishing House, overlooking the Cumberland. May you have perpetual Summers there and thereabout.

We have nothing of which to boast in the way of missions abroad; for the present our foreign missionary contributions are subject to whatever agency most eloquently pleads for them in our churches and homes; come and try it. We are doing as well as our neighbors, if like means, for the frontier work westward to the Pacific, and in other waste places. Let me urge California as a field for your largest generosity. I am glad to know that your standard is planted by the sunset sea. Your Fitzgerald was my personal friend in that land of promise.

As a people we have no hobbies to ride, and no crusades except against sin. And in this our noble women are actively engaged. Doctrinally we are a unit in the ancient and ample Wesleyan faith, free and full salvation forever. We do not protest so much as we affirm, believing the gospel of the Son of God to be the grandest affirmation under the sun. The words of truth are glad words of great joy. We believe in the all-conquering power of this gospel. And to all your labors of love, to your unity, your consecration, your victories, we respond: Amen! God has given you a goodly heritage, where flowers come early and frost touches but gently. You have a royal life, and a strong right arm for conquest. Your banner is our banner, and it is the banner of love. Angels and archangels move under its folds. Hold bravely forward, brethren, and the gates of the city shall be lifted for your entrance and ours.

We raise no quarrels over syllables. We risk nothing on a man's brogue. We raise no tests of membership save on the basis of the New Testament. That covers the ground of our questioning and vigilance. Our Book of Discipline grows "smaller by degrees and beautifully less" at every General Conference. The Bible comes nearer and shines with renewed beauty every day. We have no professional heresy-hunters to swing full-hearted men on gibbets, or raise the dust of panic in any of our invasions into the hosts of sin. I feel the atmosphere of your Methodistic spirit. Planted first on the lowlands of Georgia, by the hand of Wesley himself, it has grown up sound in stock, beautiful in foliage, rich in fruit. May the harvest wave from the eastern to the western sea.

The other day, on my way to the Natural Bridge, in Virginia, an ex-Confederate soldier, whom I chanced to meet on the packet, kindly volunteered, if I would go by his home near Lexington, to give me his company and his carriage for fourteen miles across the country to the very spot. His hospitality was as open as the sunny Southern day itself. It was a glorious drive. Everywhere the eye was delighted with quiet field or distant mountain or lovely green valley in the fresh arrayal of summer. And, sir, at mid-day, with both my eyes wide open, my friend drove me clear over the Natural Bridge, from one end to the other, without my knowing it. I was looking for an awful chasm, and expecting a nervous thrill. My look was too far forward. I was trying to match my pitiful ideal with some remote object. How utterly mistaken! The foliage of the trees was so dense along the verges, the masonry of the Almighty so delicately concealed, the songs of the birds so bewitching, that the bridge itself, massive and mountainous when seen from the water below, was unobserved by the stranger looking for it in vain while actually borne by it across the deep ravine.

God has built another bridge. It spans a chasm deeper than that of Cedar creek, in Virginia. But this structure, built on the Rock of Ages, is solider and safer than any platform which human hands can rear. The adjustments are eternal. The arch is royal and divine. It reaches from mountain to mountain, and along its firm floor lies the highway of holiness. All the deep alienations of the secular and social worlds are compassed over by this wonderful bridge. Upon its solid ground you have seen, since this Conference began, the feet of the messengers. We were afraid of the gulf, and lo! it is spanned, and we are face to face in Christ Jesus unawares. Blessed be God! We can never reconstruct a divided heritage by our puny efforts at legislation. Law cannot reach here, but love can. Congress cannot reconcile alienated hearts, but Jesus Christ can, and he will! In this way angels pass to and fro, as from Bethel to paradise. As from Bethel, may we look toward you of the larger and sunnier land. In some sweet summer noon, when leaves are at their full, and flowers bend over the grave's dark bruk, hiding its depth—when the skies are radiant with welcomes—we shall meet and greet again. God's dear hand shall lead us on. And in the surprise of our overjoy we shall not understand it at all. But over all our griefs and sorrows God shall lead us on. We shall all be on one side by and by, and forever one in name, one in glory, one in Christ our Lord.

I thank you for your patience and your sympathies. I left a sick-room to be here, and should in justice be in that retirement now rather than on this platform. May your unity and peace still more abound, and may your achievements for Christ be multiplied an hundred-fold.

Bishop McTyeire said—This Conference has heard you with evident pleasure. One of the Methodist family, we feel the touch of grace that makes us all akin. We rejoice at the indications of prosperity in the churches you represent; for, under whatever form of government, Methodism shows a front of sound doctrine. Wherever it prevails, so far in our history, gospel truth prevails.

From your remarks we infer that if you do not bear some official message to this body from our brethren, lately met at Lynchburg, you indicate the coming of one.

(Here Dr. Clark remarked that he had no such official message. The Methodist Protestants who met at Lynchburg would speak for themselves.)

The chair—Whatever opportunity occurs of cultivating friendly relations, and even fraternal, with them and you, will be most respectfully treated. You allude to lay representation. The body before you is a fact in that line. In adopting lay representation we took no half measures. Rather, it was exactly a half-and-half measure; for this, the only law-making body of the church, is made up of an equal number of ministers and laymen. Christians may not be proud of anything, but to you and your people a large degree of self-complacence is allowable. You were before us in lay delegation. You set the example in American Methodism. We like it well. The experiment has been entirely satisfactory. The spirit of self-sacrifice is among our laymen. They love the church and labor for it. Here are chancellors who have adjourned their courts to be in their places, lawyers who have left their offices, bankers their banks, farmers their fields at seed-time, merchants their stores—professors have obtained a furlough. And these laymen are not only attentive, but we find them safe counselors. They are the most conservative element of our ecclesiastical bodies.

Allow me to say that some of our Methodist Protestant brethren in the South are so well pleased with our platform they have ceased to protest. They stand with us—one in form, as in spirit. Our ministry and membership has been enriched as well as enlarged by this addition. Some of our best presiding elders were once of the Methodist Protestants. Their main principle, they think, has been gained and secured in our present constitution. But there are those of them who still adhere to their separate organization; they believe that is distinct ground for them to stand on; that they represent a principle, and must bear testimony for it. There is no quarrel between us and them; we dwell in peace.

Accept, brother, our assurances of good will and spiritual fellowship. To you and your people we wish peace and great prosperity in extending the kingdom of Christ. We thank you for your kind sentiments, and we heartily reciprocate them.

A GENEROUS ACT.—Messrs. Billings, Clapp & Co., of No. 34 Oliver street, Boston, manufacturing chemists, who have been always ready to pay their bills at maturity, have been kind enough to favor us with a check in payment of their indebtedness several months in advance of maturity, and, alluding to the deviation from their usual custom, they assign a reason expressive of their sympathy for our suffering condition, which we take the liberty, without their consent, to insert. It is the following: "We are very glad to make an exception at this time, and inclose a check, presuming the calamity in your State has materially retarded collections, and advance payments would be unusually acceptable." They may be assured that their generous thoughtfulness is timely, and is gratefully appreciated. It is scarcely necessary to inform the reader that the firm above mentioned has but few equals in any line of business. The above expression is in keeping with the character of the gentlemen composing the noble copartnership of Billings, Clapp & Co.

LIVERPOOL AND NEW ORLEANS.—One of the most encouraging means of advancing direct trade, increasing European intercourse and facilitating emigration is the line of magnificent steamships called the State Line, to ply regularly between this city and Liverpool. When the steamers now building are finished they will have on the line nine staunch and noble vessels, and are offering passage at such surprisingly cheap rates that persons of limited means may enjoy the luxury of a trip to Europe. For information call upon or address Messrs. A. K. Miller & Co., agents, No. 29 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

PIANOS AT $10 PER MONTH.—Mr. P. Werlein, 78, 80, 82 and 90 Barenne street, widely known throughout the country, is selling Chickering's, Hale's, Dunham's and Pleyel's pianos on easy terms. He advertises to sell pianos, ranging in price from $350 to $600, and arrange for payments at $21 per month, and to sell second-hand instruments, ranging from $40 to $250 in price, on monthly payments of $10. Mr. Werlein has added largely to his stock of sheet music out of the Blackmar stock; also keeps on sale organs of several manufacturers, and band and string instruments.

FIRE INSURANCE.—The twenty-fifth annual statement of the Crescent Mutual Fire Insurance Company will be found in our columns this issue. Few companies have a better reputation than the Crescent. The names of the men who compose the board of trustees are a guarantee for faithful and judicious management, and no two gentlemen in the range of our knowledge are more highly or more justly esteemed than the worthy president and secretary of the above-named company.

OCEAN SPRINGS HOTEL.—We learn with unqualified pleasure that Mr. J. P. Longley takes charge of the large, commodious and delightfully-arranged hotel buildings at Ocean Springs. We are assured by those who know Mr. Longley that the hotel could not have fallen into better hands. Our experience is that Ocean Springs, for healthful breezes, exhilarating baths and delicious fish, is not surpassed by any watering-place, North or South.

A CHANCE TO MAKE MONEY.—Gather moss, save the hides of your slaughtered animals and the wool from your sheep, and ship to Mr. J. B. Wilkinson, Jr., No. 29 Peters street and 4 Clinton street, New Orleans. Mr Wilkinson is engaged in the general commission business, and is able to make liberal advances on cotton and sugar, and is ready to devote his services to purchasing family or plantation supplies.

GENERAL TRANSATLANTIC COMPANY.—We direct attention to the mail steamship line to France, from New York to Havre, touching at Brest, advertised elsewhere in these columns. L Grand, Esq., at room H, Galilee court, New Orleans, is the agent, from whom may be obtained all necessary information regarding the movements of the line.

COTTON GINS.—Our cotton planters throughout the South are familiar with Daniel Pratt's improved cotton gins. They are too well known and too highly appreciated to need any commendation from us. We call attention to the advertisement of the general agents, Messrs. Joseph B. Wolfe & Co., No. 59 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

SAVE YOUR CLOTHES.—These hard times it is encouraging to think that at a trifling expense we may have our old clothes cleaned and renovated, and made to look as fresh as new, at the Louisiana dyeing and scouring establishment of Mr. J. Cecle, 228 Canal street. See advertisement.

GREAT BARGAINS are assured by Messrs. H. B. Stevens & Co., corner of St. Charles and Common streets, who offer their stock, fixtures and furnishing goods at forced prices. They have a truly fine stock, which they say must be sold. See their card elsewhere.

LIFE INSURANCE.—We direct the attention of our readers to the American Life Insurance Company of Philadelphia, under the efficient agency of Colonel John D. Scott, general Southern agent and manager, No. 10 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

PUBLIC BATHS.—Mr. Jacob Klock keeps time with the season by announcing his establishment for public baths and Russian vapor baths, at 102 Conti street, between Bourbon and Dauphine streets. He deserves encouragement.

WE WOULD again call the attention of our readers, and especially those who are interested in machinery, to the advertisement of Messrs. Poole & Hunt, so widely and favorably known as engineers, founders and machinists. Ever determined to be among the first in the march of improvement, and to keep pace with the marvelous advance of the age in science and mechanics, this firm spares no expense in perfecting the working capacity and appliances of their splendid establishment. Their new pattern and price lists, with many valuable additions, are now ready for distribution, and will be sent, postage paid, to those who make application for them. They have also on hand an exceptionally large and comprehensive list of miscellaneous machinery patterns.

WHOLESALE GROCER.—Persons wishing to communicate with a wholesale grocer, commission merchant and dealer in Western produce will find in another column the card of our neighbor, James M. Dowling, successor to J. M. Johnston, No. 25 Decatur street, corner of Custom-house, New Orleans. We commend him to the attention of our readers.

WHENEVER you want to enjoy soup put into a plate of it a tablespoonful of Halford Leicestershire Table Sauce. You will not again taste soup unless you have the Sauce, if you can possibly get it. The saving holds good (try it once and be satisfied) of fish of all descriptions, and of meats. my23 4t

MESSRS. CRADDOCK & CO., 1032 RACE ST., PHILADELPHIA—Gentlemen: Please send me three bottles of Cannabis Indica. I have tried so much that I have lost all confidence in patent medicines, and would not have sent for your remedy, only I saw in your testimonials that of Robert Cox, in the case of Hadley Barker, with whom I am personally acquainted, and know that Mr. Barker was cured of CONSUMPTION over seven years ago, and is now well and hearty. I am also acquainted with Robert Cox, and feel that Cannabis ought to do as much for me as it did for Barker.

The thoroughness with which it cleanses, without irritating the bowels; the tone and vigor which it imparts to the stomach; its appetizing effects; its cooling, refreshing operation in fever; the relief it affords in headache; its anti-bilious properties, and its superior merits as a general corrective, justify the assertion that it is, beyond all comparison, the most valuable family medicine of the age. THE GREATEST

MEDICAL

DISCOVERY

OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, HAS discovered in one of our common pasture-weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,

FROM

The Worst Scrofula Down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunder-humor.) He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of Pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of Biles.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst Canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all Humor in the Eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the Ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running Ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the Skin.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of Rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure Salt Rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of Scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

ROXBURY, MASS.

DEAR MADAM: The reputation of the Medical Discovery in curing all kinds of Humors is so well established, by the unanimous voice of all who have ever used it, that I need not say anything on the subject, as the most skillful physicians and the most careful druggists in the country are unanimous in its praise.

In presenting the Medical Discovery to your notice, I do it with a full knowledge of its curative power in relieving all, and curing most of those diseases to which you are unfortunately so liable. That most excruciating disease to an affectionate mother,

Nursing Sore Mouth,

is cured as if by a miracle. Your own temper is restored to its natural sweetness, and your babe from short and fretful naps to calm and sweet slumbers; and the Medical Discovery becomes a fountain of blessing to your husband and household. In the more advanced stages of

Canker

it extends to the stomach, causing

Dyspepsia,

which is nothing but canker in the stomach; then to the intestines and

Kidneys,

creating a sinking, gone feeling, and an indifference even to the cares of your family. Your stomach is

Raw and Inflamed,

your food distresses you, and you can only take certain kinds, and even of that your system does not get half the nourishment it contains, as the acrimonious fluid of the canker eats it up; then your complexion loses its bloom and becomes sallow or greenish, and your best day is gone. For want of nourishment your system becomes loose and flabby, and the fibers of your body become relaxed. Then follow a train of diseases which the Medical Discovery is peculiarly adapted to

Cure:

Palpitation of the heart, pain in the side, weakness of the spine and small of the back, pain of the hip-joint when you retire, irregularity of the bowels, and also that most excruciating of diseases,

The Piles.

How many thousands of poor women are suffering from this disease and piling away a miserable life, and their next-door neighbor does not know the cause. I wish to impress on your mind that good old proverb: "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." In you have both the preventive and the cure, with this great and good quality: that it will never, under any circumstances, do you any injury.

No change of diet is ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one tablespoonful per day; children over ten years, dessertspoonful; children from five to eight years, teaspoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day. Yours truly, au1 1y DONALD KENNEDY.

THE TURKEY.

TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH OF MLLE. MONTGOLFIER, BY E. O. C.

See me decked out,
See me strut about—
Me who am fat and fine!
My plumage black,
Silken my back,
My crop of ruby shine!

Behold my head,
My crest so red:
Admire me round and round!
Just hear me sing;
Mark echo ring
With the majestic sound!

My beauteous tail!
Beside it, pale,
The sunshine glances near!
So gay and bright,
To dazzled sight
Am I not without peer?

My velvet plumes,
Like gorgeous blooms,
See how they trembling play!
To me give place
The while I pace
Triumphant on my way.

Report No. 1 of the Committee on Bible Cause.

In reference to the memorial of H. J. Adams, W. J. Scott, J. M. Beal and T. M. Meriwether, asking that it shall be made the duty of preachers in charge to see that a Bible-reading class be formed in each congregation for the purpose of reading, daily and consecutively, the Holy Scriptures, the following resolution was adopted:

That, while we approve of the daily and consecutive reading of the Holy Scriptures, and of earnest efforts of our pastors to induce all our people to use this means of growth in grace and in the knowledge of Christ, nevertheless we do not see the propriety of the proposed addition to the Discipline, and we recommend that the General Conference do not grant the request of the memorialists.

R. HINER, Chairman.

Adopted Wednesday afternoon, May 20, 1874.

Report No. 2 of the Committee on Bible Cause.

The phraseology of the resolution to appoint a committee on the subject of this report is so comprehensive, and so little of a definite character having been referred to said committee, they could only infer, from the ordinary signification of the language employed, the work you expected your committee to perform.

Following the leading suggestions of the resolution, your committee have considered the most important features of the manufacture and distribution of the sacred Scriptures.

Accepting Protestantism as our point of observation, the Bible does not only occupy an exalted position in the long and ever-extending catalogue of useful books, but also as the only attested and perfected system of truth revealed from God to man, and, furthermore, as necessarily underlying the formation of individual character, and the success of the church in accomplishing the work assigned her in the redemption of our fallen and guilty race. It is, therefore, no surprising thing that a grave body of Christian men, acting under the authority of Jesus Christ, the recognized Head of the church, and commissioned to go into all the world and teach the nations, all things commanded by him should, in solemn counsel assembled, give prominence to the inquiry as to how and where they may most conveniently obtain and most successfully distribute among all the people the word of life. Already it has been suggested that a personal knowledge of the Scriptures is indispensable to strong individual character; Indeed, it is the "entrance of God's word that giveth light," for it is God that teacheth man knowledge, and the "inspiration of the Almighty giveth him understanding." These agencies, active and efficient, the word and spirit of God, go before and prepare and lead fallen and guilty sinners to seek for pardon and regeneration. But the saved can only attain to strong manhood in Christianity by eating the strong meat and drinking the sincere milk of the word. Furthermore, each Christian in life's great battle must arm himself with the "sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God," if he would conquer. Its power was tested in that decisive conflict between the man Christ Jesus and the prince of the power of the air. Thrice the Captain of our salvation defeated his adversary by an appeal to the sword of truth. It is written: It is a philosophical truth that faith not only "cometh by hearing," but rests on conviction, and not on authority. Your committee have information, gathered from reports of missionaries who have labored in foreign fields, that the progress of the gospel by oral preaching alone has been unsteady and sluggish when compared with the firmness and strength of its success accompanied by the power of the printed and studied text. Missionaries and government commissioners among our own aboriginal tribes—the Indian population of our frontiers—have abundantly testified to the wonderfully increased efficiency of the gospel since they have been able to circulate among them translations of the Scriptures in their various dialects.

When Manual Agnas, a converted Roman priest, and a holy pioneer of the faith in Mexico, was asked, in his dying hour, what legacy of utterance he would bequeath to his countrymen, replied: "Put it upon my hearse, let it follow me to the grave—tell them it is an open Bible." These things indicate clearly the will of God, the wants of the people, the duty and responsibility of the church in the premises.

It is not to be overlooked, however, in this connection, that the success of divine truth in winning the nations to Christ, and through him to salvation, depends largely upon the competency and fidelity of the ministry provided for in it. The ministry is essential to the success of the gospel, inasmuch as it fills the offices ordained in it. This gospel, completed, so far as man is concerned in its ministry, is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. The awful charge from the mouth of God, to each minister he sends forth, is: "As you go, preach, saying the kingdom of God is at hand." "Preach the word," "take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine;" continue in them, for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee. Christ, "the way, the truth and the life;" "Jesus, the only name under heaven given whereby we can be saved;" "Christ, in you the hope of glory." Christ, the inspiration of the preacher, and the present and personal Savior of the hearer, is the message God has employed the ministry to bear to the sons of men. "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ," must be the unifying purpose of the ministry through all time, and the inspiration of its hope of the final conquest of the world. For he who knew the end from the beginning, and worketh all things after the counsels of his own will, determined to cast out the prince of this world and enthrone himself in the great heart of redeemed humanity by the seemingly slow but ever-penetrating and steadily leavening power of his own eternal truth, read and studied by the people and expounded by the ministry.

A divinely approved ministry takes the Bible for its text-book, Christ Jesus for its theme, the world for its parish and the salvation of the race as the object of its labors.

While it is painful, on the one hand, to contemplate the fact that eight hundred million human beings, nearly three-fourths of the world's population, remain to be supplied with the word of life, it is gratifying, on the other, to have the pleasing information that the insuperable difficulties which have hitherto prevented the introduction and circulation of the Scriptures among millions of our race are now to a very great extent, if not entirely, removed. Italy, Spain, Mexico and Japan have been providentially opened for the entrance and dissemination of the Bible; and the people of God have not been slow to perceive these indications of duty, nor to meet their responsibilities in the premises. Never before has Protestantism had the ear of the world and access to the population of the globe. "Go into my vineyard and work" has never been emphasized, since the days of the apostles, as at the present time. Not only are foreign fields inviting the toil of the church, but through the ocean-gates of our imperial domain the sons of earth are pressing to our doors from the far-off orient; India, China, Japan and the islands of the sea, from Mexico and the once mighty civilization of Europe they come to our Jerusalem, saying: "We would see Jesus."

The demands of the present can only be met by the people of God by prompt, energetic and, as far as possible, united effort in evangelizing the world; and particularly in furnishing the vast multitudes of the destitute, to whom we now have access, in the providence of God, with the word of life.

Your committee are of opinion that while the Methodist Episcopal Church South, which you represent, could have done much in the past, and has it in her power to accomplish greater things in the future by collecting and managing, in her own way, money contributed by her people for the distribution of the Bible, both within the limits of her jurisdiction and regions beyond; nevertheless, there are considerations which justify her in co-operating with other Christian and benevolent organizations in manufacturing and disseminating the word of God. In the list of these organizations your committee take pleasure in calling your attention particularly to the American Bible Society. Instituted in 1816, it now approximates perfection in its organization and practical operations, both in manufacturing and disseminating the Holy Scriptures. With its officers and board of managers in the city of New York, it has its superintendents in all the States and Territories, and auxiliary societies and agents in every city and almost every county in this far-extended country of ours; and has pushed its lines of systematic operations into many of the open and inviting fields beyond. Already, by the worthiness of its object, perfection of its organization and magnitude of its work, it has secured the hearty indorsement and cordial co-operation of all denominations of Christians in America, and innumerable testimonials of the approval of Heaven.

For definite and detailed information, however, with regard to the extent and grandeur of its work, we invite your attention to the annual reports of said society, in the hope that a few general statements on this point in our report may be satisfactory. The American Bible Society is now printing the Scriptures in sixty-three different languages. In a little more than half a century it has sent forth about thirty million copies of the word of the Most High. It has thrice instituted and helped forward to completion a general exploration of the United States. In 1829, it is said, every accessible family in the United States was visited. During a period of ten years, including 1856, five hundred thousand destitute families were supplied with the word of life. The third exploration of the United States began in 1866, since which time three hundred thousand destitute families and two hundred and fifty-four thousand destitute individuals are reported to have been supplied with the Bible through the agency of auxiliary societies, besides a very large number supplied through churches and benevolent societies not auxiliary.

It is a gratifying fact to your committee that the conception and execution of the plan for putting portions of the Scriptures conveniently for travelers in the coaches of our railroad trains, is justly claimed by a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church South—E. H. Pearce, who was then, as he is now, in the service of the American Bible Society in Kentucky. At first his proposition to give the traveler the companionship of the word of God on his rapid and too often perilous journey was not received with favor; but a faithful trial of it for a few years has demonstrated the wisdom and beneficial results of it, and secured the applause of the world and the indorsement of the American Bible Society. Surely this is the apocalyptic angel, flying in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred and tongue and people, saying, with a loud voice: "Fear God and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea and the fountains of waters."

Your committee recommend the adoption of the following resolutions by the General Conference:

1. That we cordially indorse the American Bible Society.

2. The Methodist Episcopal Church South will heartily co-operate with said society in Bible distribution.

3. That we urge all our congregations to give the Bible cause a more liberal support in the future than they have done in the past.

4. That it affords us pleasure to gratefully acknowledge the princely benefactions of the American Bible Society to the various destitute localities of Southern Methodism.

Respectfully submitted.

R. HINER, Chairman.

Report of the Committee

ON THE ORGANIZATION OF THE COLORED M. E. CHURCH IN AMERICA.

The committee to whom was referred the report of the Bishops on the organization of the colored people of the Methodist Episcopal Church South into a distinct ecclesiastical connection, have had the same under consideration, and respectfully submit the following resolutions for the adoption of the Conference:

Resolved, That the report of the Bishops, setting forth the organization of the colored people of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in conformity with the action of the General Conferences of 1866-70, into a distinct ecclesiastical connection, under the name and style of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, meets the entire approval of this Conference.

Resolved, That it is with great pleasure and devout gratitude to the great Head of the church that we receive the intelligence the report conveys of the peace, harmony, prosperity and encouraging prospects for the future of this new organization, thus fully justifying the wisdom of the policy of the church touching our colored members.

Resolved, That in providing a distinct organization for the colored members of the church, and committing to their hands the ecclesiastical oversight and spiritual interests of the colored people among us, we have given them additional proof of parental love and good will; and we do hereby commend "the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America" to the confidence and Christian affection of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and to all Christians of every name.

Resolved, That the efforts making to establish an institution of learning for the education of their ministry is worthy of all praise, and we commend this cause to the friends of the colored people everywhere. They need material aid; let it be given.

Resolved, That the report of the Bishops be recorded in the journal of this Conference as an important part of the history of this question.

Respectfully submitted.

J. E. EVANS, Chairman.

Report of the Minority of the Committee

TO WHOM REPORT ON FRATERNAL GREETINGS WAS RECOMMITTED.

A minority of the committee to which was referred the two reports on fraternal greetings beg leave to offer the following as a substitute for the report of the majority:

The committee to whom was referred the matter of fraternal greetings, conveyed to this General Conference by the delegates duly commissioned from the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, respectfully report:

We have considered the action of the General Conference of that church, at its session in Brooklyn, New York, in May, 1872, and which is partially incorporated in the certificate in the following terms, to wit:

"To place ourselves in the truly friendly relations toward our Southern brethren which the sentiment of our people demands, and to prepare the way for the opening of formal fraternity with them, be it hereby

"Resolved, That this General Conference will appoint a delegation, consisting of two ministers and one layman, to convey our fraternal greetings to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South at its next ensuing session."

On Friday, May 8, this delegation, consisting of the Rev. Dr. Albert S. Hunt, the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Fowler and General Clinton B. Fisk, having announced their presence, were formally received, and their communications heard by the Conference.

It is with pleasure that we bear testimony to the distinguished ability and to the eloquent and courteous manner in which these Christian brethren discharged their trust. Their utterances warmed our hearts. Their touching allusions to the common heritage of Methodist history, to our oneness of doctrines, polity and usage, and their calling to mind the great work in which we are both engaged for the extension of the kingdom of their Lord and ours, stirred within us precious memories.

We are called upon by the terms of the action of their General Conference to consider measures necessary "to prepare the way for the opening of formal fraternity." Every transaction and utterance of our past history pledges us to regard favorably and to meet promptly this initial response to our long-expressed desire.

But measures preparatory to formal fraternity would be defective that leave out of view questions in dispute between the Methodist Episcopal Church and ourselves. These questions relate to the course pursued by some of their accredited agents while prosecuting their work in the South, and to property which has been taken and held by them to this day against our protest and remonstrance.

Although feeling ourselves sorely aggrieved in these things, we stand ready to meet our brothers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the spirit of Christian candor, and to compose all differences upon the principles of justice and equity.

It is to be regretted that the honored representatives who bore fraternal greetings to us were not empowered also to enter upon a settlement of these vexed questions. We are prepared to take advanced steps in this direction, and, waiving any considerations which might justify a greater reserve, we will not only appoint a delegation to return the greeting so gracefully conveyed to us from the Methodist Episcopal Church, but we will also provide for a commission to meet a similar commission from that church for the purpose of settling disturbing questions.

Open and righteous treatment of all cases of complaint will furnish the only solid ground upon which we can meet. Relations of amity are with special emphasis demanded between bodies so near akin. We are brethren. To the realization of this the families of Methodism are called by the movement of the times. The attractive power of the cross is working mightily. The Christian elements in the world are all astir in their search for each other. Christian hearts are crying to each other across vast spaces and longing for fellowship. The hearts of Southern Methodism, being in full accord with these sentiments, your committee submit the following resolutions for adoption:

Resolved, That this General Conference has received with pleasure the fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church conveyed to us by their delegates, and that our Bishops be and are hereby authorized to appoint a delegation, consisting of two ministers and one layman, to bear our Christian salutations to their next ensuing General Conference.

Resolved, That in order to remove all obstacles to formal fraternity between the two churches, our College of Bishops is authorized to appoint a commission, consisting of three ministers and two laymen, to meet a similar commission authorized by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and to adjust all existing difficulties.

BRONCHITIS.

This is an irritation or inflammation of the bronchial tubes, which carry the air we breathe into the lungs. It arises from a cold settled in the throat, from Catarrh extending to these parts, from scrofulous affections, and from severe use of the voice. The irritation from this latter cause commences in the larynx and glottis, which are the organs of the voice, and, extending downward, produces hoarseness, coughing, and spitting mucous matter, sometimes mixed with blood. It is chiefly dangerous from its tendency to spread into the lungs and terminate in Consumption. It is in the cure of severe and obstinate cases of this disease that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has achieved unparalleled success, and won the loudest praise from all who have used it.

A DEBT OF GRATITUDE.

Mrs. Mary Taft, of Elk Point, Dakota Territory called at the World's Dispensary, August 19, 1873, to acknowledge a debt of gratitude due Dr. Pierce, having been entirely cured of Catarrh, complicated with Throat Disease, by the use of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

TO THE SUFFERERS WITH RHEUMATISM.

In view of the numberless sufferers afflicted with this painful malady, I feel induced to offer to the public my "ANTI-RHEUMATIC MIXTURE," which medicine proves to be the only successful remedy in this line, for it always gives instant relief, and in most cases cures permanently.

During the last fifteen years I have cured thousands of people, in this State and city, of this painful disease, with this medicine; and, what astonishes most, the patient recovered by the use of a single bottle of it. This medicine cures nothing but Rheumatism, and should the patient not recover by using the first bottle of it, that patient is not affected with Rheumatism at all. This being the first time of making my discovery known to the public after fifteen years of most successful cures, I hope the sufferers will take advantage of this rare remedy, and by doing so add their names to the thousands already cured by it.

THE CONVERSATION FAN.

THE LAST AND MOST ABSORBING SENSATION OF THE DAY IS, TO USE A THEatrical phrase, "a great take." Everybody, to be en regle for the season, and to avoid the proscription of imperious fashion, must have A CONVERSATION FAN.

No family circle is complete in social diversions and entertainments without one, and in order to enjoy the pastime it should be distinctly understood that the answers do not numerically follow the questions, but to spice the amusement an answer must be looked for that will afford a fitting response to an interrogatory.

Where a direct answer is not to be found to a direct question, it will be discovered that it furnishes the sequel to a sustained conversation, so that couples can carry on a tete-a-tete, which they may not wish to make audible, by silent indications of numbers.

THE CONVERSATION FAN

is an infallible remedy against dullness, breaking the spell of silence by a suggestive inquiry, furnishing congenial pleasures for an evening's entertainment, and opening up a novel and ingenious method of whiling away agreeable hours at home, in the promenade, at a party or private gathering.

ONLY TEN CENTS A FAN.

MONOCHROMATIC PICTURES.

These Pictures, for beauty, durability and cheapness, take the lead of all other photographic inventions. Chemists and Photographers have vainly tried to introduce them in perfected form, and it is but recently that they were presented in New Orleans by Mr. H. BUSCH, of California, in such perfection of finish as to defy the criticism of connoisseurs in the Fine Arts.

Having secured the services of the above-named gentleman, I beg to announce to the public that I am now prepared to produce by this new discovery counterfeit presentments which, for fidelity to the original, will rival the touch of the great masters of art.

My prices are, for life size, $10; for life-size bust, $5; cabinet, $1; enlarging from card or small-sized tin-type into, with 8x10 frame complete, $3. Enameled cards and work in the latest styles also executed. Those wishing Pictures can send negatives.

MACHINERY, TIES, ETC.

IMPROVED

EAGLE COTTON GINS.

The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a finer or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. He has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinders of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only a ten-inch cylinder, and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in larger-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are always kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the twenty-ninth ultimo:

Louisiana and Mississippi	bales	3,161
Lake		1
Arkansas		543
Mobile		140
Texas		200
Total		4,045

On Saturday, although the market opened with no dispatches from New York, where it was a holiday, and the telegrams from Liverpool reported sales of only 8,000 bales, with no change in quotations, yet the inquiry was fair, and up to noon fully 1,000 bales changed hands, nothing transpiring to indicate any quotable variation, after which there were additional transactions to the extent of 1,200 bales, making a total of 2,200 bales. Good ordinary sold at 15⅛@15¼c., and low middling, good staple, at 17c., equal to 16¾c. for an average lot. On Monday the telegrams from Liverpool and New York were not of a tenor to impart any impulse to the demand. A decline of 1-16d. in uplands at the former was, in fact, calculated to discourage buyers, and the movement was consequently without any spirit, only five brokers participating in the business. There was, nevertheless, some inquiry from a few others, but it was mostly for kinds which could not be found in the poorly-assorted supply, or at prices below the ruling rates. Under these circumstances sales could not have been forced unless at a decline, but on the other hand many factors adhered to their previous pretensions. We subsequently heard of some sales at easier prices, and of others at figures showing no falling off. On Tuesday, there being nothing in the dispatches to stimulate the movement, the market opened with a limited inquiry, and continued extremely dull throughout the day but, as one buyer took off both holes, the sales summed up 1,750 bales, at prices showing considerable irregularity, and a general tendency to easier rates, the principal exception being where desirable kinds were held by factors with unusual firmness.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 4,650 bales, against 5,450 for the corresponding time last week and 5,250 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 1,193,768 bales, against 1,183,311 bales to the same date last year, and the increase in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 250,190 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 58,936 to Great Britain, of 112,633 to France, and of 122,326 to other foreign ports. VOL. 20. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JUNE 11, 1874. NO. 24.

PROCEEDINGS
—OF—
THE GENERAL CONFERENCE
—OF—
THE M. E. CHURCH SOUTH.

TWENTY-FIRST DAY.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

MONDAY, May 25, 1874.

Conference met at the hour appointed, Bishop Keener in the chair. Religious exercises were conducted by B. R. Johnson.

The minutes were read and approved.

Bishop Paine took the chair.

On motion of P. A. Peterson,

Resolved, That the Bishops are authorized to estimate their traveling expenses incurred in attending the Annual Conferences of their respective districts, and apportion the same among the several Conferences of said districts, on the basis of their claim on said Conferences for salary.

On motion of R. A. Young and J. E. Evans,

Resolved, That all other committees pay the traveling expenses of the Bishops serving them.

The following was read and laid on the table:

Whereas, The experience of the last few years demonstrates that an aggregate margin of at least ten per cent. upon the apportionment of the Bishops' salaries to the several Annual Conferences is necessary to provide against probable failure to meet the full amount allowed; therefore,

Resolved, That each Annual Conference be requested to add at least ten per cent. to the amount assessed by the Conference in making their apportionment within the Conference.

J. E. EVANS.
A. H. REDFORD.

Report No. 3 of the committee on boundaries, on which the Conference adjourned this morning, was taken up.

H. A. C. Walker moved to lay the motion of J. H. McLean on the table. This motion prevailed.

The second item was rejected. It was as follows:

2. We recommend that the memorial from the East Texas Conference, concerning the boundary line between that Conference and Trinity, be granted, so that the portion of Harrison county now included in the Trinity Conference, and so much of the counties of Upshur, Smith, Van Zandt and Kauffman, as shall be required to make a straight line from the northwest corner of Harrison county to said point on the Trinity River, be and the same is transferred and made a part of the East Texas Conference.

All the other items were severally adopted.

On motion of J. E. Edwards report No. 1 of the committee on boundaries was taken up, and item 2, establishing a Conference in Montana, was reconsidered. The item was stricken out; and on motion of W. M. Rush the territory of Montana was added to the Denver Conference.

Report No. 2 of the committee on finance, and the two minority reports, were called up and read.

After considerable discussion all the reports were laid on the table.

Report No. 8 of the committee on episcopacy, on the death of Bishops Andrew and Early, was presented by J. E. Evans, from that committee, which was read in the profound silence of the Conference, and adopted by a rising vote.

REPORT NO. VIII OF THE COMMITTEE ON EPISCOPACY—ON THE DEATH OF BISHOPS ANDREW AND EARLY.

The committee on episcopacy beg leave to offer the following tribute to the memory of Bishops Andrew and Early:

It is with feelings of heartfelt sorrow that we behold no longer the noble form of Bishop Andrew as one of our number in the sessions of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. He has always stood in the front rank of its ministers and officers from its organization. Pure in character, devout and consecrated in spirit, self-sacrificing and laborious in every good work, able, prompt, kind and impartial in official administration, he commended himself as an example worthy of all emulation. May his mantle fall on us who survive him. He died as he lived. As an extended obituary of the Bishop has been already published, it is not necessary to say more here.

Bishop John Early departed this life in Lynchburg, Virginia, November 5, 1873, closing a long life of active, useful ministerial service in the faith of that Jesus whom he had preached to hundreds of thousands, and in the sure and certain hope of eternal life through the merits of Jesus Christ. The elements of his strong character were very observable, clear, common-sense, masterly powers, faith in God and in himself, an indomitable force of will, and a tireless industry, so long as health and strength allowed him an active participation in the affairs of the church, was one of the links which united the present generation of Methodists with the fathers. His life is historic. We magnify the grace of God which sustained him so long in great labors, and cheered his declining years with abundant consolations.

J. E. EVANS,
Chairman pro tem.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 25, 1874.

The following resolutions were then offered, read and adopted by a rising vote:

Whereas, We regard the establishment and endowment of institutions of learning, under the control of the church, as of vital importance to the welfare of our people; and that these objects address themselves to our convictions, and appeal to every principle of humanity and religion, and call for the most liberal devising, and for the most generous and complete consecration; And whereas, The example of the wealthy, in the bestowal of their means for the promotion of a liberal culture, and for the support of educational institutions of a high grade, is worthy of imitation and hearty commendation; And whereas, We have heard with pleasure of the munificent gift of Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York, of over half a million of dollars, to build and endow a university under the control of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we are thankful to God, from whom is every good gift and every perfect gift, for this instance of enlarged beneficence; that we tender to Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt the expression of our appreciation of his noble generosity, and that we will ever pray that the richest blessings of heaven may rest upon him.

LINUS PARKER.
C. G. ANDREWS.

The following resolution was then offered, read and adopted:

Whereas, The following forms, found in our Book of Discipline, on pages 170, 171 and 172, for wills and bequests, or gifts and grants to the agent of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, for its use, etc., to be controlled by said agent, does not provide for a trustee after the death or removal of said agent, and in all such cases forces the church into a court of equity, divest the title and vest it in trustees; therefore,

Resolved, That said forms be so amended as to read: Item 1. "I give and devise the following (here follows a description of the property) to ——, agent of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and to his successors in office, and its use to be controlled," etc.; and in item 2: "Know all men by these presents that I (giving name) for and in consideration of the love I bear for the cause of Christ, and from an earnest desire to promote his heritage on earth, do give and grant, and by these presents convey unto ——, agent of the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and to his successors in office for the use," etc.

F. W. EARNEST.
A. H. REDFORD.
T. POLK.

The following resolution was then offered, read and adopted:

Whereas, The committee on episcopacy, at the General Conference of 1870, submitted a report (No. 4, page 254 of said journal) which reads as follows: "The committee having been instructed to nominate one of our Bishops, or some other competent person, to write the life of the late Bishop Soule, and it appearing that Bishop Soule himself expressed a desire that, should his life be written, Bishop Wightman might be selected for the work; And whereas, The committee believe that this desire is very general; therefore,

"Resolved, That Bishop W. M. Wightman be nominated to the General Conference to write the life of Bishop Soule." And whereas, It is due to Methodism in general, and to the Methodist Episcopal Church South in particular, as well as to the memory of one of our greatest and best men, that his life be written, to add an interesting, instructive and valuable work to the literature of the Methodist Episcopal Church South; therefore,

Resolved, That this General Conference would respectfully request Bishop Wightman to state to this body how far he has progressed in the work, and what difficulty, if any, he encounters in collecting suitable material.

DANIEL MORSE.
W. G. VEAL.
I. G. JOHN.

Bishop Wightman stated that for lack of material, as well as from pressure of official engagements, he had not been able to do anything in the way of preparing a memoir. He had so notified the committee on episcopacy. He thought that the most that could now be done was the preparation of a monograph.

The Conference then proceeded to vote for the place of holding the next session of the General Conference. W. H. Potter nominated Atlanta, Georgia; T. Polk nominated St. Louis, Missouri; J. E. Edwards nominated Richmond, Virginia.

Atlanta received 91 votes. On motion of W. M. Rush the vote was made unanimous.

On motion of W. M. Leftwich the first Wednesday in May, 1878, was fixed upon as the time for opening the next session.

A resolution of C. I. Vandeventer and others, in reference to the division of the report on fraternal greetings, was offered, read and laid on the table.

A motion of A. H. Redford, to reconsider the vote by which the Conference resolved, when it adjourned, to adjourn to meet to-morrow at half-past eight A. M., did not prevail.

W. Milnes moved that the Conference take a recess till half-past eight o'clock to-night. This motion was laid on the table.

Conference then adjourned with the doxology, and the benediction by the Bishop.

TWENTY-SECOND DAY.

TUESDAY, May 26, 1874.

Conference met at the hour appointed Bishop Paine in the chair.

C. I. Vandeventer conducted religious worship.

A communication from the Methodist Preachers' Meeting in Cincinnati, kindly recognizing the courtesy shown to the delegates of the Methodist Episcopal Church who bore fraternal greetings to the Conference, was presented and read by the secretary.

A communication from Methodist and Presbyterian ministers of New Albany, gratefully recognizing the pulpit services of members of the General Conference during the session, was presented by E. W. Sehon and read to the Conference.

The following resolutions were then offered, read and adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That while the Conference mourns the absence, on account of death, of two of the chief pastors of the church, it is devoutly thankful that all the rest have been permitted to be present and to preside at this session. The Conference duly appreciates the patience, kindness and ability with which the Bishops have discharged their difficult and onerous duties, and fervently prays that their "bow may abide in strength," and that at the next session of the General Conference they may all be in their place, at the head of a prosperous connection, honored and reverenced by all—ministers and people—whom they serve in the gospel of Christ.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Conference are due and are hereby tendered to the secretaries for the faithful discharge of their onerous duties.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Conference are due and are hereby tendered to the ministers and officers of the Methodist churches in Louisville for the manifold and courteous attentions bestowed upon the members during the session. Their wants have been anticipated, and everything has been done to meet their wishes and to minister to their comfort. "The Lord recompense their work, and a full reward be given them of the Lord."

Resolved, That the thanks of the General Conference are due and are hereby tendered to the authorities and citizens of Louisville for the elegant and bountiful hospitality extended to the members during their session in this beautiful city.

Resolved, That this Conference duly appreciates the Christian courtesy of the pastors and churches of Louisville, New Albany, Jeffersonville, etc., in placing their houses of worship at the disposal of its members during the session, and heartily prays that peace may be within their walls and prosperity within their palaces.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Conference are due and are hereby tendered to the presiding elder of the Louisville district, the Rev. Dr. Sehon, and the pastors of the several charges for the highly satisfactory manner in which they have apportioned the pulpit and platform services of the present session, and for their great personal kindness and urbanity toward the members of this Conference.

Resolved, That the thanks of this body are due and are hereby tendered to Prof. T. O. Summers, Jr., for the efficient manner in which he has reported the proceedings of the General Conference.

A. H. REDFORD.
J. S. LITHGOW.

Resolved, That we render the heartiest thanks to our Father in heaven for his gracious presence with us and his providential care of us during the session of our Conference, and that we humbly pray the divine blessing to rest abundantly on all concerned, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

H. A. C. WALKER.

Resolved, That the thanks of the Conference are hereby tendered to railroad and steamboat companies for privileges extended to the members and visiters of the Conference at its present session.

Resolved, That the thanks of the General Conference are due and are hereby tendered to Mr. Ed. Colman, who has so faithfully and patiently served us as postmaster during our session.

S. H. BROWN.
A. A. GILBERT.
J. E. RYLAND.
G. M. WINTON.

Resolved, That the thanks of this General Conference are due and are hereby tendered to the newspaper press of this city for its numerous courtesies during our present session.

Resolved, That the thanks of this General Conference are due and are hereby tendered to Messrs. Wrampelmeier & Co., wholesale furniture dealers and manufacturers, for the use of the beautiful furniture so kindly and gratuitously furnished for the use of our Bishops and secretaries during the session of this Conference.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Conference are also due and are hereby tendered to the Masonic Grand Lodge of Kentucky and Mr. Daniel Bennett for the use of the other tables and furniture which they have so generously lent this Conference and the delegations composing this Conference.

A memorial from F. M. Featherstun, of Vicksburg district, and others, referring to the children of the church, was presented and read, and on motion of J. B. McFerrin was laid on the table among its unfinished business.

The following resolutions were then offered, read and adopted:

Resolved, That $50 be taken from the assessment made at the Columbia Conference for the Bishops' fund and the same added to the assessment to the Pacific Conference.

E. K. MILLER.
GEORGE SIM.
B. R. JOHNSON.

Resolved, That the secretaries of the Annual Conference Missionary Boards be required to report annually the amounts collected by their several Missionary Boards to the secretary of the General Board, to be published with his annual reports.

Resolved, That as delegates to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South we reflect with thanksgiving and hope toward God on the increasing disposition of the more Christianized governments to settle national disputes by arbitration rather than by the sword.

Resolved, That whatever of enactment or administration in civil governments tends to make "the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ," should have the sympathy and manifest support of the followers of the Prince of peace.

The following communication from the venerable Lovick Pierce was presented and read, and on motion of the secretary was received standing, and the secretary was instructed to spread it upon the journal:

To the Bishops and Members of the General Conference:

BELOVED BRETHREN—By the good providence of God I have been enabled to attend this the fifteenth General Conference, and here closes my membership in this grand council of Methodism.

My salutatory was lean of anything but heart, and my valedictory I would not present if it was not all heart. Our parting feelings, in as far as future General Conferences are concerned, are very different. You see other General Conferences coming this side your grave, while I see my grave coming in between this and 1878. I have, however, endeavored to serve my generation by the will of God, and now I resign all to those who are to come after me. I came here hoping to effect some changes in our practical itinerant pastorate, and in the enforcement of discipline. These I intended as my memorials in the ninetieth year of my life. They have all perished on the coast of a perilous travel. Of course my friends believed it wiser to kill off these projections of mine than to adopt them. So I go home disappointed—go with convictions deep-seated as ever. The necessity for these changes is only a question of time. You have overpaid me in loving kindnesses, and all I could ever desire is to feel that I deserve them, not because I have lived a long time, but because I have labored a great deal—once with marked success; of late years with much less visible results. I was, in the best Methodist sense of it, an effective preacher for sixty-seven years, which Dr. Punshon, of England, said in my room in Columbus, March, 1873, was the longest effective history among Methodist preachers. I ask you to give thanks to God for all his mercies bestowed on me, and pray for my safe arrival home and in heaven. I am too feeble to ascend the stairs again. A loving farewell.

LOUISVILLE, May 26, 1874.

After the reception of the communication the Conference united in singing:

Together let us sweetly live,
Together let us die,
And each a starry crown receive,
And reign above the sky.

Affecting remarks were made by E. W. Sehon, T. B. Sargent and the presiding Bishop, whose filial expressions were very touching, and who tendered thanks to the Conference for testimonials of regard to his venerable father. This Conference united in fervent prayer for him, led by the senior Bishop.

Report No. 8 of the committee on itinerancy and the report of the minority were taken up and read.

After considerable discussion the report of the minority was adopted.

Report No. 2 of the committee on revisal was taken up and read.

Item 2 was amended by adding a question to be numbered 21: "What is doing for the cause of education?" also the fifteenth question by inserting "er for readmission."

Item 4, on the eligibility of laymen to the Annual Conference, was stricken out.

Pending action on the report, on motion of J. E. Evans the time of adjournment was indefinitely extended.

Report No. 2 as amended was adopted.

Report No. 6 of the committee on Sunday schools was taken up, discussed and laid on the table.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That we are also a unit upon the propriety of appointing a commission empowered to meet a like commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church to settle all questions of difficulty between us, and that such settlement is essential to complete fraternity.

Resolved, That the only points of difference between us on this whole subject are the best methods of accomplishing this desired end.

The Conference then united in singing psalm cxvii, "From all that dwell below the skies," and the doxology.

The benediction was then pronounced by Bishop Paine, and thus closed the seventh session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

Vicksburg, Mississippi.

MR. EDITOR: As you may suppose, I have fully entered upon the year's work at this place. The outlook in some regards is encouraging. A few faithful souls have rallied around me as their leader, and a hearty "Godspeed" is uttered both by word and deed. We have a membership of over two hundred, about eighteen or twenty having been added since Conference. Grove Street charge, or the mission church, has a small membership, and has been struggling for an existence for some months past without the aid of a pastor. A brighter day has, however, come at Grove Street, as Bro. Singleton has been appointed pastor there.

The population of the city is largely made up of Germans and Israelites. Last Sunday the Jews went out by scores into an adjoining grove, to engage in the amusements of a picnic. I was expostulating with one of these picnickers for the desecration, telling him that this was a Christian country, and our Jewish citizens ought to regard somewhat, at least, the Christian Sabbath. His cool reply was that he had never heard this was a Christian land before. I had no more to say to him just then.

The Methodist church here has been preyed upon and despoiled to a most remarkable, a humiliating extent by high-church proselyters. In some instances whole families have been swept from us as by one stroke. I venture to say, had we the material that has been taken from our church, and thrown into the two Episcopal churches in Vicksburg, we would to-day possess double our present strength. But while we turn with regret from these households, where the religion of our fathers has been practically banished, we renew our efforts at an attempt to organize the remaining working force of the church more perfectly, and call with renewed emphasis on sinners to turn and live. This leaves us all in good health at the parsonage. Good-by.

A Card.

To the Members of the Alabama Conference:

The delegates from our Conference to the late General Conference requested me to say to you that the amounts received for the expenses of the delegation fell short of the required sum by about $150. We do not suppose that it was expected by anybody that we should bear our own expenses; hence this announcement.

I was requested to state that but small amounts had been received from the Selma, Greensboro and Union Springs districts; Eufaula district is also behind. We hope that brethren who have not already done so, will yet take collections for this object. All surplus is to be returned to the Conference.

MOBILE, June 1, 1874.

IT IS found that seventeen thousand hymns have been written in the English language. An English churchman discovers that of these not more than two hundred and sixteen have received the stamp of the whole Anglican church at home and abroad. These include many written by Dissenters, such as Wesley, Toplady, Watts and others.

THE Roman Catholic pilgrims who left New York, two weeks since, landed in Paris last week, and proceeded, June 1, on their way to the shrine of Lourdes.

TRIED GOLD.

Get the spindle and distaff ready;
God will send the flax;
So makes the bee, from summer flowers,
Honeycomb and wax.
Work the six days, pray all seven;
Trust the rest to the grace of Heaven.

Cast thy bread upon the waters;
Ask not gain or praise;
Thou shalt eat it, fresh and sweet,
After many days.
Work the six days, pray all seven;
Trust the rest to the grace of Heaven.

Winds may blow, but the trees God planteth
Taketh deeper root;
Winds that shake it cannot break it;
It shall bear good fruit.
Work the six days, pray all seven;
Leave the rest to the grace of Heaven.

Never wish for the tarnished wages
Fraud and lying pay;
Unto every evil-doer
Comes the evil day.
Work the six days, pray all seven;
Trust the rest to the grace of Heaven.

Go to the "Well of living waters"
If thy spirit faints;
Better it is to do with God
Than with all his saints.
Work the six days, pray all seven;
Trust the rest to the grace of Heaven.

He doeth well who doeth his best
He doeth well who strives;
Noblest efforts may sometimes fail—
Never noble lives.
Work the six days, pray all seven;
Trust the rest to the grace of Heaven.

Human Greatness.

MR. EDITOR: There is nothing so saddening to the heart as to read the history of this world—the history of man. There we behold, as in a mirror, the littleness of greatness—how little we are, how little we seek to be. I speak not of history as written by the partial friend, but history as it stands forth after having undergone the scrutiny of fearless and impartial criticism.

It is unnecessary to go back to the antediluvian records, or even to explore the desolations of Greece and Rome, a few centuries back, and we find enough deformed humanity to make angels weep. Napoleon, Wolsey, Bacon, Byron—the battle-field, the church, the court, the halls of philosophy, and the seat of the muses. Napoleon, the Corsican corporal, the general, the consul, the emperor. Wolsey, the wily churchman, the confidant of kings, the aspirant for papal honors. Bacon, the philosopher, the courtier, the ingrate. Byron, the poet, the sensualist, the broken lyre. Doubtless no men have filled a larger space in the detestation and admiration of mankind than these. All giants, all despots, all guilty of crimes for which the block could scarcely prove an expiation; yet these very men to-day are the wonder and study of the soldier, the churchman, the philosopher, the poet, and held up as worthy the emulation of the aspiring young men of our land.

The admiration for their splendid intellects covers the detestation of crimes of the deepest dye, which, if committed by men less gifted, would seal their doom forever. Napoleon's extraordinary love for France is often alluded to in palliation of the grievous sin of causing so much human butchery. Did Napoleon love France? Why did he not love Corsica, his native land?

The fact is, after all, it was not Napoleon's love for France, or her elevation in the scale of nations, that caused such devotion and labor upon his part; but because France could lead him to that elevation for which he panted. It was fame, not France, that inspired his patriotism and devotion. Selfishness was one of the prominent traits of Napoleon—one which his infatuated countrymen deny him. What but selfishness would you term the attempted implication of the captain of the English vessel, to thereby claim the generous hospitality of England? What the desertion of the "Old Guard"—standing in the shelter and watching the brave body guard sacrificed to his vanity and love of fame? How little does the hero of "many battles" appear when quarreling with his guard? How little when grumbling about something to eat! This "splendid prodigy," whose colossal meanness finds no parallel in history, is thus described by an able writer: "A mind of surpassing greatness for war and statecraft, a heart full of all selfishness, fraud and falsehood; most void of noble thoughts, humanity and God."

Wolsey is a striking exemplification of the fact that the world does not always treat fallen or unsuccessful greatness with the most conceivable admiration and respect. If greatness consists in craftiness, love of self-aggrandizement and falsehood, who deserves the distinction more than Wolsey? How brilliant his success! How successful his deep-laid plans of meanness till overmatched by his vigilant enemies, detected and reproved by Henry! How sudden his fall, how deep and pungent his humiliation! Shakespeare, than whom (the inspired penman excepted) none have ever pictured human nature more truthfully, represents Wolsey as soliloquizing on his career after this manner:

"Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my King, he would not have left me naked to mine enemies."

Bacon's life demonstrates the fact that ambition and love of self-aggrandizement will cause men to stoop to employ the most ignoble means to secure ends, and lead them to despise the greatest virtues that adorn humanity. Oh! how little does the great philosopher appear when, trampling under foot friendship, gratitude and honor, he slays his benefactor to retain his position in office.

Byron is another genius whose life furnishes us with the sad fact that there are "great lights" whose illumination it is unsafe to trust to; stars that shine resplendently in the "heaven of fame," but give not a ray of their radiance to guide us to truth and to God. Byron's littleness appears when his towering genius degrades the spiritual abode of song into the base sensuality of a debauchee.

After viewing the character of these men, well may we ask: Where shall we find the pearl of great price? Did any of these "earth-heroes" prove himself a benefit to society? Did any of them seek the happiness of mankind? Can we longer consider it a debatable question whether human greatness is preferable to moral goodness?

Is there any true greatness, save that which is to be found in adding to human happiness here and ensuring it hereafter?—that which the Christian displays when the grim monster death approaches, and, like St. Paul, looking retrospectively over his career and prospectively to his destiny in the "great beyond," can exclaim:

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness."

W. A. RICE.

Letter from Memphis.

MR. EDITOR: I shall not soon forget the afternoon that I stood on our city's bluff and watched the steamer Charles Bodmann, as she touched the wharf, and the remark of our friend Darby, of South Carolina: "Let us go aboard. May be we will see some delegates on their way to Louisville." My meeting you on that boat, looking at you narrowly, to be convinced that it was the Parker of long ago—O how glad!—and then to meet our dear Bishop Keener and wife, gave a pleasure I cannot forget.

A brief conversation, but to me so full of interest. Your loved ones rose up before me, and many other friends whom I had not seen in long years. Some had crossed the flood, some tarried on this shore. Among the latter our dear friends, the Fullilloves, Harper and Dotey, of Caddo. Those men indicate a distinct feature of Methodism. There are none growing up to perpetuate what they represent.

My mind is full of memories of Louisiana—pleasant memories! Poor, down-trodden and now deluged State! I wonder if she will ever regain her former splendor!

Tennessee is reconstructed, but Memphis is not keeping pace with Tennessee. The epidemic of last year was a terrible blow to this city's future growth. Yet I wonder if that affliction had not a blessing bound up in it! I wonder if that blessing is not now being developed. The whole city seems exercised on religion. My office is like a confessional—they come hourly to inquire about conversion and sanctification. We have just closed the fourth week of a protracted meeting. The cry is: "Do not close. Go on." How many have been converted we know not. As many as fourteen have been converted in one day inside the walls of the church. But conversions are going on all over the city, at home and on the streets. Other churches are now beginning revival meetings, and they are successful. The leading exercise of these meetings is not preaching. Indeed preaching is barely a feature. Song is a feature, but not the chief. But prayer is. I was never in a meeting in which there was so much prayer—sometimes continuous prayer for one hour. Requests for prayer for this or that one are very numerous. Some are made in writing, some are made verbally. Conversation is a leading feature of our meetings. We relate experiences and ask each other questions. Even the hymns we sing are first read and commented upon before sung. There is less plan of conduct than any meeting I ever attended. The Spirit leads; we follow. The burden of very many has been the desire for "the higher life." Many have sought and attained unto it. S.

MEMPHIS, May 11, 1874.

Rev. Whitfield Harrington.

MR. EDITOR: It is said that time and tide wait for no man. We may remark that death waits no other event; for while ministers and laymen all over the South are watching and waiting for developments from the General Conference, he (Death) drawe his polished sword and strikes home to the vitals of one of Mississippi's most gifted, useful and pious preachers. The eloquent, talented and good Whitfield Harrington is no more on this earth. He breathed his last at sunrise on Tuesday morning, the twelfth instant. He was confined to his bed only a few days, though unwell for some time past. His disease was pneumonia. Everything that science, skill and love could do was done for him, yet all to no avail. He sank rapidly, and for ten or fifteen hours before his death was unconscious. Before he became unconscious, however, he spoke to those around him in the most comforting manner, giving every hope of his happy state and bright prospects for the future. He said: "The gospel of Christ, which I have preached to others, is my solace in this hour." To one of his physicians he remarked: "Have faith in God." And the writer heard the whisperings of that great soul, as through the cloud it uttered: "Glory! glory! immortality! heaven!"

On yesterday we laid his ashes away in the cold, quiet grave at Georgeville church. He now sleeps beside mother and father, kindred and friends, and his spirit has gone up to meet them in that better land. As we turned away from that grave we could but think in our hearts:

"Soldier of Christ, well done!
Praise be thy new employ;
And while eternal ages run
Rest in thy Savior's joy."

I hope some of his many friends in the ministry will prepare a memorial, and furnish it to the ADVOCATE for publication. Let us all, brethren, live the life of the righteous, that our last end may be like his. JAMES M. BOON.

RICHLAND, MISS., May 14, 1874.

A Voice from Brookhaven.

MR. EDITOR: For the encouragement of the church at large I wish to mention briefly the influences that are now in operation in this place, which are "mighty, through God," to the pulling down of the strongholds of satan and of drawing sinners to Christ. Those who have been slumbering, as it were, over their eternal interests so long, seem now to be wide awake to the high claims of God and fearful eternity, and nightly gather in crowds around the altar for the prayers of the church; and evince to all, by their cries and prayers, the condition of truly awakened and penitent souls, breathing after and anxious to be taught the way of God more perfectly, that they may be enabled to exercise that faith which will reconcile them to the favor of God. Our pastor, H. Walter Featherstun, seems determined to "bear the yoke in his youth." He has entered the Christian warfare fully equipped for the great work which lies before him, having "put on the whole armor of God." He is a valiant soldier of the cross, whose watchword is: "Work, work for Jesus." He manifests a zeal and earnestness which are perfectly refreshing to witness in this part of the vineyard. Services have been held daily and nightly for the past ten days, and still the interest increases. Many have found peace and pardon in believing, and others are seeking to enter into their joys. On account of the great spiritual dearth so long prevalent here, the showers of divine grace which are descending upon us are doubly refreshing. May they continue to fall until "the wilderness and the solitary place shall be glad, and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose." About thirty have professed conversion, and the small spark of spiritual vitality in the church is receiving a new impulse, and, we hope, will soon kindle into a flame which will consume the dross of the church, leaving naught but the pure gold; and that here in Brookhaven God may "redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works."

BROOKHAVEN, MISS., May 6, 1874.

Vanderbilt University.

On Tuesday afternoon, April 28, the corner-stone of the main building, on the grounds of Vanderbilt University, was laid with interesting ceremonies. Though the weather was excessively disagreeable—cold, rainy and windy—a very large number of people were present, including not only citizens of Nashville and vicinity, but many persons from a distance. A splendid choir of singers from the several churches in Nashville, Edgefield and Franklin, under the leadership of Prof. McIntosh, and with two organs, gave excellent music for the occasion, embracing an original ode, "Our Vanderbilt," by the Rev. T. O. Summers, D. D.—music by Prof. McIntosh. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Andrew Hunter, D. D., of the Little Rock Conference, after which Bishop McTyeire delivered an address on the history of the University—a brief but clear statement of facts connected with the rise and progress of the great enterprise. He was followed by Governor John C. Brown, of Tennessee, and Chancellor R. J. Morgan, of our own city, in brief and happy speeches, strongly indicative of the high hopes which not only the speakers but the public generally entertain of the success and prosperity of the University. The architect, Mr. Smith, having all things ready, formally and in a neat little address announced the fact to Bishop Paine, who, taking charge, proceeded to direct the ceremonies of the laying of the corner-stone, on one side of which "Vanderbilt University" was cut in deep letter, and "1874" on the other side. The corner-stone having been put in position, the secretary, Rev. R. A. Young, D. D., deposited in it, or rather in a copper box fixed in it, the following articles, viz: A copy of the Holy Bible, hymn-book, Discipline, minutes of the Annual Conferences, Journal of the General Conference, Nashville Christian Advocate, Western Methodist, Southern Christian Advocate, NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, St. Louis Christian Advocate, Texas Christian Advocate, Baltimore Episcopal Methodist, Central Methodist, Raleigh Christian Advocate, Holston Methodist, Pacific Methodist, Sunday School Magazine, Sunday School Visitor, Our Little People, Nashville papers, daily and weekly, copy of Mr. Vanderbilt's paper donating $500,000, a photograph of Mr. Vanderbilt, photographs of the Bishops, copy of the charter of the University, with the names of the members of the board of trust, annual report of the Board of Missions, catalogue and annual exhibit of the Publishing House, lists of principal officers of the government of the United States, of the State of Tennessee and of the city of Nashville, fractional currency and postage stamps, and a number of other articles, including a silver dollar volunteered by the Rev. A. R. Winfield, D. D., and an Arkansas paper dollar by Colonel McGee, both from the Little Rock Conference, the last article deposited being a printed programme of the occasion. Then the benediction was pronounced by the Rev. T. O. Summere, D. D., and, while the rain rapidly increased, the audience, which had been, under the circumstances, very patient, because deeply interested, took their departure in great haste, all seemingly gratified that they had attended the occasion, but regretting that cold and rain and wind had interfered so seriously with its enjoyment.

It was certainly the most complete carrying out of a programme we ever witnessed, under conditions which threatened an entire failure. Thanks and praise are due for success to the pluck of the executive committee and the enthusiasm of the audience.

The above is taken from the Western Methodist. Bishop Wightman delivered the address at night in McKendree church, Nashville. It was a masterly production, and we greatly regret that the press of matter from the General Conference prevents its publication in our paper.

We copy from the Western Methodist the following account of the meeting of the board of trustees, which contains much of interest:

The board of trust met April 30—held sessions in the morning, afternoon and evening. The president, Bishop McTyeire, was present, also Bishops Paine and Wightman, supervisors; and from the six Annual Conferences members of the board were in attendance, viz.: A. L. P. Green, D. C. Kelley, David Reynolds, E. H. East, W. C. Johnson, S. W. Moore, Milton Brown, R. J. Morgan, P. Tuggle, T. Y. Ramsey, W. W. Floyd, G. A. Dannelly, Andrew Hunter and W. C. Hearn; also A. R. Winfield, agent, and R. A. Young, secretary. Prof. N. T. Lupton was present during the evening session.

The president, under the provision of one of the by-laws, submitted a communication setting forth what had been done since the last meeting, and what was thought appropriate for consideration at this meeting.

A communication was presented from our munificent benefactor, Mr. Vanderbilt, adding $100,000 to his former donation of $500,000—the sum added to be expended on buildings, it having been concluded by him that $200,000, as heretofore allowed for buildings, was not sufficient for that purpose, and that it was not desirable to encroach further than that sum upon the original donation of $500,000. This second instance of liberality was received with profound thanks, which the secretary was directed to communicate to Mr. Vanderbilt. So while we still have from him $300,000 as the beginning of an endowment fund, we have also $300,000 for buildings, etc. This certainly is good news for our friends. Now let them, one and all, add their gifts, much or little, to complete the amount at first fixed, one million dollars, for the success of the University.

The board, in view of the impossibility of making the necessary preparation for opening the halls of the University in January, 1875, rescinded action heretofore taken fixing that time for the opening, and resolved to begin the department of literature, science and philosophy and the biblical department in the autumn of 1875.

The medical and law departments it was resolved to open in the autumn of the present year.

By special action and formal agreement of all parties in interest, the present faculty of the medical department of the University of Nashville—the most prosperous and successful school of medicine in the South—was accepted and adopted as the medical faculty of Vanderbilt University. This is a most happy consummation, and will be hailed by our friends as a grand advance, securing at once a faculty of the first class, a suitable building, a museum with charts, specimens and apparatus equal to the requirements of the most thorough medical institution, and clinical advantages sufficient for all purposes. The faculty is composed of the following well-known and highly-approved professors, viz.:

Paul F. Eve, M. D., professor of operative and clinical surgery; William T. Briggs, M. D., professor of the principles and practice of surgery; Thomas L. Maddox, M. D., professor of the institutes and practice of medicine; William L. Nichol, M. D., professor of diseases of women and children, and of clinical medicine; Van S. Lindsley, M. D., professor of physiology; Thomas Menees, M. D., professor of obstetrics and dean of the faculty; James M. Safford, M. D., professor of chemistry; Thomas A. Atchison, M. D., professor of materia medica and therapeutics; Thomas O. Summers, M. D., professor of anatomy and histology; John H. Callender, M. D., professor of psychological medicine.

The executive committee's report on organizing the law faculty was considered and adopted.

Faculty of the Law Department.—William F. Cooper, dean, William B. Reese, junior professor, Jordon Stokes, A. O. P. Nicholson, Ed. Baxter, Ed. H. East, Thomas H. Malone, H. M. Spofford.

These gentlemen will be recognized by the bar and the public generally as admirably adapted to the duties expected of them, and their election will be accepted as a guarantee of the success of the law department.

The following resolution was adopted, viz.:

Resolved, That in view of the fact that there will be many applicants for admission into the various schools of the University who will not be prepared for university education, we therefore feel the necessity and ordain the establishment, at the earliest possible time, of a high school to be under the control of the University.

Some other matters of detail received attention, and the board adjourned to meet on the call of the president.

THERE was a bishop in Dublin who engaged a painter to make a large picture for the cathedral. The subject chosen was the crossing of the Red sea by the Israelites. After a time the picture was completed and hung in the cathedral, covered by a heavy curtain, and a great crowd of people assembled to see it unveiled. All faces were turned in expectation to the curtain. But lo! when it was drawn aside nothing could be seen but a vast expanse of water. In a great rage, the bishop turned to the artist and exclaimed:

"I thought I asked you to paint a picture of the Israelites crossing the Red sea!"

"True for you, that's just it," said the painter.

"But where are the Israelites?" asked the indignant bishop.

"They've gone over," said the painter.

"Well, but where are the Egyptians?"

"They've gone under!"

ONE of the highest benefits we can reap from understanding the way of God with ourselves is that we become able thus to trust him for others with whom we do not understand his ways.

OLD AGE is a blessed time. It gives us leisure to put off our earthly garments one by one, and dress ourselves for heaven. "Blessed are they that are home-sick, for they shall get home."

GOODNESS of heart is man's best treasure, his brightest honor and noblest acquisition. It is that ray of divinity which dignifies humanity.

Obituaries.

JOHN L. LACY, son of Elijah and Margaret Lacy, was born December 10, 1860, and died January 17, 1874, at the residence of his grandfather, John Boyecan, after a painful illness of eleven weeks. The patience with which he bore his sufferings is unparalleled in my memory. Two weeks before his death he made a profession of religion, having been a penitent some time before his sickness. John was a kind brother to his little sister, a dutiful son to his widowed mother, and was loved by all his relatives and friends. It is a delightful thought to know that John feared not to meet his God.

"How happy are they who their Savior obey,
And have laid up their treasures above."

POLKVILLE, Smith Co., Miss., April 25, 1874.

MADISON J. HAWKINS, the subject of this notice, was born in November, 1831, in the State of Mississippi, and died in Claiborne parish, Louisiana, January 15, 1874.

He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and a faithful, consistent Christian—a man of but few words, yet his life was a living epistle. Many who made greater professions did not exercise the heaven of Christian influence that Bro. Hawkins did. He was deeply afflicted for a long time, but with meek submission he bowed to the chastening hand, and uttered not a word of complaint. His death was triumphant. He has gone to his reward in the skies. He leaves a widow and four children behind, and many friends. God bless the bereaved.

JOHN A. MILLER.

DEPARTED THIS LIFE, in St. Landry parish, Louisiana, FRANCES A. CLARY, wife of R. W. Clary, and daughter of C. J. (deceased) and E. J. Lassiter, aged thirty years, two months and fourteen days.

The subject of this notice was born in Autauga county, Alabama; professed religion and was baptized into the fellowship of the Bellview Baptist church on the twenty-ninth of August, 1872; was married to R. W. Clary July 2, 1874. Her illness was short but very painful. She bore her sufferings with Christian fortitude, often expressing her firm confidence in a blessed immortality. She calmly bid farewell to her friends and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus.

"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep."

Farewell, dear Fannie! Rest with thy Savior; but we will cherish thy memory until we meet thee in all thy beauty in the resurrection morn. Her husband, mother and sister are left weeping her departure.

R. F. FANCHER.

AT a regular communication of Darlington Lodge, No. 119, of Free and Accepted Masons, held on the ninth day of May, 1874, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It has pleased almighty God, in his inscrutable providence, to remove from among us our highly-esteemed brother, BENJAMIN J. CLINTON; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we, as Free and Accepted Masons, do deeply deplore the loss of our brother, in whose integrity, purity and fidelity as a Mason and as a man we most implicitly confided, and whose memory will ever inspire in the hearts of the brotherhood high feelings of esteem and regard, we bow with becoming humility to the will of him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That we extend to the relatives and friends of our deceased brother, and more especially to his aged and bereaved parents, our sincere and heartfelt sympathies, reminding them that their only source of real comfort and consolation is to be had from our supreme Master above.

Resolved, That as a token of esteem and respect this lodge be clothed in mourning, and that the members wear the usual badge for thirty days.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the parents of our deceased brother.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

MRS. O. F. W. GORTON, daughter of John and Rachel Willmarth, and wife of Joseph Gorton, was born at Seekonk, Massachusetts, June 13, 1817, and died in Waterproof, Louisiana, March 30, 1874.

She was religiously trained by a mother who was a devoted Christian, and in her youth united herself with the Methodist Church, of which she remained a member till death. She came to Natchez with her sister, Mrs. A. F. W. Speer, in the year 1842, and in the following spring was married to Joseph Gorton, of Waterproof, in which place and in Natchez nearly all her after-life was spent.

As a wife and mother she was faithful in the discharge of her duties, deeming no sacrifice of personal comfort too great to make for her family. It could truly be said of her: "Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her." She had many friends, and those who knew her best loved her most. The church will feel her loss, for, though retiring in her disposition, and never seeking prominence, her lively interest and quiet activity in all its enterprises made her one of its most useful members.

During the last years of her life, and particularly after sickness had depressed her spirits, she was sometimes troubled with doubts respecting her acceptance with God. We have reason to believe that at "evening-time" it was "light." Her words to friends during her last days assured them that her mind was at peace; but, had these precious words been wanting, we who had seen her life, and had often overheard her in fervent, wrestling prayer, would have known that she was safe in the arms of One who has said: "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." Her bodily sufferings for several years before her death were great, and were borne with Christian patience. She remarked to a friend: "I have suffered a great deal, but not too much." In a letter to a relative, begun a few weeks before her departure, and left unfinished, she writes: "I pray that we may be enabled to bear our afflictions patiently, and that they may help to fit us for a life above." No doubt they were sanctified to that end. On earth she greatly loved the hymn:

"Come, Thou Fount of every blessing."

Now she has learned the "melodious sonnet sung by flaming tongues above"—the song of the redeemed in heaven.

A.

IT IS never too late to commemorate the death of the pure and good. This we do at this late hour, having observed nothing of the kind, from nearer her home, upon the sad event of the death of Mrs. MARTHA P. RAY, daughter of Hon. T. H. Lewis, all of Opelousas, Louisiana.

The subject of this memoir was born at Opelousas; reared there in the bosom of a large and happy family; converted, at a memorable camp meeting at Plaquemine Bruiee, about the year 1857, having attached herself, years previously, to the Methodist Episcopal Church South; married in the year 1866, and died of pleurisy, December 12, 1873.

We may only glance at a few characteristics of this shining history—a history dawning in the smiles and innocence of early life, and scattering light and joy and blessing all along the winding life-paths of forty-one years.

Sister Martha's character owed much of its beauty and development, doubtless, to an early bereavement—the death of her mother. One after another God had added to the happy band of brothers and sisters, with hardly a missing link; when lo! the radiant center of the family circle was called away, leaving the watch-care, the sacred guardianship of mother, to Martha, now the eldest maiden daughter. Well was the office discharged till the second marriage of her father; and even now the younger children, now grown, feel that they have lost a mother twice. In this relation especially she merits her scriptural name; for if she had a fault it was an excessive anxiety, a troubled carefulness for the comfort and happiness of her household. Always busy for the welfare of others, herself was last in her thought. The unselfish devotion of a mother became the ruling power of her life. No bitter memories stain the daily and nightly pages of that young maternal history. All the members of the family were bound together by a peculiarly ardent family love. Their chief earthly joy was in each other; their earthly paradise was home—a lovely, happy home—recognized at once as such by all who came under that broad and hospitable roof, whether the frequent visitors from other branches of the family, or the minister of Christ as he paused to rest in his round of labors, than whom none was more cordially welcome, or the wayfaring stranger, who was never here denied refreshment and repose, or the orphan, several of whom found here a sweet and genial home indeed. How beautiful is this family devotion, how delightful such a home! Of all these strong family attachments Martha was a representative. She was the genius of her household.

How many of us, to our latest hours, will recall her watchful solicitude for us and our little ones, in sickness and in health—as tender and constant as the fondest mother. How sad to think that such a link in the family ties is broken! So much love is lost at once; none to look for us as she did, none to think upon us as she. The lights in the windows at home are going out; the household is breaking up—departing from view, one by one, like a solemn procession. Earth is getting darker; a gloom is settling down upon the dwelling and pleasant yard and walks and trees and lawn. How painful a silence reigns now in this place once vocal with happy greetings and carols! The place knows them no more. Thus fades, as the flower, all our earthly happiness and glory. Thus passes—but oh! we must not thus dwell on the past. It breaks our hearts. To the future we may turn. Look above; see how they are gathering there—gathering, thank God, without a missing one, where never again a single sad farewell shall make a vacant place in all the rejoicing family circle. Perpetual home! When will we all be there?

Many Christian graces were beautifully illustrated in her life—pure, gentle, good, self-sacrificing, earnest and constant. "Given to hospitality," "thinking no evil," her presence forbade uncharitable criticism. Such reserve was seldom blended with such forwardness of sympathy. Here was a cluster of beaming virtues veiled in a modesty that added to their luster, while it demonstrated a reluctance to praise. Were her picture taken characteristically, one of her hands would be resting on the head of the sorrowing, the other extended to the fallen, her eyes lifted in prayer, and the loved ones grouped around her, intent on the shining example. Her adorning was not with gold and gay apparel, but richer far—"the ornament of good works, and of a meek and quiet spirit, which is of great price."

A marked feature of her Christian experience was a troubled uncertainty. It was characteristic of her. Her burnished view of holiness, her fine appreciation of the high and hidden walks of an intelligent Christian experience, in constant communion with God—all this, joined with a spirit ever ready to exaggerate the slightest omission of duty into a vast desert interval in Christian life, and the slightest fault or frailty into sin, all tended to painful misgivings. She died, however, in peace, as one "lies down to pleasant dreams." Her irreproachable piety is her best epitaph; her life her best eulogy—engraven on many a sorrowing heart, and sacred in the memory of a large circle of bereaved relatives. We tender her afflicted husband our deep sympathy. H. B. FRAZEE.

SONG OF THE GRASS.

BY SARAH ROBERTS.

Here I come creeping, creeping everywhere;
By the dusty road-side,
On the sunny hill-side,
Close by the noisy brook,
In every shady nook,
I come creeping, creeping everywhere.

Here I come creeping, smiling everywhere;
All around the open door,
Where all the aged pour;
Here where the children play,
In the bright and merry May,
I come creeping, creeping everywhere.

Here I come creeping, creeping everywhere;
In the noisy city street
My pleasant face you'll meet,
Cheering the sick at heart,
Toiling his busy part—
Silently creeping, creeping everywhere.

Here I come creeping, creeping everywhere;
You cannot see me coming,
Nor hear my low, sweet humming,
For in the starry night
And the glad morning light
I come quietly creeping everywhere.

Here I come creeping, creeping everywhere;
More welcome than the flowers
In summer's pleasant hours;
The gentle cow is glad,
And the merry bird not sad,
To see me creeping, creeping everywhere.

Here I come creeping, creeping everywhere;
When you're numbered with the dead,
In your still and narrow bed,
In the happy spring I'll come
And deck your silent home—
Creeping, silently creeping everywhere.

Here I come creeping, creeping everywhere;
My humble song of praise
Most joyfully I raise
To him at whose command
I beautify the land,
Creeping, silently creeping everywhere.

Wesleyan Missionary Work.

The Wesleyan missionary anniversary meetings were held in London during the last days of April and the first days of May. The annual meeting was held in Exeter Hall, Monday, May 4. This is always an occasion of great interest, and is distinguished by brilliant and effective speeches, and recitals of successful missionary work. The present meeting was marked by the usual features. The reports on finance and on the progress of the work were satisfactory. The total home and foreign receipts of the society for the year were £167,995 1s. 8d., and the expenditures were £166,458 7s. 5d. The returns from the missionary districts were generally of an encouraging character. The missions in Western Africa, especially on the Gold Coast, had suffered from the Ashantee war, thirteen chapels and three residences having been destroyed, the services more or less interrupted, and some schools temporarily closed. Nevertheless, the statistical returns show increase in the number both of members and of scholars. The following incident, which bears some relation to the "prayer test," is mentioned in the report:

"Abbeokuta, which for several years white men had not been permitted to enter, has been visited by two of our missionaries, who received from the chiefs a hearty welcome, greatly to the encouragement of the native teacher and his congregation. Early in the year the town of Abbeokuta had been attacked by the Dahomians, when the greatest terror prevailed. The defenders of the town, comprising all the men able to bear arms, were ranged in two camps or divisions—the Christians, and the heathen and Mohammedans. The following is from the account sent to the committee from the spot: The walls were not left, day or night; consequently our places of worship were deserted. Instead of the usual services, camp meetings were held, and united prayer assisted from the Christian camp that God would deliver them as of old. It is strange to say, the Dahomian army were suddenly attacked with small-pox; hundreds of the army died of the plague, which at last produced a panic, and the Egbas arose one morning to find the invaders' camp deserted. This circumstance has impressed greatly the heathen mind, for they believe this deliverance was an answer to the prayers of the Christians.'"

The Rev. James R. Santelle, of South Africa, said of the educational difficulties in his mission: "Our Institution at Healdtown is not only our Westminster for the training of native schoolmasters, but also our Richmond on a small scale. We send others our most promising young men to be trained in theology; they are not quite up to the mark yet; they are not able perhaps to construe a Latin verb. But these young men who come out from the institutions show remarkable indications of legal and imaginative power. One or two of them are the most powerful preachers I have ever listened to. One man has been the means of converting over eight hundred of his own countrymen, and the three who were put under my own control worked so laboriously, and yet with such wisdom and prudence, that their support was fully met in less than two years, out of the tickets and contributions from the classes." Of the work of these men he said: "These grand savages, standing six feet out of their shoes—for they have one—have I seen tremble and quiver again to the powerful appeals of the native preachers, and I have often seen these tall sons of Anak ready to come out from their heathen surroundings, held back by the arms by heathen friends, but breaking away from all restraints, covering their heads with blankets, prostrating themselves on the ground, and crying out that God would have mercy on their souls. Then, in that very extravagant way of expressing their feelings, tearing off their armlets, bracelets, beads and all the charms of heathenism, and laying them at the preacher's feet. And when their chiefs have stepped into that liberty, I have rejoiced over them as those rejoice in harvest, and as men rejoice when they divide the spoil. Thus we have gone on, week after week, for some three years, gathering in heathens, and by means of this band of workers one hundred and four have been added to the church out of heathenism. I am only now speaking of one circuit."

And this of the work of a volunteer evangelist: "A young man, recently converted, one day came to my house at Annshaw, and said he had learned to read. I was astonished, for he was still on trial for membership, and had not been baptized. He asked for the New Testament, and then for the chapter and verse of the words of our Lord to Nicodemus. These were pointed out to him, and with his finger on the phrase, 'Ye must be born again,' he repeated it over and over again in his native language, until he said, putting the book under his arm, 'I have got it now, sir,' and away he went. Unknown to us at Annshaw, he went to a valley more than twenty miles away, with the book open, shouting at the top of his voice, in his own language: 'Ye must be born again.' The heathen came out; some ridiculed, some were astonished to see their old companion in heathenism reading a book; it was so strange, so novel, that they were amazed. Others seemed to be more impressed, and, in the words of Nicodemus himself, they said: 'How can these things be?' 'What does it mean? What is it to be born again? Tell us all about it.' Then he told them of his own experience—how he had been brought from darkness to light, and appealed to their knowledge of his previous character, saying: 'You see how I am changed from what I was.' He kneeled down on the grass, with the free wind of heaven around him, which was the symbol of the Spirit, and asked for the gift of the Holy Ghost to enter into their hearts, and so he exhorted and read and prayed every day for three weeks, and never returned home; all unknown to us at Annshaw. But one day, sitting under my veranda, with some of our Annshaw leaders, we heard the sound of Christians singing, the sweet strains of song increasing louder and louder, until we saw a band of people coming. Looking more closely we saw a group of red-ochre people, surrounded by a number of our own Christians, who were running up from all directions to join in the song. It was that young man who, three weeks before, had come for a New Testament, and had gone to that heathen valley, and preached the words of the Lord Jesus with his own experience, bringing back eleven men and women, whose hearts, too, had been impressed by his preaching."—New York Methodist.

Good-Natured Women.

There are certain people, the mention of whose names will always produce a smile, whose praises are on everybody's lips, and to illustrate whose good qualities a thousand tales are told. Among the happy few who thus achieve a blissful immortality, the good-natured woman deserves particular mention; for her shining virtues effect such a deal of positive good, and her mission is so important among the hosts of sour-faced and crabbed people who compose in part society, that a consideration of her merits is indeed a gratifying task.

You can tell her at a glance—the good-natured woman; for a thousand smiles are nestling in her face, and her thought ripples with laughter. Her tongue has been despelled of all its normal sting, and her hands are eager to do another's bidding. She soars above the petty clouds of life, and takes her colors from the hues of a brighter day, like a bird of rare plumage, which floats downward from eastern skies, and enraptures us by its beauty and majesty. In her nature sunshine holds eternal sway, and proclaims its happy laws of peace and charity and good will. Smiles and kind words are her all-powerful messengers. And thus equipped, with magical sunbeams about her, to throw radiance across her path, the smiling missionary performs her labors. Is it to soothe or encourage, to assist or enliven, to calm or propitiate? She is on hand, ready to do her work with all the alertness and alacrity of an Ariel.

Into the composition of the average good-natured woman many elements enter, which vary in intensity in different individuals. In the first place, she is thoroughly unselfish. She does not prate of her sacrifices, and mention her heroism at every breath; she does not trumpet forth her virtues, and offer herself as an example to the maids and matrons of her day; but, dumb to her merits and unconscious of her excellencies, she gives freely what she has to bestow, undeterred by flattery or censure. Without a thought of gain, without any desire for popularity, she hastens on her gentle mission, satisfied if her labors have been crowned with success, and more than repaid in the unuttered blessing which follows her footsteps.

She is also an energetic creature. She likes to bustle about, scattering smiles wherever she goes. She is not listless, spiritless and gloomy, but is the life of the social circle, quick at repartee, but never wounding; ready to parry jest with jest, and amuse with her effervescing fancy and exuberant wit. She likes to have a hand in every game, but only that her happy disposition might have a wider influence. No melancholy can resist her magic. Jaques would have been cured of this disease long before it had reached the meridian of its intensity if he had known her. The evil spirits of envy, discord and spite fly abashed from her presence; but the troop of gentle fairies, angelic shapes of kindness, love and charity, follow in her train. Her bright, cheery voice is in itself a sovereign cure for moodiness, and a flash of those eyes—within whose depths good nature reigns supreme—will exorcise all gloom.

She will not be put down. Her good nature will assert itself under all conditions, for she has the precious gift of making the best of circumstances. Is she poor? She robs poverty of its darkness with the silver lining of a smile. If rich, her happy disposition will banish austerity and pride. Encompassed by sickness, her faith will not relax; in the desolation of death her smile will not forsake her, although her heart be broken with grief. But her sorrows no one need know. Thinking the best of everybody, her good nature is proof against calumny; and even if she be imposed upon, once or twice, she will cheerfully accept the situation, and continue her good work even at a risk of being further victimized. Some critics say that digestion conditions good nature, but her fund of good nature is not exhausted after a late supper and a Welsh rarebit.

She has a good heart, and this is her highest acquirement. A number of qualities, it is true, are hereditary, and temperament, in a vast majority of instances, is a matter wholly beyond our ken. But many qualities can be acquired, and goodness of heart is one of these. This consists not so much in positive ignorance of evil as in happy consciousness of its existence. Whatever she does is with a good intent; in her every action this goodness of heart is manifest. She is content with what she has, and never wastes her time in useless brooding until the wrinkles on her forehead rival in number the quills on a goose's wing. She has a good word to say of everybody, and tries to soften harsh criticism. Scandal she detests, and deceit is about the only thing which will throw her into a little gust of passion; for her nature recoils at the thought of hypocrisy.

The good-natured woman is not perfection; for at times, in days of weakness of the spirit and ardor of the flesh, her good nature may be eclipsed. In some cases, too, her good nature is a sham—only assumed in public to fascinate the susceptible. But with all her imperfections, and in spite of the frequency and ease, too, with which good nature is counterfeited, the class of good-natured women deserves the highest praise. As long as their good nature is more than skin deep, and affects the currents of their being as well as their facial muscles, their influence works grandly for good. Recruits should come from all quarters to their standard; for women can never truly be esteemed unless they possess some of the elements of good nature—the more the better.—Jewish Messenger.

From Earth to Heaven.

How can such imperfect Christians as we are go into that glory and be happy? How can God take us there, so spiritually feeble, so unholy? Our hearts are full of the world. We are selfish, vain, proud, unbelieving, uncharitable. We feel sometimes as if a purgatory, where we could have the dross burned off before we are ushered into that dazzling glory, would be a relief that we would gladly suffer and be purified, rather than find ourselves suddenly in a radiance that would make our imperfections so sadly conspicuous. And then we read that nothing impure can enter heaven. We do not believe that any miraculous change is wrought in our characters by death. As we leave the earth we go to the gate of the golden city. The soul that fretted and murmured, and clung to life just now, is, the next hour, either in heaven or excluded forever. Thus, as we think of what heaven is, and of what we are, and that we must go there immediately after death, and just as we die or not at all, we are led to fear that we shall find no entrance at those gates which "forever bar pollution, sin and shame." And yet we hope we are believers. We know that we love Christ and want to serve him. Can we find any way to reconcile our imperfect hearts and lives with the hope of "meetness" when we die "for the inheritance of the saints in light?" Let us look at this for a moment. What is the holiness of the saints in heaven? It is love to Christ, manifested in praise and in service. They cry: "Thou art worthy, for thou hast redeemed us by thy blood." "They serve him day and night in his temple." They have no bodies to grow weary, no worldly duties or cares to distract their thoughts; no pain or suffering to disturb them; no evil spirits or fleshly lusts or carnal vanities to tempt them. But, on the contrary, every association and influence stimulates the spirit of devotion—all tends to purify and intensify the love that grows in the heart. Now take a poor, imperfect, bed-ridden, weary, timid, murmuring saint from the body, and from the earth, into such a place. Let him take with him only "the soul's generic choice of God," the soul's feeble, fluttering love for Christ, free him at once and forever from all that separated him from God, that dimmed his view of Christ, that distracted his mind and divided his heart, cast off all his moorings to time and sense, to temptation and sin, and would he not float out on the ocean of God's love with a freedom and joy such as he could not experience and scarcely ever dreamed of on the earth?

There have been moments, nay, hours, in our experience here when we were so quickened by Christian sympathy and by the Holy Spirit that we seemed almost translated to heaven. We can recall a communion season, a revival meeting, when our consciousness of our love to Christ and his people, and our faith in their love for us, was full, when we knew that we had passed from death unto life. Now, if we could have been kept under these blessed influences for a day, a week, a year, without any worldly care or bodily pain, or temptation of the evil one, would we not have been saints all that time, as holy and as happy as any in heaven? Now the change is not wrought in us at death, but we are relieved from all that hindered the growth of that germ which grace has planted in our hearts. We are taken when all is favorable to its rapid development, and thus it is that the feeble and imperfect believer here to-day may be the white-robed and golden-crowned harper before the great white throne to-morrow.—Rev. C. E. Babb, D. D., in the Herald and Presbyter.

With most men experience is like the stern-lights of a ship, which only illuminate the path it has traversed.

The love of pleasure betrays us into pain; and many a man, through love of fame, becomes infamous.

Scientific.

The Scientific American advocates the construction of a million-dollar telescope, the largest in the world, which will bring the moon to an apparent distance of eight miles.

In a few months the National Observatory will be equipped with the largest refracting telescope in the world, for which a new tower and dome are now building. The object-glass of the telescope was cast by Messrs. Chance & Brother, Birmingham, England, and finished by Alvan Clark, Cambridgeport, Massachusetts, who have contracted to furnish the instrument for $46,000 in currency. The tube will be of cast-steel, thirty-two feet six inches in length; the object-glass is twenty-six inches in diameter, which is one inch larger than the great English telescope that was constructed by Mr. Cook, and is now located at Gateshead.

The savans of England are watching, with much interest, the excavations near Silchester, which was the Roman capital of southern England. The circuit of the walls was a mile and a half, and they were about sixteen feet high and nine feet in thickness, constructed of large flints set dry in courses two feet deep, on which the mortar of hot lime and powdered tile was poured; layers of stone slabs were used as bonding courses of the different sections. The entrance of the massive gate was twenty-eight feet wide, and the very still has been discovered. In the same way the Forum, Basilica and shops of the traders can be traced by the walls, and in these coins and the eagle of the Roman legion have been found.

Prof. Daniel Draper, director of the Central Park Meteorological Observatory, takes occasion, in his last annual report, to correct a false impression very generally entertained by the public—that the clearing of land diminishes the fall of rain. Comparing the reports of rainfalls from the years 1835 to 1872 it appears that, while during this period the average annual rainfall was 47.62 inches, the average for the last three years of this period was 47.06 inches. These results appear fully to justify Prof. Draper's conclusion that "the widespread public impression that the clearing of land diminishes the volume of rain is not founded on fact." He adds, furthermore, that, although in the last thirty-six years great changes have been made in all those portions of the United States intervening between the Mississippi and the Atlantic ocean, large surfaces having been cleared of forests, and their physical aspect essentially altered, no corresponding diminution in the mean amount of water that has fallen can be traced. This opinion seems also in accord with that of European meteorologists, who assert that the mean rainfall on the western portion of that continent varies little, if at all, when periods of many years are considered. These opinions seem deserving of especial consideration, owing to the fact that the records upon which they are based extend back to the year 1677 in England, 1731 in Scotland, and 1791 in Ireland; while in Paris the annual rainfall was not found to have altered in one hundred and thirty years.

Malleable Glass.—One of the lost arts, which skill and science has for hundreds of years been making efforts to rediscover, is the production of malleable glass. It was mentioned by many ancient writers, especially by Pliny, who speaks of its being indented when thrown on a hard substance, and then hammered into shape again like brass. The world uses a vastly greater amount of glass now than during the early ages, but has never been able to overcome its brittleness. That accomplished, it would probably dispute with iron itself for supremacy as an agent of civilization. A glass-spinner in Vienna has recently made a discovery that may lead to the recovery of the lost link in the chain of early invention. He is manufacturing a thread of this material finer than the fiber of the silk-worm, which is entering largely into the manufacture of a variety of fabrics, such as cushions, carpets, table-cloths, shawls, neckties, figures in brocaded velvet and silk embroidery, tapestry, laces and a multitude of other things. It is as soft as the finest wool, stronger than silk thread, and is not changed by heat, light, moisture or acids, nor liable to fade. So important is the matter deemed that, while the minister of commerce has already organized schools for glass-spinning in various places in Bohemia, and a variety of manufactured articles are now for sale, and will, no doubt, soon reach America. If it shall end in the final rediscovery of malleable glass, so that it can be wrought or rolled into sheets, it will revolutionize much of the world's industry. Indeed no one could safely predict to what uses it might be applied, as the material is plentiful in all lands. Mankind have long waited for it. Let us hope the time is near when so great a boon will be vouchsafed to them.—London Times.

Prayer is the wealth of poverty, the refuge of affliction, the strength of weakness, the light of darkness. It is the oratory that gives power to the pulpit; it is the hand that strikes down satan and breaks the fetters of sin; it turns the scales of fate more than the edge of the sword, the craft of statesmen or the weight of sceptres; it has arrested the wing of Time, turned aside the very scythe of Death, and discharged Heaven's frowning and darkest cloud in a shower of blessings.—Guthrie.

The superfluous blossoms on a fruit-tree are meant to symbolize the large way in which God loves to do pleasant things.

It is needful to trust as well as to pray—to believe that strength will come, to reach out the hand of faith to receive it.

A young woman called, a few days ago, on the pastor of a Reformed church up town to inform him that she was going to join the Church of St. Mary the Virgin, a so-called Protestant Episcopal church of this city; and in the course of her remarks stated that the difference between that church and a Romish church was that there they "said mass in English."—Christian Intelligencer.

The Baroness Burdett Coutts sent Mr. Moody a check for $5,000 as a strong expression of her appreciation of the work which he has been doing in Scotland. The missionaries defray much of the expense of the mission by their own labor.—Zion's Herald.

The Baptist ministers' meeting in Philadelphia a short time ago spent a long time in debating a series of resolutions reiterating their belief in close communion. This grew out of the fact that the Rev. George Dana Boardman, pastor of the First Baptist church, and the most prominent clergyman of that denomination, had expressed his disbelief in the doctrine. After a long and intense debate, which occupies some three columns of the National Baptist, the resolutions were adopted, which perhaps will only widen the disagreement thus so prominently made public.

That the orthodox Jews are not yet ready to accept the Christian's Sunday is very plain, from the letter which Rev. Dr. Sonneschein, of St. Louis, has lately written against the views of Rev. Dr. Kohler, of the "Sinai" congregation in Chicago. The latter, for a couple of months past, has instituted Sunday as well as Saturday services for the convenience of some of his members, who are prevented by "commercial competition" from attending on the Jewish Sabbath. Alluding to Dr. Kohler's statement, that radically reformed Judaism aims only "to make of us good and true men," Dr. Sonneschein asks, with some force: "What right has such a congregation to remain a distinctly Jewish one? Why not drop the Jewish denomination entirely?"

A Roman Catholic Village Polled on "Infallibility."—The Dusseldorf correspondent of the Guardian says: "A somewhat novel method of resolving the religious difficulties of the present age was resorted to recently by the burgermeister of a village in Baden. The inhabitants were summoned to the poll on the question of papal infallibility or anti-infallibility. A hustings was erected outside the parsonage, the mayor opened the business with a speech giving the object of the assembly, then a priest held forth on the dogmatic side of the question, and then the people voted. The whole population could only include 104 electors, and of these 57 recorded their votes, 54 against and 3 for the Vatican dogma. Consequently the absolute majority was against the Pope, and that village will be in future reckoned Old Catholic."

A Lutheran minister in Germany writes to his son, who is a student in the Philadelphia Lutheran Seminary, that he has watched with great interest the progress of the American branch of the church, and then contrasts its brilliant prospects with those of the church in Germany, which to him seem dark. "Our ecclesiastical authorities," he says, "not only open the pulpits and churches to ministers who are unbelieving, and who are openly at variance with our doctrine and confession, but they also look with unfavorable eye upon even the slightest confessional tendency, and by every means endeavor to suppress the same. This is done for the sake of the 'Union,' which is of human origin and which assigns to a confession, at the highest, only a second rank, or, more strictly speaking, considers it merely a secondary matter."

Interesting Statistics.—Latest and best authority gives the population of the globe at 1,350,200,000. In America, 72,800,000; in Europe, 287,000,000; in Asia, 798,600,000; in Africa, 188,000; in Australia and Polynesia, 3,800,000. These people speak about 3,600 different languages, and are cut up into 1,000 different religious sects. The adherents of the principal religions, counting the whole population, are supposed to be nearly thus: Greek Church, 69,692,700; the six other Oriental churches, 6,500,000; Roman Catholics, 195,000,000; Protestants, 97,139,000; Mohammedans, 160,000,000; Buddhists, 340,000,000; other Asiatic religions, 260,000,000; pagans, 200,000,000; Jews, 6,000,000. The following is said to be an approximately correct classification of the adherents of the various churches among English-speaking people: Protestant Episcopalians, 12,500,000; Presbyterians, 11,500,000; Baptists, 10,500,000; Congregationalists, 7,500,000; Methodists, 15,000,000; Roman Catholics, 10,000,000—57,000,000 of Protestants against 10,000,000 of Roman Catholics.

The St. Petersburg Grashdanin expresses great alarm at the spread of Protestantism in Russia. In an article entitled "A New Apostle in the Grand Monde of St. Petersburg," it describes the enthusiastic attachment with which Lord Radstock (who is the "new apostle") has inspired the aristocratic circles of the capital. The ladies of the nobility, says the writer, daily send him dozens of invitations to religious conferences, go in crowds to hear his sermons at the American Church, and sing English psalms with him in his language. The Grashdanin says that it would not have alluded to these matters if what is done by the mothers of the future supporters of the State and by persons occupying eminent positions in Russian society were not of the highest importance to their children and their subordinates. The example of the highest classes, it adds, is apt to have a strong influence on the country generally; already in southern Russia whole villages have virtually gone over to the Protestant religion by forming themselves into a sect named the "Sandists," and a seminary has been formed at Berlin for training Protestant missionaries to convert the Russians.

Advance of Protestantism in France.—Tidings continue to be received of the progress of Protestantism. Even the political papers are noticing that in Lyons the Roman Catholic populations are sending their children to the Protestant schools until they overflow, and new schools conducted by Protestants are being opened. Interesting ordinations of pastors in various towns, and opening of meetings and places of worship, are to be noted. The fiftieth anniversary of the consecration of the Protestant temple at Anduze drew above three thousand Protestants to a joyful religious festival. The town of Epinal, by the influx of Alsacians, needed a new church, which was opened lately just as the Prussian troops had left, and the town was en fete. The prefect and other authorities were present, and Pastor Schmidt, the venerable president of the consistory, who, forty years ago, commenced the Protestant worship in Epinal with twenty hearers, had the joy of placing the Bible in the handsome new building, which he dedicated to the worship of God. An ordination took place on the same occasion. At Evreux Pastor Reliand preaches the gospel in the amphitheater placed by the authorities at his disposal.

A Revival of Mohammedanism. It is well known, says the Baptist Union, that Mohammedanism has been making great progress in India of late years, to the alarm of the Hindoos, and that, instead of being a dying religion, it is undergoing a great and glorious revival. Recent information on the subject is as follows: A census of Bengal lately taken makes the population 67,000,000 instead of 40,000,000, as was estimated. In some districts there are 600 to the square mile. The number of Mohammedans is far in excess of popular estimate, which has counted them at about 15,000,000, while they are found to be 20,664,000. Of all who call themselves Hindoos in faith there are 42,674,000. The Buddhists are 85,000 in number, and the Christians 93,000. Of the aboriginals, included in neither of these classes, there are 2,351,000. It is stated that the Mohammedans, with their armies of missionaries, their theory that all faithful races are equal before God, and their practice of raising any convert at once to full social equality, are becoming so numerous that by 1900 they will be half the population, and ultimately will control the religious destiny of Bengal. Throughout many of the richest districts they are already nearly or quite one-half of the population, and in some they exceed the Hindoos by twenty per cent., the most astounding instance of wholesale conversion in modern history.

The Church in the Summer.

The quarterly meetings are held during the hot weather, as at other times, and it is a favorable season for protracted services in connection with them. The preaching can be out of doors, and, where groves and good water are convenient, "God's first temples" are to be chosen. The freshness and freedom of nature are in accord with the divine word, and lusty singing and hearty praying and the fervid exhortation have room for largest expansion.

Also in connection with the District Conferences, which are mainly held during the summer, there will be large gatherings of the people. Bishops, presiding elders, pastors and a considerable array of official members are likely to be in attendance, and it is a favorable opportunity to review the forces, and to strike for the awakening and conversion of sinners. The business of the District Conference is mostly in the line of devotion, and the aim should be to arouse the Church to her full working capacity, to set on foot the most direct and practical plans for the execution of religious enterprises, and to kindle a revival fire which shall run swiftly through every charge.

The season is favorable for building and repairs. New churches and parsonages should be begun at once where they are needed, and the old ones should be painted and put in good order. It is not a bad sign in business houses to see the notice: "Closed for repairs." A church in city or country should be closed for no other purpose; but for this it indicates thrift and prosperity. Where the services of the painter and carpenter are in demand there is likely to be a liberal and zealous people. The warm weather should be a set time for cleaning up, for the restoration of what time and use have destroyed, and for beautifying. Godliness will not thrive in barns and dilapidated school-houses, and in neglected and dirty shells, where the people are able to have better sanctuaries. Let them furbish up their Sunday school rooms and places of worship, and piety will flourish more healthfully amidst pleasant and tasteful surroundings.

Preparations for camp meetings are now being made. It is well to be in time, so that when the day comes all shall be in readiness for the services. Let them be well advertised by all allowable means, but at the same time not with over-much flourish of trumpets, or with extravagant promises. A camp meeting is a religious gathering, an occasion of worship, where the business is preaching and praying, and the end sought is the edification of believers and the conversion of souls. It would not be to our taste to proclaim the expected presence of noted preachers, or of any bright particular stars. There is a propriety about all this church advertising which becomes the gospel, and which should not be violated. From the information already received, we believe many of these meetings will be held throughout the South during the summer and fall. The more the better. If kept to their true purpose, and prudently managed, they will quicken the whole church and be the means of leading thousands to Christ. Instead of losing ground during the warm months, the camp meeting will contribute to a decided advance. It is not too late now to begin the preparation. In sections where the subject has not been seriously entertained there is time to confer and to devise ways and means. Plainness and economy are to be studied, because they accord with the object sought, and because an enterprise of the sort would be otherwise impracticable.

Within our bounds the ministers' vacation has not come to be recognized as an established custom. Our pastors, in stations and on circuits, pursue their accustomed course of toil. Some of them need rest, and should have a brief respite from labor. But our way is better than the almost universal pastoral desertion in vogue in the North. The people require pastoral care, and need the gospel at one season as much as another, and the comparative leisure of the summer in towns and cities is rather favorable to religious results. Warm weather is not unfriendly to the gospel. The sermon ordinarily should be shorter and of a more lively character, and the entire services varied and brief. The exercise of singing is wakeful, and, where praying and talking are in order, there is no reason why the time should not pass with swiftness and profit. It is a strong temptation with many to make the hot weather an excuse for neglecting church. Where the hottest hours of the day are chosen, and the services are very long, there is some reason. To take away this excuse, let the church hours in summer be suited to the season—earlier than the morning hours in winter, and in the cool of the evening. When well chosen as to time, and wisely measured and adjusted as to character, there is nothing pleasanter than worship in summer.

Perhaps we ought to say a word about the Sunday schools. Could they not meet at cooler hours than they do, and could not the exercises be somewhat varied and abbreviated to suit the temperature? With the thermometer at ninety degrees, it is too much to expect that either teachers or children should pass through the usual routine of two hours and maintain even moderate freshness and interest. And if, as is often expected of them, they go from the school-room to the preaching, how can they fail of going to sleep from sheer exhaustion? In the rural sections the best Sunday school work is done in the summer. The roads are then good, the houses are more comfortable than in winter, and the attendance is at its best. Notwithstanding, let pastors and superintendents be considerate, and choose the cooler hours, and make the lessons not too long.

With the thermometer standing for four months above eighty degrees, there must be some lassitude, and considerable depression of the vital forces. The more need to guard against dullness and indifference in our devotions, and to adapt our means to the conditions which surround us. While the flesh is weak, take care that the spirit be kept strong and lively. While nature compels some degree of relaxation, and more repose than usual, let there be due alertness to guard against spiritual slumber. As for those lucky folk who go to the mountains and the springs, or summer it on the gulf coast, while we covet their blessings, we also have some satisfaction in giving them a word of exhortation. Let them take their religion with them, and keep it in lively exercise. To avoid utter spiritual stagnation, let them read their Bibles and pray in secret more than at home, and seek out opportunities of confessing Christ and of doing good.

Fraternity Illustrated.

The Methodist says: "We once attended a church meeting, of the kind all Methodists know so well, when, after a speech and reply, the master of ceremonies said: 'The next thing in order is to shake hands all round.' Our fraternal delegates have made their addresses to the Conference of the Church South, and the Conference has made a long reply, which ends far better than it begins, and our active brother, Joseph Hillman, of Troy, announces that the next thing in order is 'all to shake hands.' He has devised an International camp meeting, which opens at Round Lake on the eighth of July. He announces also, 'with entire positiveness,' the expected presence there of Bishops Kavanaugh, Pierce, Doggett and Wightman, of the Church South, with Dr. McFerrin, missionary secretary; Bishops Janes, Simpson, Peck, Ames, Haven, Foster, Andrews and Scott, of our own church; Bishop Richardson, of Canada; Bishop Miles and others, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church; Bishop Campbell, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, and Bishop Clinton, of the Zion Church. We hope we have the list of Bishops all right; but if we have not, the fact that we have never had the handling of so many before must be our apology. The lay Bishops are not mentioned, but there will be the primate of them all, Bishop Joseph Hillman, the Metropolitan of Round Lake, who will discharge the duties of host quite as efficiently as my Lord of Canterbury in his Pan-Anglican Synod. Governor Pierrepont and Dr. Alexander Clark will represent the Methodist Protestants, whose church does not have any Bishops; and there is also expected Rev. Epps Tucker, of Alabama, editor of the Congregational Methodist. It used to be said, when some wiseacres would get up a scare: 'We are all running into congregationalism.'—Methodists have already run into it, but it don't seem to hurt. Methodism must be an ethereal spirit, since it finds for itself such various habitations.

"Our friends will all be welcome. With what praises, what thanksgivings, should we assemble! The day was when John Wesley was turned from the churches into the streets, and this is what has come of it. He, the precise scholar, was driven forth to find the common people, and, finding them, he gathered great spoil. And here in the New World what a history we have had! Parted asunder from each other, like Paul and Barnabas, by our repeated contentions, we have been, by an overruling Providence, made one in spirit again. And so let us gather under the open sky, where Methodism began to win its triumphs, and, in such an assembly as this generation has not before seen, praise the God of our fathers once more."

A Romish Bishop on Romish Miracles.

It is a great treat, says the Christian Intelligencer, at last to hear one voice of a Roman Catholic minister and teacher lifted up against the transparent impostures and miserable delusions which in France and elsewhere have fruited out in "shrines" and "miracles" and "pilgrimages." It seemed as if the whole of the Romish clergy had been struck dumb as to these shameful frauds and excitements, so general was their silence regarding them and their apparent connivance with them.

At last a distinguished prelate of the Romish Church has delivered his testimony against them, and we could wish that his wise words might be echoed by the Romish clergy in the United States, so that the people under their charge may be saved from the contagious epidemic of madness, folly and superstition which has raged in France and has even reached our own shores. Monsignor Dupanloup, Bishop of Orleans, has addressed a letter to the clergy of his diocese, leveled against miracles and pilgrimages, and intimating that the only true preventive against them is to be found in a sound, practical, Christian education. We quote some paragraphs from this letter which embody a great deal of wisdom. If only the bishop were less general in his remarks, and would take ground for the universal distribution of the Bible among his people, we might hope for them the true education that would free them forever from such delusions. Says the bishop:

"When great political and social commotions have disturbed men's minds, when unaccustomed calamities have fallen upon a people, when revolutions have shaken a nation to its foundations, excited imaginations begin to work—they strive to penetrate the obscurity of events, to discern the mysterious future, to discover whence are to come the salvation and the Savior they await. Then they abandon reality, in which they see nothing consoling, for the imaginary, in which everything may be seen, especially what is desired; then prophets and workers of wonders arise; visions, oracles and prodigies are multiplied; impostors mingle with sincere illuminati. Souls eager for enlightenment hasten thither where they think to find it; a curious ear is lent to marvelous narratives and to voices professing to come from above; the credulous, and sometimes even the incredulous, are carried away by that deeply-seated desire to penetrate the unknown which is innate in the human breast. Thus does a whole generation banquet upon chimeras, and soon, seized by vain fears, it trembles before the calamities announced as at the approach of the millennium, alternately excited and lulled, according to the dominant mood, by expectations and hopes that nothing serious justifies.

"Let us abide, gentlemen, in the strong simplicity of evangelical faith; let us serve, by resolute and efficacious efforts, our beloved country. In a word, let us be a devoted and energetic generation, intelligent and capable, believing and active, which understands the necessities and the course of human agitations, and does not show itself more alarmed at them than becomes those who ought to borrow from the light of faith a spark of the wisdom and patience of God, and who, without having recourse to vain and suspicious oracles, may find in the history of their forefathers and in memories of the past the secrets of Providence and hopes for the future."

The Hero of Niagara.

THE FULL PARTICULARS OF M'CULLOUGH'S TERRIBLE DANGER AND CONROY'S EXTRAORDINARY RESCUE.

Many of our readers will recollect the prominence given a certain guide of Niagara Falls by Prof. Tyndall, after his return home, in describing his explorations behind the falling waters. That this guide's heroic deed was not overrated we have ample evidence from his courage exhibited yesterday in rescuing William McCullough from a watery grave.

About half-past eleven yesterday morning the citizens of Niagara were shocked by the report that a painter working on the bridge leading to the second Sister Island had fallen into the rapids below and was carried over the falls. Our reporter was soon on the spot, and found the facts somewhat exaggerated. It seems that the painter, who is some sixty years of age, was engaged in painting the bridges spanning the chasms between the three islands known as the Sister Islands. In descending a short ladder to a narrow scaffold beside the bridge, he accidentally stepped one side of the planks and fell to the river below, only a distance of a few feet. In an instant he was carried down the stream toward the falls. George Curtis, a photographer, who was arranging his camera to take a view of the bridge with the painter in his perilous position, heard a cry, and immediately crossed to Goat Island, and ran toward Terrapin Tower, thinking he might possibly approach near enough the shore to receive what he supposed would be a corpse, after going through the turbulent rapids.

The unfortunate man rolled over and over until he reached a deep place a few rods below the bridge, when he disappeared with the exception of his boots. The heavy current swept him on toward the precipice, with equal pace with the photographer, until about forty rods below the bridge, when his head appeared above the water. Not being entirely insensible, he espied a rock about six inches out of the water, and, spreading out his arms, was driven with extreme force on it. In a nearly exhausted condition he raised himself out of the water and sat calmly on the rock. Being not far from shore, Mr. Curtis asked if he was hurt, and received the reply that he was uninjured. Messengers were immediately dispatched to the paper mill for ropes, and in a few minutes nearly the whole village was running toward the scene.

The necessary ropes were soon on the ground, and a young man volunteered to go to the rescue. Fastening the rope around his waist, he started for the rock, but he had gone but a few feet when it was evident that his fragile form could not withstand the fierce current, and he came ashore.

About this time Thomas Conroy, a guide at the Cave of the Winds, appeared on the scene and immediately volunteered to bring Mr. McCullough ashore. Taking the rope in his hand, Conroy started toward the isolated painter, but the force of the current against the rope and himself was even too strong for his strong frame, and he retreated. By this time Mr. McCullough could be seen trembling with the cold, still grasping the putty-knife, to which he had tenaciously held during his rapid descent, and many were afraid he would become chilled through, and not be able to help himself ashore after the rescue. Mr. Conroy now ascended the river a few rods and again started out alone, and succeeded in reaching the unfortunate man. Tying the rope around McCullough's breast, and winding the end twice about his own hand, the two started ashore. They had only gone a few steps when the swift current swept their feet from under them, and many strong hands commenced pulling on the rope.

The fierce current, together with the rapid pulling, immediately caused the heads of both to disappear under water, and in this condition they were both landed safely, amid the cheers of the hundreds who lined the banks. Both persons were nearly suffocated, but soon recovered. Cheer after cheer went up for Conroy, "the hero of Niagara."

A gentleman and lady who were stopping at one of the hotels immediately handed him $15, and in a very short time the amount was raised to something over $100.

Mr. McCullough is aged about sixty years, and a man very highly respected by all who know him. Although this shock to his nervous system is considerable, his personal injuries are very slight. The rock that was his refuge from death for one hour is only two feet square, and will probably be henceforth called "McCullough's Rock." On reaching it Conroy requested the gift of the putty-knife as a souvenir of the occasion, but very much to his regret lost it before getting ashore.

THE Seashore camp meeting, as will be seen from a communication of the trustees, begins on Friday, July 24. All needful information can be found by reference to their notice or by letter addressed to them. Our friends should be in time with their arrangements, so that they can have the full week for religious improvement. We do not think that any should count on the meeting continuing over the second Sunday. It will begin on Friday and probably end on the morning of the Friday following. Make due arrangements for accommodations, and be in time. We make no announcement of preachers expected, but there will be enough of the common sort to preach the word and to point the people to the Lamb of God. The preachers from far and near, Bishops and all, are most cordially invited to come. One important item of preparation is spiritual. Come praying, and seek the gift of power, that our coming may be to purpose. Do not go to the camp meeting to obtain the revival fire, but let Christians take it with them, that sinners may be awakened and converted.

MATTERS in Mexico, says the Methodist, begin to look embarrassing for our Methodist ministers. Recently the Monitor, of the City of Mexico—a liberal paper which has heretofore sustained the Protestant movement—censured the Rev. W. H. Cooper for some remarks he had made in one of his sermons in rebuke of the intolerance of the Roman Catholic party. Mr. Cooper addressed a note to the Journal correcting its version of his remarks, and explaining that he had intended them to be applied only to the intolerant Catholics, and not to the Mexican people as a whole. The Monitor was not satisfied, but refused to publish Mr. Cooper's letter, and retorted with a not very intelligent reference to crimes, the outgrowth of religious feuds, which had been occasionally committed in the United States. The incident is significant chiefly on account of the position which the Monitor had previously occupied.

REV. DR. JOHN HALL will succeed Rev. Henry Ward Beecher as lecturer on preaching before the Yale divinity students next year.

THE truly independent man is he who is free from obligations.

South American Correspondence.

SALTINKO, PROV. OF SAN PAULO, BRAZIL, February 27, 1874.

MR. EDITOR: It is now nearly seven years since I was in New Orleans, and yet you or some other kind friend has done me the great favor of sending me several packages of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE lately, and I write this to thank you for so doing. You can have but little idea how much of a treat it is to get the ADVOCATE. From some cause I have failed in all my efforts, for the last eight months, to get the Nashville Advocate. I sent, in August last, the money (ten milreas—$5) to pay for it for myself and a friend, but I have never had a single copy of the paper; hence it was a rare treat to get your paper from New Orleans.

I have now been residing in this province nearly five years, and there are, I suppose, five hundred Americans in this part of the province, within a radius of thirty miles from where I live. With few exceptions we were all very poor when we settled here, but from the first the health of all has been remarkably good. To us, at least, who came from North America, it seems strange that a majority of our families should have such uninterrupted health that we have never needed a physician since we came to San Paulo.

Most of our people are getting comfortably situated, and are on the way to wealth and plenty. We are in a peaceful and plentiful land, where all the necessaries and comforts of life are easily obtained by the industrious and frugal. The exciting strifes and unrest in our native South is all unknown here.

Something more than two years ago I organized a Methodist church near Santa Barbara, some twenty miles from where I reside. At the first we had only some sixteen members; now we have thirty-two, and have excellent meetings. Of late the indications are all encouraging. A semi-monthly prayer meeting, on Saturday, is well attended. Some ride six or seven miles to be there. On last Sabbath we had a happy time; all Christians seemed to be specially comforted, and we hope to see a gracious revival among us ere long.

The Presbyterians, Northern and Southern, have missions in this province, and they are doing much better than the most sanguine ever hoped for. In Campinas the Southern Presbyterians have been preaching for about three years, and they now have some sixty or seventy church members (Brazilians,) and a full house on every Sabbath. Their church in Campinas will soon be self-supporting. Besides, they have a very prosperous school of high grade, with just as many pupils as they can accommodate (eighty or ninety,) and they are building a large college, which will enable them to accommodate several hundred pupils. A part of the building will be ready for use in three or four months. Here is an open field for hundreds of laborers in this empire, and many thousands are ready to receive the gospel. O that our own Southern Methodism had a few missionaries here, for "now is the accepted time" to preach the gospel to this people!

In regard to myself, I find I came here too late in life to learn a new language well enough to preach in it, and I have to confine myself to preaching in English. I preach nearly every Sabbath, and have often to make long rides in preaching and visiting. I live on a farm in the country, and am supported by the labor of myself and my boys. We expect to gather twenty full bales of cotton this fall. We have commenced picking, and have a surplus of corn and meat. I yet live in a rough house, but we have a pretty situation, very pleasant. While I write I hear the roar of the pretty water-falls that are in sight. Here in this quiet, beautiful spot "the song of the waters" is unceasing. I have rich land, beautifully located—no ditching needed, no wet lands; almost no sickness at all; never have needed a doctor in the province; fine pastures all the year; abundance of milk and butter. "And the best of all, God is with us." Two of my children have this year made a profession of religion and joined the church. "I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever." I keep two of my children at the Presbyterian school in Campinas. The school is one of the very best. It is a heavy tax on my limited means, but I could hardly find a better school in the States.

I still miss the society of the preachers very much, but occasionally I go to Campinas, nearly thirty miles distant, and spend a day and a night with my brethren of the Southern Presbyterian Board. These visits are always pleasant to me. There are three of these men there, and they are truly good men, "full of faith and of the Holy Ghost." Sometimes we look over the world, and think and talk of the blessed work of grace going on in almost all lands. Then I thank God, and take fresh courage.

How strange it seems to me that I see much in our church papers in relation to Asia and Africa, while I scarcely ever see one line about South America! Why is this so?

There are many thousands of English, Scotch and Irish south of us in the Argentine Confederation, and I am quite sure they have very little Protestant preaching, if any; and there are no Methodist preachers, so far as I can learn, in all that extensive country. But for the great distance (nearly one thousand miles by land,) I should try to visit that country and learn for myself the true state of affairs. Why do our Protestant churches in North America and England send missionaries to all other lands, even to Europe, while all this beautiful world (South America) is unnoticed?

May God bless you, strengthen your hands and comfort your heart in all your work.

Yours truly, J. E. NEWMAN.

SALTINKO, PROV. OF SAN PAULO, BRAZIL, March 17, 1874.

MR. EDITOR: Since I wrote you the preceding letter I have been to Campinas, and while there I spent some time with our Presbyterian brethren in that city. They have recently organized a new church in a village some thirty-five miles north of Campinas. They are very much pleased with the prospect in that vicinity, and hope to build up a good church there. The population is largely of the better class, and many of them are anxious to hear the gospel. I am sure, if their Board of Missions at home could see what an open field there is here, they would greatly strengthen this mission.

Is there no hope of our Church South starting a mission in this country? Surely, if the condition of this country was known, they would send us a few men to make a beginning.

Ere this reaches you you will have seen the severe verdict of the Supreme Court of Brazil in the case of Bishop Vital, the Bishop of Pernambuco. He was tried by six judges of the Supreme Court, and sentenced to four years' hard labor in the penitentiary. So far as I can learn, the sentence is approved by a large majority of the people. I am in hopes the Emperor will commute the sentence to banishment. The conduct of the young Bishop was certainly provoking as well as in violation of law; but his offense was in its nature political as well as religious and perpetual banishment is enough. This would be no serious punishment in many cases, but to banish a Romish priest or bishop from Brazil is a severe punishment indeed. In comparison with most other countries it is a paradise; at least it has been so hitherto.

Petitions are now being circulated over the country requesting the government to make a complete separation of Church and State, and to make marriage a civil contract. So you see we are moving—moving in the right direction.

Yours, J. E. NEWMAN.

A COLLECTION OF HYMNS AND TUNES FOR PUBLIC, SOCIAL AND DOMESTIC WORSHIP. Nashville, Tennessee: Published by A. H. Redford, agent, for the Methodist Episcopal Church South, 1874.

From what competent judges tell us about this work, we are led to the conclusion that it is nearly all that could be desired. Our hymns, as found in the hymn-book, are all here, and tunes appropriate are put on the same page. None of the best old tunes have been left out, while a great many new ones of surpassing excellence are incorporated. The arrangement is according to the hymn-book as far as the regular hymns are concerned, but there are in addition forty pages of miscellany, designated as part 4, which contains many choice anthems, chants and popular melodies. Of the last are the Old Ship of Zion, The Land of Beulah, Going Home, Sweeping Through the Gates, Sweet Hour of Prayer, Over There, and others.

Many of the tunes bear the names of men well known in our church. As we run over the index we come upon such noted laymen as Magruder, Paul, Garland, Foster, McCoy and Branch, and the clerical names are numerous and familiar. All the Bishops, living and dead, are on this roll of honor, and many of the rank and file in our Southern ministry. There is a tune which bears the name of Parker—a rather incongruous association, to be sure!—and another which more fittingly rejoices in the name of Harp. A humble man might not be much surprised to have children, churches and neighborhoods called after him, but to be handed down to posterity, and to be made famous by a tune, is something bordering on the marvelous. If not famous hereafter, he is certainly noted. A very pleasant feature of the book this will prove to be, which brings up the memory of the loved and honored men of our Israel, as we turn the pages and join in the song. The General Conference of 1870 ordered the preparation and publication of a hymn and tune-book, and Dr. J. M. Bennett, Dr. Thomas O. Summers and Dr. W. P. Harrison were appointed a committee to compile it. Dr. Bennett, to whom the responsibility of selecting the tunes had been intrusted, had made some progress in the preparation of materials when he was removed by death. His place was supplied by Prof. McIntosh, who is well known to the connection as a composer and teacher of sacred music, and the joint editor, with Dr. Haygood, of our Sunday school music-books. The collection is by authority of the General Conference, it bears the official indorsement of our Bishops, and is the hymn and tune-book of our church. It is a needed book, calculated to revive and improve congregational singing, and to supply the best means of that praise which is due to the triune God. Families and churches should be liberally supplied with the work, and our pastors especially should see that choirs and congregations are furnished as soon as possible. The work is sold by our Depository, 110 and 112 Camp street, and by the Publishing House at Nashville. Octavo, muslin, $18 per dozen; octavo, boards, $15 per dozen; single copies in muslin, $2; single copies in boards, $1.50.

COMMENCEMENT OF THE SOUTHERN UNIVERSITY.—Mr. Editor: Perhaps some of your readers may desire to know the programme of our commencement exercises. We would be glad, therefore, if you would announce that Bishop Marvin will preach the commencement sermon on June 28. The annual oration before the societies will be delivered by Prof. H. D. Mooro. Rev. Christian Keener will address the alumni. Everybody is invited.

Very truly yours,

T. O. SUMMERS, JR.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

WASHINGTON, June 5.—The Fort St. Philip canal bill that has passed is the one introduced by Mr. McCrary, May 16. The points of the bill are: that work is to commence at some point below Fort St. Philip and continue to the gulf at some convenient point in Breton Pass, constructed, maintained and supervised at the expense of the government. Twenty thousand dollars have been appropriated for the preliminary survey. The canal is to be kept open day and night, free of toll to one and all vessels whose governments are in commercial amity with ours.

Louisiana shall cede its jurisdiction over the lands required by the canal and the military works for its defense.

The cost shall not exceed $8,000 000. No money is to be expended until the entire work is under contract, and $8,000 000 is appropriated, one-third of which may be expended each year.

Contracts go to the lowest and best bidder, and are to be awarded by the Secretary of War.

No contract is to be considered unless accompanied by $15,000 forfeit.

Contractors shall work according to the plans and under the direction of the Engineer Department.

The canal shall be completed within three years from the commencement thereof.

After a discussion of the bill to improve the navigation of the mouth of the Mississippi river, there was substituted for the Eads jetty project a bill for the construction of the Fort St. Philip canal and for its maintenance as a national public highway, and passed by a vote of 146 to 86.

ST. LOUIS, June 5.—The bridge across the Mississippi river is opened for the passage of wagons. A steady stream of vehicles is crossing.

DANVILLE, KY., June 5.—The citizens of Burnside Point and the railroad men are fighting. One railroad man was killed and one wounded. Two citizens were wounded. Many armed citizens declare the railroaders must leave the country.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The steamer Colon, from Aspinwall, on the twenty-ninth ultimo, reports all quiet on the Isthmus. Several important changes have been made in the administration and officers of the Panama railroad. Superintendent Centre had resigned. An attempted revolution in Costa Rica has been suppressed, and the leaders arrested and punished.

The Honduras Congress has confirmed Selva as provisional president. A plot for revolt in Callao has been defeated by the authorities.

The boundary disputes of Chili with Bolivia and the Argentine Confederation were to be settled by arbitration.

SAN FRANCISCO June 7.—The temperance men and women carried the local option election in Brooklyn, Alameda county, by a majority of eighty-three. Women crusaders from this city and Oakland took a very active part. The results of these elections are sensibly felt. Several leading distilleries here have reduced their daily product nearly one-third. The wholesale business with the interior will suffer severely.

PHILADELPHIA, June 8.—The Grand Lodge of Masons subscribed $1,000 to the relief of the people of the flooded Southwest.

ST. LOUIS, June 9.—The first locomotive and a train of three passenger coaches, containing a number of invited guests and representatives of the press, crossed the bridge this evening, to test the track which has just been laid. General Sherman, who was one of the party, drove the last spike connecting the bridge track with that of the Vandalia railroad. The train was run over the bridge several times and about one-third way into the tunnel this side, finally halting on the center span of the bridge, where toasts were hoisted in and brief speeches made. The occasion passed off in a satisfactory manner. A scientific testing of the bridge, with immense weights and various appliances known to the profession, will occur in a few days.

FOREIGN.

PARIS, June 5.—The American pilgrims to-day went in a procession to the grotto of Our Lady of Lourdes. They carried the American flag. Large crowds witnessed the procession, uncovering and saluting the pilgrims with loud cheers as they passed. The sacred banner, which was brought from America, was presented at the shrine. At the close of the ceremonies the pilgrims proceeded to Civita Vecchia. All are in good health.

LONDON, June 8.—The Standard's Paris correspondent says: "The manifest of the Left Center, calling for the declaration of a republic or the dissolution of the Assembly, causes the greatest sensation since the overthrow of Thiers. It is generally thought its effect will be to hasten the day of dissolution and improve the prospect of the establishment of a regular government. The Conservatives are dismayed."

THE appended telegram, received by Governor Kellogg on Saturday, will be found brimful of cheering words, of a hope which, reawakened by the action of the House in passing the Fort St. Philip canal bill, will be here found intensified:

WASHINGTON, June 6, 1874.

Governor W. Pitt Kellogg:

Mr. Morey's bill, appointing a commission of engineers to report a plan for the permanent construction of the levees by the general government, has just passed the House by a large majority.

Seashore Camp Ground.

The next camp meeting on the Seashore camp ground, two miles west of Biloxi, Mississippi, will commence on Friday, the twenty-fourth of July.

The trustees call attention to the following rules:

All persons having selected lots for the purpose of building tents are required to report to the trustees, one month prior to the date of the commencement of the camp meeting, whether they intend to occupy the lot; failing so to give notice, the lot will be forfeited and appropriated to other parties.

All tents erected are required to be of value not less than $40, and shall be completed at least one week before the commencement of the camp meeting.

The Rev. William M. Jordan is appointed surveyor of the camp ground, and allowed $1.50 each for fixing the lines of the lots, to be paid by the lot-holder; and to supervise the location of each tent, with reference to the preservation of the shade-trees.

Pleasantly situated lots are furnished free to persons desiring to erect permanent tents thereon.

A limited number of small tents unfurnished, and cots, with sheet and pillow, will be for rent at reasonable prices; and public boarding and lodging, to a limited extent, will be provided at a reasonable charge.

All persons attending the camp meeting are advised to arrange for their comfort by the erection of their own private tent, or making other suitable arrangements beforehand, and to this end are requested to correspond with the trustees: Dr. J. J. Lyons, J. H. Keller, B. O. L. Rayne, New Orleans, Louisiana; William Otis, John Ellsworth, Mobile, Alabama; H. C. Vaughn, Moss Point, Mississippi; G. W. W. Goodwyn, treasurer, Phillip Hallaran, secretary, W. H. Foster, president, New Orleans, Louisiana.

The Galt House, Louisville.

MR. EDITOR: To the traveling public, who have "to pay as they go," it is desirable to know where they can get what they pay for. Such a house is the Galt House, in Louisville, Kentucky. In its abundance, accommodations, style and attentions it really seems to leave little to be desired. All that money, taste and thoughtfulness can furnish is provided. Its gentlemanly conductor, Colonel Johnson, spares no pains to meet all the wants and wishes of his patrons; hence his guests are generally of the most genteel and respectable classes of society. Having recently spent several weeks at this house, the writer speaks advisedly.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—All cruelty is infectious and progressive in its tendency, whether to animals or human beings. The man who commences a course of cruelty by tormenting a mule or other animal will increase by continuing that or similar barbarities until he may take a fiendish pleasure in torturing his own child. As kindness will gain strength and sweetness from each act it performs, whether to man or beast, so will cruelty gather intensity and bitterness by each and every act which imposes needless suffering on any creature; therefore to restrain cruelty to animals is a direct and effectual means of restraining all cruelty. To stop it entirely would be to dry up at the fountain one of the most prolific streams of evil. Indifference to the comfort of anything dependent upon us, and helplessly in our power, is twin brother to murder. Indifference to the suffering of anything in our power is murder itself in spirit, and only needs actual or supposed immunity from punishment to break out in action.

ST. LOUIS, VANDALIA, TERRE HAUTE AND INDIANAPOLIS ROUTE.—Parties going East by way of St. Louis will find this one of the finest lines in the country, as well as one of the shortest. The facilities presented cannot be surpassed. The roadway and rolling-stock are as near perfection as human hand can make them, and, as a consequence, the comfort of the traveler is assured and safely guaranteed. As the season approaches for the usual summer jaunt, the question of routes naturally comes up, and we would suggest to our readers the above line, so ably managed by Major John E. Simpson.

UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA.—We call attention to the card of the Medical Department of the University of Louisiana. No institution on this continent, in our opinion, is better suited to prepare those who expect to practice among diseases, endemic or epidemic, in Southern latitudes than this. FURNITURE REMOVED AND STORED.—The attention of our readers, who may wish to have their furniture stored or removed, is directed to the advertisement of Mr. John G. Wire, 159 Poydras street, who proposes to remove, repair, pack, ship, etc., at moderate rates.

DR. J. W. LEFFINGWELL, in a card which appears in this issue of our paper, continues the offer of his services to this community. His Medical and Surgical Institute and Dispensary are now located at 230 Canal street, where he treats cases of the throat, nose and lungs.

Preliminary Lectures on Clinical Medicine and Surgery will be delivered in the amphitheater of the great Charity Hospital, beginning on the Twentieth of October, without any charge to the students. The anatomical rooms will be opened at the same time. The members of the Faculty are visiting physicians and surgeons to the Charity Hospital, and give instruction daily at the bedside of the sick.

FEES.—As the practical advantages afforded in New Orleans for a thorough acquaintance with all the branches of medicine are quite as great as if not superior to those offered by the schools of New York and Philadelphia, the same fees are demanded. For all the Lectures, $140; Matriculation, $5; Practical Anatomy, $10; Graduation, $30. Payment required in advance.

THE GREATEST MEDICAL DISCOVERY
OF THE AGE.

MR. KENNEDY, OF ROXBURY, HAS discovered in one of our common pasture-weeds a remedy that cures

EVERY KIND OF HUMOR,
FROM
The Worst Scrofula Down to a Common Pimple.

He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases, and never failed except in two cases (both thunderhumor.) He has now in his possession over one hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.

One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of Pimples on the face.

Two or three bottles will clear the system of biles.

Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst Canker in the mouth or stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Erysipelas.

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all Humor in the Eyes.

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the Ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running Ulcers.

One bottle will cure scaly eruption of the Skin.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the worst kind of Ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate case of Rheumatism.

Three to four bottles are warranted to cure Salt Rheum.

Five to eight bottles will cure the worst case of Scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken.

ROXBURY, MASS.

DEAR MADAM: The reputation of the Medical Discovery in curing all kinds of Humors is so well established, by the unanimous voice of all who have ever used it, that I need not say anything on the subject, as the most skillful physicians and the most careful druggists in the country are unanimous in its praise.

In presenting the Medical Discovery to your notice, I do it with a full knowledge of its curative power in relieving all, and curing most of those diseases to which you are unfortunately so liable. That most excruciating disease to an affectionate mother,

Nursing Sore Mouth,

is cured as if by a miracle. Your own temper is restored to its natural sweetness, and your babe from short and fretful naps to calm and sweet slumbers; and the Medical Discovery becomes a fountain of blessing to your husband and household. In the more advanced stages of

Canker

it extends to the stomach, causing

Dyspepsia,

which is nothing but canker in the stomach; then to the intestines and

Kidneys,

creating a sinking, gone feeling, and an indifference even to the cares of your family. Your stomach is

Raw and Inflamed,

your food distresses you, and you can only take certain kinds, and even of that your system does not get half the nourishment it contains, as the acrimonious third of the canker eats it up; then your complexion loses its bloom and becomes sallow or greenish, and your best day is gone. For want of nourishment your system becomes loose and flabby, and the fibers of your body become relaxed. Then follow a train of diseases which the Medical Discovery is peculiarly adapted to

Cure:

Palpitation of the heart, pain in the side, weakness of the spine and small of the back, pain of the hip-joint when you retire, irregularity of the bowels, and also that most excruciating of diseases,

The Piles.

How many thousands of poor women are suffering from this disease and pining away in miserable life, and their next-door neighbor does not know the cause. I wish to impress on your mind that good old proverb: "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." In you have both the preventive and the cure, with this great and good quality: that it will never, under any circumstances, do you any injury.

No change of diet is ever necessary. Eat the best you can get, and enough of it.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—Adults, one tablespoonful per day; children over ten years, dessertspoonful; children from five to eight years, teaspoonful. As no directions can be applicable to all constitutions, take sufficient to operate on the bowels twice a day. Yours truly,

DONALD KENNEDY.

THE SWEETEST NAME.

I asked a little darling child:
"Which is the sweetest name?"
And from her lips, without a pause,
The accents Jesus came.
"And do you know," continued I,
"One who that name doth own?"
"I do, I do!" she sweetly said;
"He sits on heaven's bright throne."

"And why does he, my precious child,
The name of Jesus bear?"
A smile at once lit up her face,
So pleasing and so fair.
"He bears that name," her answer was,
"Because he shed his blood
To save the wretched and the lost,
And bring them nigh to God.

"The name my parents gave to me
Sounds pleasant to my ear;
I would not change it, for I love
My parents' name to hear.
But since I knew that Jesus died
And suffered grief and shame
To save my soul—beyond e'en that I love his precious name."

The Green Pelisse.

When I was a little girl, many years ago, I read a nice little story, and, though it has been a long time since I read it, I have not forgotten it. I will endeavor to tell the children who may read your paper one very much like it. I am sure all will agree with me in thinking that no one can be really happy who is not good or tries not to be good; and I hope my little story, although it is very simple, will help to make children happy. I shall call it

THE GREEN PELISSE.

Paris, the capital of France, is not only the most elegant city of Europe, but of the world. It contains many superb buildings, and elegant gardens and boulevards or walks. The garden of the Tuileries is one of the most celebrated; it is much frequented by all classes of people, and many happy children sport about its bright parterres or flower-beds.

One day in early summer a lady and her little daughter came into the garden to promenade, and enjoy the sights and sounds around them. when they were overtaken by quite a severe storm of wind and rain. To protect themselves from its violence they entered one of the summer houses or alcoves which are in these gardens. They had been there only a short time when a lady of charming appearance came in for protection from the storm. She was handsomely dressed in a full suit of green—bonnet, parasol, overdress, were all of green. She took a seat near the lady, and, with winning affability and grace, entered into conversation. The time passed pleasantly within, notwithstanding the storm was severe. After awhile the mother of the little girl untied a parcel of very nice cherries, and, handing them to her daughter, said: "Offer them, my dear, to the lady, and always remember that everything is doubly sweet when shared with others." The little girl did her mother's bidding cheerfully and gracefully, and the cherries were accepted by the lady and enjoyed by them all. After the rain was over, and the sun again shining, pleasant "adieux" were said, and they separated for their different destinations. During the evening, while the lady and her daughter were sitting in their tasteful parlor reading and working, a servant handed in a package that had been left at the door. It was addressed: "To the little girl who had so generously divided with others her cherries." Of course the mother and daughter were much pleased, and anxious to know from whom the package came. On opening it was found to contain beautiful books and pretty toys, and a card with these words written on it: "Everything is doubly sweet when shared with others;" signed, "Green Pelisse." All the information the servant could give was that a footman in livery had handed in the package without a word. For several days the same thing was repeated. Lovely flowers, rare birds in beautiful cages, choice music, delicious fruits were sent, with the invariable accompaniment of a card with the same words: "Everything is doubly sweet when shared with others." The little girl, with a happy smile, said to her mamma: "Did you ever think, because I handed a lady a few cherries, that I would receive so many beautiful things?" Her mother replied: "No, my dear; but you see the 'Green Pelisse' thinks that everything is doubly sweet when shared with others." Many and fruitless efforts were made by the lady to find out their friend, but at last they were gratified. A loud ring at the bell was heard, and a servant in rich livery left a box, in which was contained a velvet case. They opened it eagerly, and, to their great delight, discovered a beautifully-painted miniature of a beautiful woman. On the back of it (it was set elegantly in gold) was engraved the oft-repeated sentence: "Everything is doubly sweet when shared with others." Of course the original of this lovely picture was the "Green Pelisse." And who do you think she was? No less a personage than one of the royal princesses. She was driving about the garden when the storm arose, and, as we remember, she also took refuge in the same place as the lady and her little daughter had done, and was so pleased with them and the sentiments expressed by the mother that she determined to find out who they were, and bade her servant follow them and bring her their address.

The day after the miniature was received an elegant carriage was sent to bring them to the palace of the Tuileries. Of course the invitation was accepted, for a royal invitation is, you know, in other words, a command, and from this time a warm friendship grew up between the princess and the lady, and when, in after years, the little girl had grown to be a woman she became one of the favorite attendants of this beloved princess, who was always her devoted friend. So we see, from this little story, that kindness and generosity meet often with their reward even in this world. I trust all the children who may chance to read this little story will follow its teachings, not for earthly rewards, but because we are told in the Bible to "be kindly affectioned one to another in brotherly love;" and, although none of us may have royal personages for our friends and patrons, we will have the testimony of a good conscience, which is far above pearls or rubies, and, above all, will have the King of kings to be our friend and father.—Christian Union.

The Peasant and the Rose.

A peasant at the foot of the Alps was one day led to accompany an old friend up the mountain-side as far as they could climb. There he lighted on a beautiful rose, such as he had never seen before. It was so delicate in color. And he was surprised to find, on examining it, that it had no thorn, like the roses that grew in the gardens below.

"Ah," said he, "this is a prize—a rose without a thorn. Why that's what folks have been wishing for ever so long. Now I shall have something none of my neighbors will show the like of. It is small, but care and culture can do much for size."

To all this his friend said nothing.

With no little labor the peasant dug up the plant and carried it carefully home. That very night he tore up his best double rose, his wife's favorite flower, out of the bed before the door of their cottage, and planted this one in its stead.

"The soil is so good there," he said, "it is sure to come to perfection."

So he watched it and watered it till his proper work was getting to be neglected. And his wife began to hate the sight of the bush, and said so to her husband one night as they sat together in the lamplight.

And next morning, when the peasant examined his rose more carefully than ever, he found thorns beginning to grow upon it, and at once accused his wife of winking at a jealous neighbor carrying away the prize and putting a worthless rose in its stead. But he would not be defeated. He set out that very day to climb the mountain and seek for another thornless rose; and, having found it after much labor, he came home and pulled out the suspected bush, and planted this one in its place. And again he watched and watered, till his poor wife lost all patience with him and threatened to tear up the rose-tree. And in a few days thorns appeared once more. There was no peace in the house any longer. The man spent nearly all his time, while his wife worked harder and harder for their daily bread, in seeking for thornless roses on the mountain—and he nearly filled his garden with them—and the neighbors laughed as he went about early and late watering them. And when at length autumn came his beds were filled with stunted, thorny bushes, which he was ashamed to look upon. Now he remembered his old friend's silence when he found the first rose on the mountain, and he set off to have his opinion. His friend listened patiently, and then said:

"My dear friend, there's no good in trying to train Alpine dwarf roses, and but little good arguing with a man who fancies he has made a discovery and will outstrip all his neighbors. Let us beware of such vanity. It was there you erred at the first, and see the trouble it has brought you into. Experience is a dear schoolmistress, but a right down good one. Go home and kiss your wife and set to your old jobs again."

The peasant shook his old friend heartily by the hand, and went home humbled in heart, and never sought after thornless roses more.—Good Words.

THE BRAVE SAILOR LAD.—A few days out from New York a great ship was overtaken by a terrible storm, which lasted nearly a week.

One day, at the height of the tempest, the rigging at the mainmast-head got tangled, and some one had to go up and straighten it. The mate called a boy belonging to the ship and ordered him aloft.

The lad touched his cap, but hesitated a moment; he cast one frightened glance up and down at the swaying mast and furious sea, and then rushed across the deck and down into the forecastle. In about two minutes he appeared, and without a word seized the ratlins—the rope-ladders of the vessel—and flew up the rigging like a squirrel. With dizzy eyes the weather-beaten crew watched the poor boy at this fearful height. "He will never come down alive," they said to each other.

But in twenty minutes the perilous job was done, and the boy safely descended, and, straightening himself up, with a smile on his face walked to the stern of the ship.

"What did you go below for when ordered aloft?" asked a passenger of the brave boy.

"I went—to pray," replied the boy with a blush and a quiver of the lip.

WHERE does the salt on our dinner-tables come from? In the first place, two very strange things were joined together to make it—a silvery metal called sodium and a poisonous yellowish gas called chlorine. This queer metal will swim on the surface of water in little dancing globules, which soon take fire and vanish in blue flame; but no sooner is it breathed upon by the poisonous gas than both vanish, and leave in their place the little crystals of salt, without which life could not be sustained.

Salt is found in immense quantities in the mines of Poland, Norway and Spain, where it is quarried like coal, and is quite pure; but a great deal is found mixed with clay and sand, and has to be purified by dissolving it and then evaporating the water. In Germany and in our own country are many valuable salt springs, which hold the salt in solution, and lakes around which the salt constantly forms in solid blocks. These solid crystals must be ground fine before they are fit for table use.

Trees and plants need salt as well as human beings; but there are great salt plains where nothing can grow, like the great region in South America, containing more than twenty thousand square miles; and another in the heart of Persia, covered with glittering crystals of salt, and which have been thought to be the beds of great oceans, whose waters have been drained away by volcanoes.

Farm, Garden and Household.

Management of Ducks.

Having raised nearly all the leading varieties of ducks for the last six or eight years, and in very limited accommodations, perhaps I can make plain my method to all interested. A great deal has been written about the importance of a large pond or stream in raising ducks, and the folly of keeping them without water. In my own case I have proved by experience that a tub or pail kept full is all that is necessary to rear ducks with perfect success. I have won numberless prizes upon ducks which have never been in the water since they were hatched. With regard to the duck-house, many standard works on poultry advise a ground or brick floor in preference to one of plank. I have tried all three plans, and find that the ground or brick floor in a duck-house will bring on paralysis, rheumatism and many other complaints.

I have the floor of my house made of inch plank, raised one foot or more from the ground on stone piers, thus avoiding all dampness. This plan also enables a terrier to "clean out" the rats, which would otherwise burrow under the building. Large windows are placed on the south, the doors opening under such windows—opening to a small "run" or "waddle." In winter the floor is covered with a thin bedding of hay; in summer with sawdust, which, being an excellent absorbent, renders the air at all times sweet and pure. When the bedding becomes foul it is swept out, and the floor washed with hot water.

After buying every kind of grain, I have found that oats will produce larger numbers of eggs where all other food has failed. The best way to feed oats is in a pail of water; the exercise given the ducks by feeding in this way will keep them in perfect health. The first food for ducklings when hatched should be the yolk of a hard-boiled egg, and when a week old oat meal is excellent for them. When young they should be cooped up until the sun is up, on account of the wet grass, which chills and ruins more young fowls of all kinds than any other cause. When three or four weeks old they may be liberated with the mother, and they will soon learn to go with the old ducks. Ducklings should never be housed at night with the old ducks, as they are liable to persecution from them.—F. W. B., in Ohio Farmer.

Grapes.

In grape-raising people seem to go to extremes in management. A few years ago the poor plant was in leading-strings. It dared not make one free growth, but it was pinched and twisted into all sorts of ways. Now the "prune-not-at-all" maxims are getting headway, and this is as bad, if not worse. First, grape-growing was such a mystery it took a lifetime to study it, and the "old vigneron" was an awfully sublime sort of a personage. He is now among the unfrocked and unreverenced. But there is great art in good grape treatment, and yet this art is founded on a very few simple principles. For instance, leaves are necessary to healthy growth; but two leaves three inches wide are not of equal value to one leaf of six inches. To get these strong leaves, see that the number of sprouts be limited. If two buds push from one eye, pinch out the weakest whenever it appears. The other will be strengthened by this protective policy, and the laws of trade result in favor of larger and better leaves on the leaf that follows. Allow no one shoot to grow stronger than another. If there are indications of this, pinch off its top. While it stops to wonder what you mean by such summary conduct, the weaker fellows will profit to take what properly belongs to them. There is little more science in summer-pruning than this; but it takes some experience, joined with common sense, to apply it. This, indeed, is where the true art comes in.

From time to time new modes of grafting spring into existence, and are made much of by those who delight in the curious. But they are of little practical value. Cleft-grafting and whip-grafting—either of these is, after all, as good as any new notion. It may serve a useful purpose to note that grafting may be continued up to midsummer, if only the scions are kept from pushing their buds by being nearly buried in the ground.—Gardeners' Monthly.

Sweet Potatoes.

A correspondent of the Rural Sun made the following interesting trial with sweet potatoes:

"In 1871 I cut the vines from the potatoes of all but one row, before sun up, the morning of the first frost; dug and housed the potatoes the same day, spreading thinly on planks. The reserved row was dug after all the moisture had apparently dried from the vines (not yet cut from the potato;) potatoes housed alongside of first lot. I neither weighed nor measured, but examined daily, and concluded that one-eighth of the first lot rotted before freezing weather, and not one per cent. of the last dug. The crop of 1872 was similarly treated, and very similar results were being obtained, when open doors allowed the whole to freeze and rot.

"My experiment of 1873 was as follows: 24 pounds dug before frost; 24 pounds dug after a partially killing frost; 12 pounds dug after the vines had dried up; 12 pounds dug after the ground had been twice frozen. On December 16 first lot weighed 18 pounds; second lot, 16 pounds 12 ounces; third lot, 12 pounds 10 ounces; fourth lot, 10 pounds 4 ounces.

"The above deficit includes the drying of the sound potatoes, also No. 3 shows a gain in weight, probably by one potato falling from lot No. 2. Of course that detracts from the minute completeness of the experiment (as no one can claim that a potato can increase in weight, no matter when dug,) but before weighing I had, from daily examination and removal of rotten potatoes, concluded that No. 1 was probably keeping best, No. 4 second best, if not equally well with No. 1, No. 2 third best, and No. 4 rotting most, while the general crop rotted but little. I am still strengthened in my opinion that frost-killed vines do not injure the potatoes, if left attached until they dry. In my experiment I have not properly tested potatoes dug before any frost.

"I will add that the vines of those potatoes dug after freezing, where joining the potato, were filled with natural milky sap, apparently sweet."

HOW TO MAKE TOAST.—A dish of good toast is a rarity and is an enjoyment. For breakfast few things surpass it to those who are accustomed to that dish at that meal. It is light, digestible and reliable, and is not very expensive. A cup of tea or coffee, with a baked Spitzenburg, or a dish of any other subacid in addition, will make a satisfactory meal to a reasonable man. In toasting bread the following rules should be observed: Warm your bread well by changing the sides of the slice when heated through, brown as is desired. There should be rather little than much browning, and the slices should be quite thin, say a quarter or three-eighths of an inch, no more. But do not scorch; avoid that in all cases. The philosophy in browning is to take your time until you are done. Where the toast accumulates keep in a hot dish, but use as soon as possible. What is desirable in toast is the rich color and flavor formed by changing the starch into dextrine or gum. Heat evaporates moisture in bread as well as elsewhere. The moisture that escapes from toast leaves the bread light, soft and porous inside.

REMEDY FOR NERVOUS HEADACHE.—A well-known Kentucky minister, subject to severe spells of nervous headache, was in our office the other day, says an exchange, during one of those attacks. Major Brown, of Mexico, was present, and proposed to relieve him in five minutes, which he did most effectually. The following is the prescription: "Take a dessertspoonful of common soda, such as is used for making bread, and dissolve it thoroughly in a quart of cold water. With this thoroughly shampoo the head for about five minutes, scratching the skin of the head and the back of the neck well with the finger-nails. Then rinse the head with clear, cold water." Major Brown says that he has used this remedy in perhaps a thousand cases since 1852, and never once failed to give relief in five or ten minutes. This remedy is for nervous headache, and is not for those afflictions of the head arising from deranged stomachs.

HOW TO COOK CRANBERRIES.—Always select ripe berries. The red ones only are ripe. If a few white berries, with their bitter acid, are mingled along with the ripe berries, they will effectually demoralize the entire dish. To a quart of ripe berries, carefully selected, add a pint of water, and boil gently in a porcelain kettle until about done. Now add a pound of crushed sugar, and continue the boiling for five minutes, till the sugar is melted and thoroughly amalgamated with the cranberries and juice. When done, turn them into a deep dish and set them aside to cool, after which they may be used for pies, tarts or sauce, as wanted. By not putting in the sugar until the berries are about done, the bright crimson color is retained; whereas, by putting in the sugar in the first place, and stewing it with the berries, the sauce becomes dark; consequently it is not near so attractive when it comes upon the table.—Nelly, in Cincinnati Gazette.

PUMPKIN PIE.—Select a pumpkin which has a deep, rich color, and firm, close texture. Stew and sift in the ordinary manner; add as much boiling milk as will make it about one-third thicker than for common pumpkin pie. Sweeten with equal quantities of sugar and molasses, and bake about one hour in a hot oven.

Note.—Those who will try this method will be surprised to find how delicious a pie can be made without eggs, ginger or spices of any kind. The milk being turned boiling hot upon the pumpkin causes it to swell in baking, so that it is as light and nice as though eggs had been used.

DISEASES OF THE BLOOD.

"The blood is the life." When the source is corrupted, the painful and sorrow-producing effects are visible in many shapes. The multifarious forms in which it manifests itself would form subjects upon which I might write volumes. But as all the varied forms of disease which depend upon bad blood are cured or best treated by such medicines as take up from this fluid and excrete from the system the noxious elements, it is not of practical importance that I should describe each. For instance, medical authors describe about fifty varieties of skin disease; but, as they all require for their cure very similar treatment, it is of no practical utility to know just what name to apply to a certain form of skin disease, so you know how best to cure it. Then, again, I might go on and describe various kinds of scrofulous sores, fever sores, white swellings, enlarged glands, and ulcers of varying appearance; might describe how virulent poison may show itself in various forms of eruptions, ulcers, sore throat, bony tumors, etc; but as all these various-appearing manifestations of bad blood are cured by a uniform means, I deem such a course unnecessary. Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the great fountain of life, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength and soundness of constitution will all return to us. For this purpose Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets are pre-eminently the articles needed. They are warranted to cure tetter, salt rheum, scald head, St. Anthony's fire, rose rash or erysipelas, ring worms, pimples, blotches, spots, eruptions, pustules, boils, carbuncles, sore eyes, rough skin, scurf, scrofulous sores and swellings, fever sores, white swellings, tumors, old sores or swellings, affections of the skin, throat and bones, and ulcers of the liver, stomach, kidneys and lungs

TO THE SUFFERERS WITH RHEUMATISM.

In view of the numberless sufferers afflicted with this painful malady, I feel induced to offer to the public my "ANTI-RHEUMATIC MIXTURE," which medicine proves to be the only successful remedy in this line, for it always gives instant relief, and in most cases cures permanently.

During the last fifteen years I have cured thousands of people, in this State and city, of this painful disease, with this medicine; and, what astonishes most, the patient recovered by the use of a single bottle of it. This medicine cures nothing but Rheumatism, and should the patient not receive by using the first bottle of it, that patient is not afflicted with Rheumatism at all. This being the first time of making my discovery known to the public after fifteen years of most successful results, I hope the sufferers will take advantage of this rare remedy, and by doing so add their names to the thousands already cured by it.

MONOCHROMATIC PICTURES.
These Pictures, for beauty, durability and cheapness, take the lead of all other photographic inventions. Chemists and Photographers have vainly tried to introduce them in perfected form, and it is but recently that they were presented in New Orleans by Mr. H. BUSCH, of California, in such perfection of finish as to defy the criticism of connoisseurs in the Fine Arts.
Having secured the services of the above-named gentleman, I beg to announce to the public that I am now prepared to produce by this new discovery counterfeit presentments which, for fidelity to the original, will rival the touch of the great masters of art.
My prices are, for life size, $10; for life-size bust, $5; cabinet, $1; enlarging from card or small-sized tin-type into, with 8x10 frame complete, $3. Enameled cards and work in the latest styles also executed. Those wishing Pictures can send negatives.

MACHINERY, TIES, ETC.

IMPROVED

EAGLE COTTON GINS.

The great popularity of the EAGLE COTTON GINS is established from the well-known fact that they are the most reliable, strongest and best built Cotton Gins ever made. The Eagle Cotton Gin runs lighter than any other gin, thus having a great advantage for planters who wish to run by horse power. All the numerous planters who use the Eagle Cotton Gin will certify to the fact that when their cotton is sent to market it always brings the highest market price, as no other gin can produce a liner or a better sample of cotton than the Eagle Cotton Gins. Over seventeen thousand of the Eagle Cotton Gins have been made and sold. During a period of twenty years the undersigned has had the agency of the Eagle Cotton Gin in New Orleans. He has never had a gin returned or rejected out of the immense number sold. The saw cylinders of all the Eagle Cotton Gins are twelve inches in diameter, which is two inches larger than most other kinds of gins, thus giving our forty-saw gin more teeth, and they are more than equal to the fifty-saw gins of other makers, who use only a ten-inch cylinder, and the same great advantage of the twelve-inch cylinder in larger-sized gins can be easily estimated. Planters who wish a reliable cotton gin, with an established reputation, can purchase an Eagle Cotton Gin with a certainty that they are not making an untried experiment, but will obtain a cotton gin which is indorsed by the oldest and largest planters in the country as the best in use. A large stock of the Eagle Cotton Gins are kept on sale in New Orleans, ready for immediate shipment. Planters should be particular to state if they want right or left-hand motion gins.

COTTON.—The following are the arrivals since the fifth instant:

Louisiana and Mississippi	bales...	2,116
Arkansas		59
Mobile		816
Texas		102
Total		3,093

On Saturday the telegrams received up to noon were not of a tenor to have much influence on the market, but the subsequent dispatch reporting a decline of ⅛c. in spots at New York, together with a falling off of 1-16@5-32c. in futures, and 5-16@6-16 per cent. in sterling, had a depressing influence, requiring only a slight modification in our quotations for good ordinary and low middling. On Monday the sales were confined to 600 bales, divided among five buyers. Strict ordinary to good ordinary sold at 14¼c. An offer of 15⅝c. was refused for a high style of strict good ordinary. On Tuesday the market was depressed by a decline of 1-16d. at Liverpool and ⅛c. in spots at New York, but, as factors met the demand more freely, the sales embraced 1,250 bales, taken by nine buyers at irregular prices, some good staple showing no falling off, while the bulk of the business was at a decline of ⅛c., to which we have conformed our quotations. Good ordinary sold at 15c., and good ordinary to strict good ordinary at 15⅛c.

The above makes an aggregate for the past three days of 2,809 bales, against 4,650 for the corresponding time last week and 5,530 the week before.

The receipts proper at this port since the first of September, exclusive of the arrivals from Mobile, Florida and Texas, are 1,197,761 bales, against 1,188,216 bales to the same date last year, and the increase in the receipts at all the ports up to the latest dates, as compared with last year, is 275,748 bales. In the exports from the United States to foreign countries, as compared with the same date last year, there is an increase of 21,371 to Great Britain, of 118,261 to France, and of 120,279 to other foreign ports. VOL. 20. NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1874. NO. 25.

News of the Week.

DOMESTIC.

AUBURN, June 11.—The sixth annual Episcopal Convention of central New York diocess, which has been in session here, adjourned sine die this morning, after adopting very strong resolutions in opposition to ritualism.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 11.—The synod of the Reformed Church to-day took action unfavorable to the proposed union with the Presbyterian Church, and adjourned.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., June 11.—The Farmers' Convention platform declares a gold basis a fallacy, and should be abandoned. It calls for an unlimited issue of government currency, and the withdrawal of all bank and local currency. A full State ticket was nominated.

SHREVEPORT, LA., June 12.—A thousand pounds of nitro-glycerine, in the government magazine, four miles above the city, exploded to-day with terrific force. The concussion was so great that the whole population rushed into the streets. Houses were shaken, windows broken, etc. No one being in the vicinity of the magazine at the time, no lives were lost.

NEW YORK, June 13.—The superintendent of the Seamen's Retreat at Stapleton, Staten Island, has received the following communication from a friend on the Illinois:

"Sitka, May 7.—On our return to Sitka we picked up the crew of the United States schooner Margaretta, and brought them to Sitka, with those portions of the wreck which the Indians did not steal, such as chains, windlass, etc. The Indians in Sitka are now fighting with one another.

"Fighting has lasted for three days. They have thrown up barracks of rocks, etc. In the fight this morning three men were killed and two wounded. Our steamer is anchored between the two parties, who are fighting within fifty yards of the beach. They only fight when the tide is out. This morning I watched them from our steamer, with a glass, and saw them carry off the dead, and at noon I saw them burn the bodies. It being customary among these Indians to burn their dead.

"In their fighting they use principally knives and spears. There is no telling where they will stop. The United States troops do not interfere to stop them, for fear of trouble from them."

WASHINGTON, June 15.—The joint committee of the two houses on the Mississippi levees, at a meeting held to-day, authorized the chairman, Mr. Alcorn, to report an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill when it comes before the Senate, appropriating $1,000,000 for rebuilding the Mississippi levees, the money to be expended under direction of the Secretary of War. The amendment will undoubtedly be adopted.

WASHINGTON, June 15.—There was a joint session of the levee committee this morning, and the Senate committee have agreed to report in favor of the Morey levee bill, and of the appropriation of $2,000,000 to rebuild the broken levees this session.

JAMES LONGSTREET.
PAUL O. HEBERT.
M. JEFF. THOMPSON.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A letter from Rome, dated May 30, says: The Free Masons of Italy have held in Rome, the present week, the annual election of administrator of affairs of their order. It appears by the report that there are about eighty lodges in the kingdom, and their number as well as initiation members are constantly increasing. The hostility of the church to this fraternity, instead of hindering its prosperity, seems to promote it. Steps are about to be taken for building in Rome a temple or central place of meeting, so as to perfect the organization of the order."

John Harper, senior member of the firm of Harper Bros., is seriously ill of paralysis.

FOREIGN.

ROME, June 12.—The American pilgrims and leading members of the Society for the Propagation of Catholic Interests in the United States met today at the palace of Cardinal Barnabo. The cardinal made an address, praising the pilgrims for their zeal and courage, and distributed certificates of membership of the society. Prince Lancillotti welcomed the new members, and Bishop Dwenger returned thanks. The pilgrims gave presented to the Pope $100,000 in money, besides a collar of gold nuggets from the American miners. The pilgrims leave Rome on the twentieth instant.

LONDON, June 12.—A special to the Times from Spain says General Concha and staff have left Legrono for Cuenca.

Thirty thousand national troops are marching on the Amezcoa valley. The Carlist army, under command of Dorregary, numbers twenty-four thousand men.

A dispatch from Paris to the Times says that the Left Center to-day will probably introduce a bill, the first clause of which will provide for the organization of a republic according to the bill of 1873; the second fixes the date of the dissolution of the present Assembly.

The Gazette de France says a civil war will be the immediate consequence of a dissolution of the Assembly.

HALIFAX, June 13.—Vessels arriving at Halifax and other Nova Scotia ports during the present season report passing an unusual number of icebergs at sea. The captain of a bark recently arrived at Sydney, Cape Breton, reports that east of Grand Bank his vessel encountered a berg of immense size, being four miles long, two miles wide and about four hundred feet high.

MADRID, June 13.—The Imparcial says that, in the event of the death of the Pope, the Spanish government will, in the election of his successor, claim the privilege of veto that was formerly accorded to the King of Castile.

MADRID, June 16.—The rumors of the evacuation of Estella by the Carlists are not confirmed. General Concha is preparing to attack the town immediately at three different points.

It is reported that a battle has commenced at Estella, and is proceeding advantageously to the Republicans.

The End at Last.

THE VERDICT IN THE GRANT PARISH CASE—CRUIKSHANK, HADNOT AND IRWIN GUILTY.

At nine o'clock on Tuesday morning, June 9, the jury in the above case, having expressed a desire to be again instructed in some legal points, were called into court, and the judge again read his charge to them, remarking at the close that they were bound to agree upon a verdict, and that he would perform his duty to the United States by keeping them in till such time as a verdict was agreed upon.

THE VERDICT.

Last night, June 10, at half-past eight o'clock, the jury returned a verdict—contrary to general expectation, as it was generally supposed they would follow the example of their illustrious predecessors, and "agree to disagree." The announcement that a verdict would be rendered had the effect of assembling an immense crowd, numbering fully two thousand people, who congregated in the customhouse, blocking up the stairways, corridors and banquette, eagerly awaiting the announcement of the result of the jury's deliberations, and on whose honor hung the fate of the eight men who have for over eight months languished in a prison—whether they would be found guilty, or whether innocent men had been arrested and thrown in jail, whose only crime consisted of being white and residents of Grant parish. The prisoners, Wm. Cruikshank, William Irwin, John P. Hadnot, Clement Penn, Prudhommo Lemoine, Donas Lemoine, Oscar Gibbons and John Hickman were accordingly sent for, and who can tell the agony they endured, the hopes and fears that in turn racked their breasts, during the journey from the parish prison to the customhouse, and with what eager expectancy they must have awaited the foreman of the jury answer the usual interrogation: "Gentlemen of the jury, is this your verdict?" and when in a clear voice the verdict was read aloud, for the moment, self was their first thought, the tumultuous feeling of joy that took possession of the acquitted, and the expiring hopes of those found guilty, are indescribable. The verdict was as follows:

William Cruikshank, John P. Hadnot and William Irwin guilty of the first sixteen counts. The first eight counts consist of banding together, and the second eight with conspiracy; and not guilty of the other sixteen, which are like the first half, except they charge that in carrying out these intents they killed a negro, named Alexander Tilghman; therefore their punishment is fine or imprisonment, or both.

Donas Lemoine, Prudhomme Lemoine, Clement Penn, Oscar Gibbons and John Hickman not guilty of all the counts.

Thus ended the last act in the tragedy at Colfax.—New Orleans Times.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to say to all ministers purposing to attend our commencement exercises that they will confer a favor by giving us their names at once, that we may provide homes for them. I shall be glad to greet you on that occasion.

PRACTICAL JOKE BY A FISH.—A gentleman living on the Savannah river, Georgia, was in the habit of sending his negroes down the river to fish with nets, as the tide served. On one occasion two of his boys reached the fishing-ground before the tide had fallen sufficiently for their purposes. Coffee always goes to sleep when he has nothing else to do. So, pushing a pole into the mud, they tied the canoe thereto, and, lying down, intended to sleep until the tide served. But along came a huge devil-fish, which grubbed up the pole, and, tucking it under his flipper, began towing the canoe and its contents toward the deep water. When the negroes awoke they were terrified well-nigh out of their wits. They were proceeding to sea at the rate of about four miles an hour, but the power propelling the canoe was wholly invisible. The first impulse was to jump overboard, but it occurred to them in time, fortunately, that they were unable to swim. Finally the rope by which master devil-fish was towing them was cut, and they reached the land in a pitiable state of terror.

An individual of this species has been known to take up the hedge of a small schooner and carry it for upward of a mile, towing the vessel that distance, when he dropped the anchor, apparently fatigued with the amusement.—The Galaxy.

Notes from England.

MR. EDITOR: Here, as well as with you, cremation is receiving some attention, and has its advocates. Bishop Fraser, of Manchester, is in favor of it. Canon Liddon, one of the most attractive preachers in London, opposes it. Sir Henry Thompson, an eminent English physician, appears in the Cotemporary Review elaborately in support of it. It is not popular. It will never be in general favor. All the teaching of Scripture in reference to the glorious doctrine of the resurrection recognizes the inhumation of the body. The usage is as old as the death of the first man, and will never, to any considerable extent, be supplanted by cremation.

The missionary and other religious meetings are in full blast now in London. All the meetings so far have been largely attended and very enthusiastic. Dr. Punshon made the collection speech at the Wesleyan anniversary, and also addressed the meeting of the United Methodist Free Churches. William Arthur preached the missionary sermon for the Primitive Methodists, and Dr. Oswald Dykes for the Wesleyans. Dr. Dykes is a Presbyterian.

Efforts are being made to throw open the universities to women, and the premier (Disraeli) has been memorialized by a large number of eminent Scotch professors to give his support thereto. Women should not be excluded from any educational advantages whatever.

The Rev. Thomas Meredith, of the Irish Wesleyan Conference, and uncle to two able and popular ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North,) has just died, full of years and full of honors. He was an excellent Christian gentleman, an earnest preacher and a watchful pastor. He had been forty-six years in the ministry.

The Irish Church synod has just closed its sessions in Dublin. Alterations in the burial and baptismal services were made, and slight changes in other places in the prayer-book were effected. The Bishops were all opposed to any change, but they waived their right of veto out of deference to an influence which they fear and cannot control.

DAYTON, ALABAMA.—Mr. Editor: We have just closed a meeting of several days at Dayton. A number of persons were converted; eight joined the church. Bro. Briggs, presiding elder of the district, and Bro. Glenn, of Uniontown, assisted in the meeting. Yours in Christ.

PATTERSONVILLE, LOUISIANA.—Mr. Editor: Truly the lines have fallen to us in pleasant places. Since our arrival at this place we have been wonderfully blessed. This good people have received us kindly, and used their utmost to make us comfortable.

The parsonage we found wanting almost all the articles necessary for housekeeping. It is now being gradually supplied with the useful. Friends are kind in supplying our wants. When we arrived we were almost penniless, yet we have not wanted. Though the water rose high and caused much distress in some parts of the parish, yet Pattersonville has not been inundated.

Our heavenly Father hath visited us with his presence and given a refreshing shower of divine love, which was wonderfully and gloriously manifested in our recent revival. Sinners were convicted, mourners converted and the church very much revived. Our services commenced on Friday preceding the twenty-third of May, which was the time of our second quarterly meeting, and were protracted until Thursday, the fourth of June. Bro. Cobb, our presiding elder, was with us and did effective work. Being worn down by sickness, however, he left us on Tuesday night for Franklin, the place of his next appointment.

The result of our meeting was seven accessions to the church and eight conversions. The meeting closed with several penitents at the altar. Pray for us, that the good work may continue until all are converted in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Yours in Christ,

R. A. DAVIS.

COTTON AND CORN.—Encouraging Prospects of the Replanting in the Overflowed Districts.—The subjoined letter was received by Hon. Charles Clinton, State auditor, from Mr. Colwell, State tax collector in the parish of West Baton Rouge:

"WEST BATON ROUGE, June 13, 1874.

"DEAR SIR: The water has already subsided on the cultivated fields of this parish, and leaving water only in the swamps or uncultivated lands.

"A great many planters or farmers, who at first thought they would lose all their crops by the water rising so rapidly, are now able to make one-half or two-thirds of a crop. Those parties who were not overflowed were benefited by procuring labor at small wages.

"As a general thing the farmers in the overflowed districts have planted, and are yet planting that part of their land that was overflowed, in cotton and corn. The most of the cotton and corn planted on the overflowed land is up and doing well."

Numerous letters of like import are received daily at the auditor's office.—New Orleans Times.

Letter from Texas.

DEAR SIR: Yours of February 28 is before me.

1. We have society in Texas as elsewhere—in some places good, excellent; in some indifferent, and in others bad; some, it may be, very bad; but in most places it is considerably mixed. From what I know of Mississippi—and I have lived there—you may find just as good and just as bad as you will there, for some of the best, some of the worst, and some of the most entirely indifferent citizens of your State have transferred their citizenship to this, and may all have found or created a congenial society. There are bands of thieves and cutthroats said to be roaming or located somewhere in the State; but this country has been or is getting to be very uncomfortable to such. Some of them have been rope-climbing until they became stationary in the air some three or four feet above the ground, and some have sought for refuge in the mountain fastnesses farther west. I understand that New Mexico and Colorado are favorite resorts of this gentry. In this (Hood) county, and in the bounds of my circuit, you may find neighborhoods of good, clever and religious people, at least up to the average of Southern society. There are many neighborhoods with which I have no acquaintance.

2. In this county are several excellent schools. At Granbury, the county seat, is located the Weatherford District High School of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, under the charge of the Rev. William P. Wilson, formerly of the Missouri, but before that of the Alabama Conference. We have been hoping for a grand educational success at this point. At the Thorp Sulphur Springs, a summer resort, is a Campbellite institution, of which its patrons seem to be quite proud. It is under the charge of Messrs. Clarke. Perhaps in almost every neighborhood of any size a school is kept up part of the year; in some of them for the full ten months.

3. We have much choice land, which, when well cultivated, in seasonable years will produce, per acre, of wheat, 25 to 30 bushels—average, 15; corn, 40 to 50 bushels—average, 25; cotton, 500 pounds lint—average, 300. Some of our land is worthless, some indifferent.

4. We have excellent water—some springs, some creeks, that run all the year, and the Brazos river, which never runs dry. Some of the water has lime in it; not much, as it is in some other portions of the State. Much of it is free from lime.

5. Improved farms, with small cabins, may be bought for from $10 to $15 per acre; unimproved for from $1 to $5 or $6.

6. We have in this country some sandy land, covered almost exclusively with post oak. The creek and river valleys are either destitute of timber or are covered with a young growth. The first bottom or overflow is sometimes heavily timbered, mostly with elm, then burr oak, cottonwood and some others. Much live oak and mesquite is found in various places. We get our lumber mostly from east Texas, Kansas and Florida. The house that I live in is built of elm, oak and cottonwood. We call it "native lumber," and we call such a house "raw-hide." There is a considerable quantity of juniper or mountain cedar on the sides of the mountains. It is much culled.

7. We have more than enough saw mills to meet the demand. Also several splendid merchant mills; some run by water and several by steam. They get enough grinding to keep them going about two days in the week; perhaps considerably more for a season. People are coming in so rapidly that others will be needed after awhile.

8. We have a splendid range for all sorts of stock. You would be astonished to see the horses and cattle that got no wintering beyond what they picked up on the prairie. I think that I have never seen so fat cattle in Mississippi, on the best range after the most favorable fall, as are now running at large over the prairie. I hardly see how horses, cattle, hogs, sheep or goats could do better.

9. We have a fair proportion of game and fish—deer, turkeys, opossums, prairie chickens or grouse, partridges, cougars, wild cats, wolves, raccoons, foxes, and occasionally you might meet a bear, if you would be very diligent while they are on the travel. But you will have to be very attentive to catch a sight of any of them.

10. The soil produces vegetables splendidly, but, as in every other country, these need the proper care and suitable seasons. So far as tried, fruit-trees do well. Apples have not yet been suitably tried. It is splendid for grapes. Several native varieties produce a great abundance. There are some very fine native plums, I am credibly informed.

11. I suppose the healthfulness of this part of country is almost unsurpassed on the globe.

12. Hood is a new county, cut out of Erath, Parker and Johnson, and, it may be, Palo Pinto. The Brazos river runs through it.

I believe that I have answered all your questions, I hope, satisfactorily.

Yours truly, S. D. AKIN.

HAD it been an evil thing to suffer wrong, God would not have enjoined it upon us. Books and Periodicals.

OUR CHURCH IN SANDBURG. By S. W. Moore, D. D., of the Memphis Conference. With an introduction by Thomas O. Summers, D. D. Nashville, Tennessee: Southern Methodist Publishing House, 1874.

We have waited for time to read this volume, but must not wait longer. It is good reading for the heated term, as our sampling indicates, and we hasten to commend it. It is something after the manner of Post Oak Circuit, and immensely entertaining, and also good for edifying. As we met Dr. Moore at Louisville we have a picture of the author in our mind's eye, and this will lend additional interest to us in the more thorough reading. It is a book that Methodists will understand and appreciate perfectly, but outsiders will find it first-rate for a leisure hour. Get the work and take it as an exhilarating tonic during these melting June days. Order from the Publishing House, Nashville, or from the Depository, New Orleans.

THE CIRCUIT RIDER. A tale of the heroic age. By Edward Eggleston. New York: J. B. Ford & Co., 1874.

We have read the work with considerable interest, but at the same time with some degree of disappointment. It is not of the highest order of fictitious writing, nor as a reproduction of the heroic age of Methodism is it equal to the theme. There is a lack in the delineation of character, and a tameness in the outcome that fall below expectation. Nevertheless, it has some excellencies, and a great deal of popular power. If fiction can subserve religion and be made the ally of the truth, this story will do some good. Already it counts its tens of thousands of readers, and certainly we could wish it a still larger circulation. For sale by Ellis, New Orleans.

OUR PRIZE BOOK—HEIRS OF THE KINGDOM. By Mrs. Mary Stuart Smith. Edited by Attiens G Haygood, D. D. Nashville, Tennessee: Published by A. H. Redford, agent, 1874.

A good little book, beautiful in type, paper and binding, and most delightful in the matter and style of its contents. It is, for the most part, addressed to children, abounds in illustrative anecdotes, and will be sure to entertain the youngest scholar in the Sunday school. Parents and teachers should supply themselves with it to read to their children and pupils, and also to bestow it as a gift to young friends. The last chapter is addressed to adults, and we could wish that all for whom it is intended might give it a prayerful perusal.

THE PROMISE AND THE PROMISER. By Anna Shipton. Published by Warren & Wyman, 13 Bible House, New York.

A very useful book, and helpful to all who are earnestly seeking the full enjoyment of a life of faith.

WAITING HOURS is by the same author and publishers as the above. It is for devout readers, and, we should judge, a profitable little volume.

KINDERGARTEN TOYS, AND HOW TO USE THEM, is an interesting pamphlet, published by E. Steiger, New York.

OUR Nashville Sunday school publications for June are of an excellent quality. The Magazine especially is filled with instructive matter. An article by Bishop Marvin, on "The Teacher's Work," is suggestive and to the point.

GO OR DIE is the rather startling title of a pamphlet on missions, by David C. Kelley, D. D., of the Tennessee Conference. Dr. Haygood's Go or Send took the prize, but of the four or five other manuscripts of great merit Go or Die was one. It contains eighty-four duodecimo pages, and embraces the scriptural obligations, the literature, statistics and argument of the subject treated. The work is well calculated to awaken and deepen the missionary spirit in the church, and our Publishing House has wisely put it in print. Price, twenty cents per single copy; per dozen, $2. Usual discount to preachers.

THE SOUTHERN REVIEW for April has reached us only through a copy which we were fortunate enough to buy while in Louisville in May. The contents are as follows: 1. Dogma and Literature; 2. Wonders of Deep Sea Exploration; 3. The Cremation Art; 4. History of Infant Baptism; 5. The Women of the Arabs; 6. The Best Government the World Ever Saw, or Christian Statesmanship; 7. Mary Somerville; 8. The Cummins Movement; 9. Notices of New Books.

LITTELL'S LIVING AGE.—Among the notable articles contained in the last two weekly numbers of the Living Age are the following: The French Press (newspapers during the Revolution,) Cornhill Magazine; Lamartine, by the author of Mirabeau, Temple Bar; Some Old-Fashioned Parsons, Fraser; English Foreign Policy, Spectator; The Fiji Islands, Pall Mall Gazette; Exotic English, Chambers' Journal; The Indian Famine, Economist; Our First Great Novelist, Macmillan; Mendelssohn, by Ferdinand Hiller, Macmillan; The Women and the Universities, Spectator; The Reply of Achilles to the Envoys of Agamemnon, by Hon. Gladstone, Cotemporary Review; Twinkling of the Stars, Academy; Ritualism, by Llewelyn Davies, etc., with Alice Lorraine, a Tale of the South Downs, and installments of A Rose in June, and of the Story of Valentine and his Brother, poetry and miscellany.

WE HAVE RECEIVED Cook's Excursionist, and Home and Foreign Tourist Advertiser, American edition, published monthly by Cook, Son & Jenkins, 261 Broadway, New York. The enterprise of these gentlemen is stupendous. We have here over one thousand excursion routes marked out, and offered at excursion rates, for Europe and America and all round the world. There is a branch office of this wonderful firm at 29 Carondelet street, New Orleans.

WE HAVE received from the Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tennessee, the General Minutes for 1873. The preachers will find this a valuable work for reference, and they should supply themselves at once.

THE annual report of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church South for the past year is an important pamphlet, and should be widely circulated. We are indebted to the Publishing House at Nashville for a copy.

APPLETON'S JOURNAL of June 13 is finely illustrated, and among other valuable articles contains: Historic Houses of America, Drinks and Drinking Vessels, Social Photographs, The South Shore, Nantucket.

THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE for June has: By Still Waters, New Guinea, The Parable of the Unjust Steward, Macao and Its Slave Trade, The Poetical Books of the Old Testament, and other superior articles.

THE UNION ERA is a religious and literary art-book, issued in twelve parts. A very handsome illustrated publication. Published in New York. Address Union Era, 27 City Hall square, New York.

THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST for June has the usual number of handsome illustrations, and is filled with useful and practical information. Orange Judd & Co., publishers, New York.

GOOD WORDS for June has: Knowledge and Love, The Fall of David, Prince Bismarck's Public Life, Pneumatic Drainage, The Great West, On the West Coast, and other articles of great merit.

WE HAVE received the fifth annual report of the board of Indian commissioners to the President of the United States for 1873.

THE MIDLAND MONTHLY MAGAZINE is a new periodical, published by W. D. Pratt, at Monmouth, Illinois.

Facts Concerning the Weather

IN BRITISH HONDURAS, DURING THE YEAR 1873.

MR. EDITOR: I have been paying close attention to the weather in this country for the last two or three years, and have noted down the different changes in the weather, and I suppose a few facts would be of interest to some of your readers. The most rain that fell in twenty-four hours was five inches, on the fourteenth of August, and all of that fell during the night. The day was perfectly clear, and so was the next day. There is a wet season and a dry season in this country. In 1873 the dry season began about the first of February, and lasted until the night of the twenty-ninth of May, and the wet season began on that night with 1½ inches of rain, and lasted the rest of the year. On the night of the thirtieth of May it rained 3¾ inches, and on the night of the thirty-first 1⅞ inches, each of these days being perfectly clear, and rain falling at night. The most rain that fell in May was in these three days. In the month of January 4⅛ inches of rain fell; in February ⅝ of an inch, in March 2 inches, in April 3 inches, in May 6½ inches, in June 14 inches, in July 24½ inches, in August 36¼ inches, in September 24⅝ inches, in October 8⅜ inches, in November 9¼ inches, in December 6 6-8 inches. For the whole year 139 6-8 inches, or 11 feet 7 6-8 inches. Some would think people could not live in a country where it rained so much; but do not judge too fast. Remember that we live close to the coast, and the creeks and rivers are short; consequently the water runs off quick. If it should rain 2 inches in the night, and the sun rise and shine bright all next day, you would hardly think in the evening that it had rained the night before. Let us see how many clear days of twenty-four hours there were in the year. In January there were 11, in February 12, in March 20, in April 16, in May 20, in June 6, in July 1, in August 1, in September 4, in October 11, in November 9, in December 5; for the whole year, 117. Number of days that were perfectly clear during the day, and cloudy or rainy at night: January 2, February 8, March 5, April 6, May 7, June 13, July 11, August 20, September 11, October 7, November 7, December 11; whole year, 108. In May there were 20 perfectly clear days, leaving only 11 days for rain, and 7 of them were clear during the day. In August there was only 1 clear day of twenty-four hours, and 20 that were perfectly clear during the day. We felt a shock of earthquake on the ninth of October. A little hail fell on the eleventh of May, 1871. The thermometer was highest on the sixteenth of May—it was 96° above zero; and lowest on the twenty-first of November—it was 60½° above zero. The above are facts, as I said, and can be proved.

ORGAN CHANT.

I.

Alone with God, alone, we bow before his throne,
And crave of him his pardon for sins of the past day!
Alone with God, alone, we bow before his throne,
And pray that for the love of Christ our sins be washed away.

II.

Alone with God, alone, we bow before his throne,
For the spirit craves a shrine where to worship and to pray.
Alone with God, alone, rings the mighty anthem-tone,
The vesper-chant of nations at closing of the day.

III.

Alone with God, alone, sounds the voice of ages flown,
As the sun in march sublime keeps upon his onward way.
Alone with night, alone! Yet, with God upon his throne,
The evening turns to morning! the night into the day!

IV.

Alone with God, alone, we bow before his throne,
And crave of him his pardon for sins of the past day!
Alone with God, alone! Yet, with Christ upon his throne,
We feel that for the love of him our sins are washed away.

Dublin University Magazine.

To the Members of the Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: When I was first importuned privately, by several leading members of our body, to prepare for publication a complete history of Methodism, as connected with our Conference, I positively declined, feeling that my advanced age, my domestic duties, and especially my want of suitable qualifications for such a work, would not justify the undertaking; but when the Conference so cordially and by a unanimous vote requested me to do it, I was then led to view it in the light of a duty I owed to a body with which I had been most amicably connected for nearly fifty years. Since I entered on the work I have been convinced, at every step, that I am the last man left on earth that could collect and arrange the materials for such a work, especially for the first thirty years of our history, commencing with 1799. Having been born and brought up near the original nucleus of Methodism in Mississippi, and having spent fifty years of itinerant life exclusively in the bounds of our Conference, I have advantages which no other man now living has or can have. However reluctant at first, I am now pleased with my task, and feel that, in all human probability, I am in this way doing my last work of love for the Conference and the church.

At our last Conference I informed you that I had one volume nearly ready for publication, and considerable anxiety was manifested to have it published as soon as practicable; but neither the Conference nor writer had any funds in hand to pay cash for its publication. It was then suggested that we might indemnify the Publishing House by a large subscription for the work, to be paid immediately after the publication and distribution of the volume, and with but little effort, by private application, near the close of Conference, several hundred copies were subscribed for, and it was believed the number could readily be increased to any amount necessary to indemnify the Publishing House, and it was left with me to make the negotiation with our agent at Nashville. After completing the first volume I wrote to Dr. Redford, giving him a correct statement of the facts in the case, and asking him if he could make the publication for the Conference. I received no reply to my letter, and, after waiting nearly two months, I wrote again, and he replies "that we can print the work of which you speak only for cash." So this ends the matter so far as our Publishing House is concerned, at least for an indefinite time. The writer, with thousands of Mississippians once in affluent circumstances, was financially demolished by the late war and its annually accumulating disasters, and the self-sacrificing members of the Mississippi Conference, these trying times, are generally serving the churches, to a great extent, at their own expense, and neither party has any money on hand, or anywhere in sight just now, to pay cash for the publication of our history, so that we must either abandon the enterprise or look in some other direction for its publication. Our denominational preferences, in addition to a very natural desire to have the prestige of our own Publishing House, has inclined us decidedly to Nashville, but, as we cannot comply with the only condition upon which the work can be published there, we must make a new departure. I write this to the members of Conference that my brethren, who often importune me on the subject, may know why the publication is not made, and that they may make any suggestions which occur to their minds. In the meantime, as I have always been, in my humble sphere, the steadfast friend of the Publishing House, I would urge the brethren "all along the line" to do their utmost on the "$100 proposition" to relieve the house of its present financial embarrassment.

With the indulgence of the editor, I ask leave to say that I am now considerably advanced in the second volume of our history, and, if life and health are spared, intend to continue my labors diligently until our next session. I am greatly indebted to many persons, both gentlemen and ladies, for valuable contributions in the way of proper names, dates, biographical sketches, the history of church-houses, camp grounds, revivals, etc. Some, however, do not respond to my inquiries. I propose to include in our history the rise and progress of Methodism in all the territory at any time included in our Conference until it was set off in a separate Conference. Hence I have to write of Alabama, North Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas. I have already received some valuable contributions from these Conferences. I am under many obligations to my old friend, Rev. George Shaeffer, of Columbus, Mississippi, and an unknown but most highly esteemed brother of Montgomery, Alabama, whose sign-manual is Neil Bine. Now I want somebody to give me a brief sketch of the church-houses and early church members in Tuskaloosa, Mobile and old Cahawba, Alabama. Who will do it? It will do us good to review the way the Lord has led us and our fathers for the last three-score years.

Denominationalism.

MR. EDITOR: In the ADVOCATE of April 30 I find a criticism, over the signature, "A Methodist," on an article with the above caption, written by me and published April 2.

The critic opens by saying that the article on denominationalism "puts him in mind of a sermon which has no Christ in it."

No doubt there is ground for believing that the human mind is under what are called "laws of suggestion," yet they seem at times to be erratic in their operations, at least in some minds, suggesting things very incongruous. I do not think that the author of an article ought to be held responsible for what it may suggest, but only for what it really contains. Neither is it an argument that there is no Christ in an article, because it may suggest to a mind of peculiar mold a sermon which is without Christ; for men entertain different views on this subject, according to their habits of thought. With some men you only write or preach Christ when giving a glowing description of the agonies of his death on the cross. I would by no means ignore or treat lightly this awful and momentous event in the history of our Lord. But Christ may be preached without making his sufferings the subject of set discourse and treated in a common-place way, which from its triteness imparts no new idea and awakens no new feeling. Christ came to establish, by his death, a religion which is a system of principles. When we show what these principles are, how they bind us and how we may exemplify them in life, we preach Christ as truly as when we are discoursing on his person.

The article reviewed by "Methodist" was not written on the person of Christ; but on adherence to his religion. The two may be distinguished in thought, but not in the practical life of a good man, for devotion to the religion of Christ is devotion to Christ himself.

The way some have of separating Christ and his religion may answer the purposes of a theory, but not the ends of piety. To all such Christ says: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." Thus Christ will not have a profession of love for his person, while men do not practice his religion. Now in the article on denominationalism the religion advocated is the religion of Christ; for Methodism is advocated, which I hold to be in its original purity the very highest expression of Christianity on earth. And though the word Christ is not written in said article, yet its derivatives are more than seventeen times. If that article advocates anything, it is devotion to Christianity according to the convictions of each denomination. And if it failed to suggest to the mind of "Methodist" the idea of Christianity, I am at a loss to know what would put him in mind of a sermon with Christ in it.

Again he says: "The writer has not a word of Scripture proof to sustain his position, but refers to the government of the United States and individual States as analogous and satisfactory proof." It was not the purpose of said article to show from the Scriptures that all the different denominations ought or should exist. It was based upon the fact of their existence. None deny that different denominations do exist. I take the church as I find it existing in separate branches. All creeds are not the same. A real difference does exist. We cannot ignore the fact. How we came to differ is another question. The article is against the idea of neutrality after the war of denominations had commenced.

The reference to the governments was for the purpose of illustration, and not for proof. As all the States exist under one organic instrument called a constitution, and at the same time each State having its own peculiar constitution, so it was said that all the denominations of Christians exist under the orthodox constitution, yet each had its own peculiar creed. It was only a little piece of innocent illustration.

"Methodist" should remember the old adage that they who live in glass houses must not throw stones. Most vehemently he objects to the article advocating a true denominational zeal, yet he does not condescend to offer anything that can be styled an argument to support his objections, drawn from the reason of things, human experience or the Scriptures. He partially cites from three passages of Scripture, which are not at all pertinent as proof to the subject under discussion. Alluding to my article, he says: "Anything that has no scriptural authority I regard as trivial and speculative." So ought all good men when the subject lies within the range of scriptural teaching. We may regard a subject as trivial and speculative, and yet it may be important and practicable. A confusion of ideas on a given subject, and the not understanding what a writer means, help us in regarding what he says of but little worth. I cannot see how there can be more than one opinion on this subject by those who hold to any other doctrines save those held in common. Froude, in his lecture on Spinoza, says: "Wherever and on whatever questions good men are found ranged on opposite sides, one of three alternatives is always true: either the points of disagreement are purely speculative and of no moral importance; or there is a misunderstanding of language, and the same thing is meant under a difference of words; or else the real truth is something different from what is held by any of the disputants, and each is representing some important element which the others ignore or forget. In either case a certain calmness and good temper is necessary if we would understand what we disagree with, or would oppose it with success." Now, if the reviewer meant anything peculiar by signing himself "A Methodist," then the second alternative applies to his case, and he holds to the same view that I do under a different term.

I confess that I was amused on coming to the conclusion of his article and seeing the name—"A Methodist." A parallel case would be a man writing an article against democracy, and then closing by signing himself "A Democrat." If a man is a Methodist in anything more than the mere name, he holds to doctrines which distinguish him from all others. Methodist is a specific term, and denominational in its ecclesiastical meaning and application.

If our critic is really a Methodist, he cannot but be a sectarian, using the term not in the sense of a bigot. If not, why did he not sign himself "A Christian," a generic term for all Christ's followers? His article is against his name, and his name contradicts his article. If his article is true he has the wrong name, and if he has the right name his position cannot be the true one.

Shreveport District.

METHODISM, ETC.

MR. EDITOR: I commenced my work on the Shreveport district on the twenty-first day of February. Notwithstanding the superabundance of rain and high waters, I reached every appointment in the bounds of the district. On several occasions our congregations were much smaller than they would have been, and services were to some extent interrupted by bad weather; yet we transacted all the business pertaining to the Quarterly Conference. Preached eighteen times, visited a number of families, and rode something over five hundred miles on horseback to complete our first round.

Shreveport district embraces almost every grade and variety of soil, from a dense pine forest, wherein no human habitation is found for miles, to the rich bottom lands of Red river. Yet in the rural districts of the pine-timbered country there are good settlements. These are mostly contiguous to the alluvial lands of the larger creeks that traverse this country. The settlements are from ten to twenty miles distant from each other. The people are very social and exceedingly kind to their preacher. They love to go to church, and many of them greatly appreciate the services of the sanctuary. This is true of the people generally throughout the district.

In our visitation we found all the preachers, with one exception, at their posts of duty, laboring for the salvation of souls in the vineyard of their Master. We could but feel: "Oh! what a work;" and with the great apostle exclaim in our heart: "Who is sufficient for these things?" Bro. Smith, a supply on Beulah circuit, we found far spent with tuberculosis, hæmoptysis having already ensued when we visited him, announcing clearly to our apprehension pulmonary consumption. He lingers upon the shores of time, and testifies to the power of grace to save, even in the darkest hours of affliction.

We are happy to say we have on our district a corps of five preachers—men of Wesleyan theology—constantly and earnestly presenting to the people the great principles and doctrines of the cross. And we cannot but here remark how much the world is indebted to modern Protestantism, emancipated, as it is, from ritual influence and doctrinal error. This is to a large extent the result of Wesleyan theology. Herein we have the characteristic design of a pure Christianity. It is the purification of the individual man, produced in his personal freedom and on the responsibility of his conscience. Therefore it is not ceremonies and rituals and creeds, but it is spiritual life. Hear what the Savior says: "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." This was the great moral life-principle that moved Luther in the reformation of the sixteenth century, and that wrought in the Wesleys while at Oxford, and saved them and their coadjutors from ritualism. It was that which enabled them to see and realize that justification is by faith only, that regeneration is wrought by the Holy Spirit, testifying to the blessing of sins forgiven. Firmly fixed upon these great Bible doctrines, we are able to see how Mr. Wesley and the faithful men of those times conducted the glorious revival of the eighteenth century. The divine impulse thus given to a purely spiritual Christianity affected, says Dr. Stevens, both hemispheres, and resolved itself into an organic system. That system has gone bravely on, triumphing over every obstacle, until at the present day the Methodist family, according to Dr. Tefft, numbers fifty thousand ministers, local and itinerant, and three million communicants.

Mark the development of the Methodistic movement. Methodism gave the originating impulse to the London and Church Missionary Societies, the British and Foreign Bible Society, the London Tract Society, and the Sunday school institution as a grand agency of the church. Its missionary development has preserved its primitive energy. Thus it has not only transformed English Protestantism, but it looks to the moral improvement of the world. The cross stands out aloft and radiant amid the receding clouds of sin and darkness, and the world beholds beneath it thousands of reclaimed poor, gazing at it with care-worn brow but beaming countenance, and pointing to it with uplifted hands as the emblem of all human hope for time and eternity.

Thus Methodism has been sent into the world to accomplish a grand mission—to turn men from darkness to light, and from the power of satan unto God. May she gather new trophies with each revolving year, until, like the bow in the cloud, her pure doctrines, holy zeal and heavenly love shall encircle the earth.

The Revival in St. Louis.

MR. EDITOR: I have read in your issue of April 9 Bishop Marvin's account of the revival in St. Louis. Truly "the Lord hath done great things for them, whereof they should be glad." I was somewhat surprised that the Bishop, in describing the manner of conducting the revival, should say "it was something new to him." Forty years ago, and more, I was accustomed to see our Presbyterian brethren conduct revival meetings precisely in that way, which they called inquiry meetings. At these meetings all serious persons were invited to attend, the meeting being appointed for a particular hour. I found them to be the most solemn and engaging meetings I ever attended. Such persons, male or female, had no special seat assigned them, but sat mingled among members of the church. They were conducted precisely on the plan of our class meetings, except that those persons only who made no profession of religion were the subjects to whom the "inquiry" in reference to their desire for salvation was addressed. Such meetings never failed to result in great good.

If it will not occupy too much of your space I will give you some reminiscences of my observations during such occasions. It was usual for the minister serving any particular church to notify his congregation that at such a time they would hold protracted meeting. The minister would send off forty or fifty miles for some good and able brother, perhaps an entire stranger to his flock, to assist him. He usually had but one, and that one had all the preaching to do. The meeting generally commenced on Saturday. On Sabbath the congregation was large; on Monday, of course, it was much diminished, especially in the main portion of the audience. They, however, preached on and prayed on. In a few days the congregations increased, and the interest with it, until it became deep and powerful. The inquiry meetings were then began, and continued daily after that. Conversions were frequent, clear and powerful.

I remember an old Methodist brother, Rev. John C. Johnson, of precious memory, of the Mississippi Conference, who told me the following anecdote, in which he was an actor. His home was in Jefferson county, Mississippi. He was invited by the Rev. —— Montgomery, the pastor of the Presbyterian church at Union church, Jefferson county, to aid him at a protracted meeting there. He went. Montgomery put him up to preach; at the next hour he put him up again, and at the next and the next, and so on every day. He said finally that he told the congregation that he did not know how they relished their spiritual food—it was Johnson for breakfast, Johnson for dinner and Johnson for supper.

I like the plan very much. When a congregation becomes interested with a minister, he is the man they want all the time. The prayer meetings and inquiry meetings can well be conducted by others, giving the preacher time to fix up for the great congregation. This, I think, in connection with his great ability, under the divine presence, is the secret of Rev. Hammond's success. My own impression is, if it were more generally adopted among us, that our work would be deeper and more successful, if our would-be big preachers would submit to it, and not become fretful and envious, get mad and go off! Some of them remind me of a Baptist brother who had attended a protracted meeting of his denomination, for some days, without being invited to preach. At last he said: "Brethren, if I do not get to preach soon I will burst!" Some of our preachers, when at such meetings, if they do not get to preach often, go off in a pet, perhaps to keep from bursting. I do not know what they think of such conduct, but I always regarded it without envy.

Yours truly, LOCAL.

Port Gibson Collegiate Academy.

MR. EDITOR: Though oppressed by poverty and dismayed by floods, we cannot afford to neglect our institutions of learning. Education is a necessity, and in spite of difficulties we must provide the facilities for its impartation.

Port Gibson Collegiate Academy has been long and favorably known throughout the region round about the beautiful inland town in which it is situated. Many who are now the honorable women of this land were educated there. Among the many and great infelicities consequent upon the late civil war, this institution, as did a number of others, found itself robbed of the requisites of prosperity. During the last year it had gone into a state of temporary suspension. Temporary, we say, because it was renewing its strength during the interval, and now, with all embarrassments and complications removed, begins afresh its career of usefulness. The buildings are commodious and in good repair, the location is pleasant and healthful, and the social and religious advantages of the community as good as the best in the land.

On the third instant the board of trustees, of which the Hon. Wilson Humphries is president, elected Rev. John A. B. Jones president of the faculty of the institution. The trustees think they have been fortunate in securing the services of one so well qualified for the position to which they have called him, and who is by no means without experience in the duties of the school-room. The president elect, aided by his excellent wife and an ample corps of teachers, intends to devote himself energetically to the promotion of the great cause of education in this institution. We bespeak for Port Gibson Collegiate Academy a fair share of patronage and the hearty co-operation of its friends elsewhere.

JAMES ALEXANDER, infant son of Rev. P. and Mrs. M. E. Howard, was born in Wilkinson county, Mississippi, August 29, 1873; was baptized by Rev. T. W. Brown, March 29, and died of congestion, May 4, 1874.

FANNIE CORNELIA ASHFORD was born November 1, 1864, and died April 18, 1874. Fannie is gone to the happy land of rest, where all the good will be gathered together. Christian parents and sister, weep not, for your little one is with the happy throng of the blessed.

GREENVILLE, Butler Co., Ala., May 27, 1874.

BRO. MARTIN C. STROWD has crossed the flood. He was born in Ohio, December 10, 1824, and died in St. Tammany parish, Louisiana, May 28, 1874.

About four years ago he was converted to God, under the ministration of Bro. H. P. Bowen, of the Mississippi Conference. From that happy change until the hour of his departure he was a faithful soldier of the cross, part of the time filling the offices of Sunday school superintendent and steward. February 14, 1855, he was married to Sylvia E. Crawford. It was his fortune, about two months ago, to see her happily converted to God. Surrounded by floods of tears, that can but flow for our beloved dead, he bade adieu to loved ones here, and hastened to embrace his children that had passed on before.

LEWIS R. FEATHERSTUN.

GABRIEL PICKREN GODBOLT died, April 24, 1874, near Summit, Mississippi, after several weeks' severe suffering from a stroke of paralysis. All things were in readiness, for he got ready in time to meet God in eternity. He has left us for his home in heaven. He was brought up by his parents to be a Christian, and honored their teachings from his youth. He became a noble Christian gentleman, a good member of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, and joyous in his religion. He was a native Mississippian of a large Methodist family. He was a steward, trustee and Sunday school teacher of the church in Summit when he died, and was honored and beloved in all those places of trust in the church of God. He leaves a wife and several grown-up children. They have reason to grieve, and the church at Summit to mourn, for we do not know as yet how to get along without him. We must look to God for help. Yes, help us, Lord, for the godly man perisheth. He was in his fifty-fifth year when he died.

A. B. NICHOLSON.

DIED, at her home in Pike county, Alabama, on the twenty-sixth of May, 1874, Mrs. MARY WINNEFRED TROTTER, in the thirty-third year of her age. Sister Trotter was a daughter of Bro. and Sister Kelsoe, of Troy, Pike county, Alabama, formerly of Auburn, Alabama, where Sister Trotter was educated, graduating at the female college at that place with the highest honors of the institution.

Endowed by nature with a mind of rare power, which she energetically cultivated, she was well fitted to adorn any station in life; and while cultivating the God-given intellect she did not forget the Giver. In her ninth year she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church South, in which she remained a pious and consistent member until her death. She was married to Bro. Samuel Trotter August 23, 1871, and nobly did she supply the mother's place to his children, whom death had early deprived of their own mother's care. Kindly and judiciously she trained them for the duties of life, and their sorrow for her early death proves how true a friend they had found in her. She had been for several years engaged in teaching, and in that capacity had gained the warmest love of patrons and pupils, and many a heart of both old and young will sorrow deeply when they know that Miss Winnie has passed away. But, while we grieve that she moves among us no more, we have abundant assurance that our loss is her eternal gain.

During her last painful and protracted illness she bore with the utmost patience and cheerfulness the sufferings with which the Father saw fit to afflict her; and though she said, if it pleased him, she would like to be spared a little while longer on earth to guide those orphan children, still heaven was very bright before her. A few moments before she died she chanced to see some pure white flowers which a friend had placed in a vase near her bed. "Heaven," said she, "is much fairer than they." About this time she called her attending physician to her bedside and entreated him to prepare to meet her in heaven. We will henceforth miss, yes, sadly miss, her cheerful, smiling face in the social circle, and we deeply sympathize with the stricken husband and the children that will no more be blest by her loving presence and guardianship, and most especially do we sympathize with her aged father and mother, who by her death are deprived of their only child, the staff and comfort of their declining years.

A FRIEND.

MRS. ELIZABETH DAVIS, wife of Dr. B. F. Davis, and daughter of Dr. Thomas P. Frith, deceased, was born in Autauga county, Alabama, February 2, 1834, and died of pneumonia, near the place of her birth, April 26, 1874.

Her own mother died when she was only eight weeks old, and she was mainly brought up by a stepmother, who doubtless performed the part of a mother as well as any one not a mother could. She was educated principally at Centenary Institute, in Summerfield, Alabama, during the presidency of Rev. A. H. Mitchell, D. D. She was a member of the senior class during her last year there, but owing to ill health she left school before the close of the session; so that she did not graduate. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church South when quite young—perhaps about thirteen. She was united in marriage to Dr. B. F. Davis December 12, 1854. As a wife she was affectionate, confiding, deferential, following the example of those holy women who are held up in the Bible as exemplars. She became the mother of eleven children, two of whom died young—one at the age of a little over one year, the other about four. Her character as a mother is seen in the characters of her children, they being such as we generally find reared by the best of mothers.

Sister Davis was a most excellent Christian lady. She was amiable in disposition, but very diffident and retiring, so that only those who knew her most intimately knew how to appreciate her fully. She was very fond of attending the house of God, but owing to the numerous cares of a large family she was often deprived of that privilege. But she made up for this lack, as well as she could, by attending the more closely to her private devotions. She prayed much—not merely night and morning, but frequently through the day, and sometimes even rising from her bed during the night for this purpose.

She had a strong presentiment of her death for months before her decease. She often spoke to her husband about it. So confident was she that she was about to pass away, that she prepared and laid away her burial apparel, telling her little daughter where to find it. During her last sickness, which continued but a few days, her husband conversed with her several times concerning her spiritual condition and her preparedness for eternity. At first she said her way was not as clear as she would like to have it; but before she departed every cloud seems to have been brushed away, and her sky became clear and bright. At one time she repeated a part of one of her favorite hymns:

"Jesus, lover of my soul."

At another she began to sing:

"O heaven, sweet heaven, when shall I see thee?"

Again, she asked her husband and children to sing "Beautiful River."

A few hours before she died she called her family around her and bade them adieu, kissing her little babe. How mysterious is this providence! But God knows best.

W. A. MONTGOMERY.

CHARLOTTE ELIZABETH FORD was born in Choctaw county, Alabama, March 21, 1847. Her maiden name was Ford, daughter of William H. and Caroline Ford. She was married to her kinsman, W. H. Ford, January 14, 1873, and died February 23, 1874, aged twenty-six years, eleven months and two days.

Earth is poorer, heaven is richer, by the death of this excellent lady. A bright spirit she was—a little sun shedding light, giving life, imparting joy and cheerfulness to all around her. At the tender age of thirteen years she gave her heart to God, and united with the Methodist Church. Afterward she joined the Baptist Church, of which she was a member to within fourteen hours of her death, when she reunited with the church of her first choice, saying to the minister present: "Let it be distinctly understood that I am a member of the Methodist Church. Put my name on the church roll by the side of my husband's."

In the family and social circle Sister Ford was the center of attraction and esteem. Her genial nature won the love of all hearts. As a wife she heeded the divine word: "As the church is subject unto Christ, so let wives be to their own husbands in everything." Thus to her husband she was a gift "of the Lord," "a good thing," "a prize far above rubies."

The Scriptures say "the end" of the righteous "is peace." This truth was verified in the subject's death. To the last moment she was rational, recognizing acquaintances and friends, observing every occurrence around her. These facts enhance the value of her dying testimony, furnishing indisputable proof of the truth, power and excellency of the Christian religion. The evening before her death, while she entertained hopes of recovering, I spoke to her about dying. Her tranquil response was: "I want to live for my child's sake, though if it be God's will I am willing to die. I have always tried to live right from a little child." When hopes of life had vanished her resignation and calmness were truly sublime. She spoke serenely of her swiftly approaching dissolution. Calling her many weeping relatives around her, she gave to each the parting hand and kiss, with affectionate admonitions. Never will her little cousin forget the counsel: "Be a good boy;" never will her honored and beloved uncle cease to remember her last request: "One more kiss, Uncle Jimmy." Never from the memory of those present will fade the recollections of her last fond gaze upon her infant babe, as she gently placed her pale, emaciated hand on its head and uttered the prayer: "May the Lord raise up many kind friends for my boy." Little did she then think that her first-born would quickly follow her to heaven. A few hours before she expired, being asked if she still trusted in God, she answered: "Yes. I am going home to heaven to rest." Subsequently, as the glories of the spirit-land broke upon her vision, and the song of angels and the redeemed fell upon her ears, and the eternal city, with its twelve foundations, with streets of gold and gates of pearl came to view, she said: "I am almost tired waiting, waiting for the end." About nine o'clock at night her soul sped to the mansions of light and glory. Her last word, her expiring utterance, was: "Jesus."

A SONG OF THREE WORDS.

Orare, Laborare, et Cantare.

BY JOHN STUART BLACKIE.

Three blissful words I name to thee,
Three words of potent charm,
From eating care thy heart to free,
Thy life to shield from harm.
Whose these blissful words may know,
A bold, brimbe fronted face shall show,
And, shod with peace, shall safely go
Through war and wild alarm.

First, ere thy forward foot thou move,
And wield thine arm of might,
Lift up thy heart to him above
That all thy ways be right.
To the prime Source of life and power
Let thy soul rise, even as a flower
That skyward climbs in sunny hour,
And seeks the genial light.

Then gird thy loins to manly toil,
And in the toil have joy;
Greet hardship with a willing smile,
And love the stern employ.
Thy glory this: the harsh to tame,
And, by wise stroke and technic flame,
In God-like Labor's fruitful name
Old Chaos to destroy.

Then 'mid thy workshop's dusty din,
Where Titan steam hath away,
Croon to thyself a song within,
Or pour the lusty lay.
Even as a bird that cheerly sings
In narrow cage, nor frets its wings,
But with full-breasted joyance flings
Its soul into the day.

For lofty things let others strive
With roll of vaunting drum;
Keep thou thy heart, a honeyed hive,
Like bee, with busy hum.
Chase not the bliss with wishful eyes
That ever lures and ever flies,
But in the present joy be wise,
And let the future come! Good Words.

Letter from Prof. Maury.

MY DEAR SIR: Your letter revived very pleasant remembrances. * * * Your questions are theorems. It would require volumes to contain the answers to them. You ask about the "harmony of science and revelation," and wish to know if I find "distinct traces in the Old Testament of scientific knowledge—in the Bible any knowledge of the winds and ocean currents."

Yes; knowledge the most correct and valuable. "Canst thou bind the sweet influence of the Pleiades?" It is a curious fact that the revelations of science have led astronomers of our own day to the discovery of the dead center of motion around which comets sweep and planets whirl; but that it, with its splendid retinue of worlds and satellites, is revolving through the realms of space at the rate of millions of miles in a year, and in obedience to some influence situated precisely in the direction of the star Alcyone, one of the Pleiades. We do not know how far off, in the immensities of space, that center of revolving cycles and epicycles may be; nor have our oldest observers or nicest instruments been able to show us how far off in the skies that beautiful cluster of stars is hung, whose influences man can never bind. In this question alone, and the answer to it, are involved both the recognition and exposition of the whole theory of gravitation.

Science taught that the world was round; but potentates pronounced the belief heretical, notwithstanding the psalmist, while apostrophizing the works of creation in one of his sublime moods of inspiration, when the prophets spoke as they were moved, had called it the "round world," and bade it rejoice.

You recollect when Galileo was in prison a pump-maker came to him with his difficulties, because his pump would not lift water higher than thirty-two feet. The old philosopher thought it was because the atmosphere would not press it up any higher; but the hand of persecution was upon him, and he was afraid to say that the air had weight. Now, had he looked to the science of the Bible, he would have discovered that the "perfect" man of "Uz," moved by revelation, had proclaimed the fact thousands of years before: "He maketh the weight of the winds." Job is very learned, and his speeches abound in scientific lore. The persecutors of the old astronomer would have been wiser and far more just had they paid more attention to his wonderful book; for there they would have learned that "he stretched out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing." There is another proof that Job was familiar with the laws of gravitation; for he knew how the world was held in its place. And, as for the "empty place" in the sky, Sir John Herschel has been sounding the heavens with his powerful telescope, and ganging the stars, and where do you think he finds the most barren part—the empty place—of the sky? In the north, precisely where Job told Bildad, the Shuhite, the empty place was stretched out. It is there where comets most delight to roam, and hide themselves in emptiness.

I pass by the history of creation as it is written on the tablet of the rock and in the book of revelation, because the question has been discussed so much and so often that you are no doubt familiar with the whole subject. In both the order of creation is the same: First the plants, to afford sustenance, and then the animal; the chief point of apparent difference being as to the duration of the period between the "evening and the morning." "A thousand years are as one day;" and the Mosaic account affords evidences itself that the term day, as there used, is not that which comprehends our twenty-four hours. It was a day that had its evenings and mornings before the sun was made.

I will, however, before proceeding further, ask pardon for mentioning a rule of conduct which I have adopted, in order to make progress with these physical researches which have occupied so much of my time and many of my thoughts; and that rule is never to forget who is the Author of the great volume which nature spreads out before us, and always to remember that the same Being is also the author of the book which revelation holds before us; and, though the two works are entirely different, the records are equally true; and when they bear upon the same subject, as now and then they do, it is as impossible that they should contradict each other as it is that either should contradict itself. If the two cannot be reconciled, the fault is ours, and it is because, in our blindness and weakness, we have not been able to interpret aright either the one or the other, or both.

Solomon, in a single verse, describes the circulation of the atmosphere as actual observation is now showing it to be. That it has its laws, and is as obedient to order as the heavenly hosts in their movements, we infer from the fact announced by him, and which contains the essence of volumes by other men: "All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full. Unto the place from whence the rivers come, thither they return again."

To investigate the laws which govern the wind and rule the sea is one of the most profitable and beautiful occupations that a man can have. Decked with stars, as the sky is, the field of astronomy affords no subject of contemplation more ennobling, more sublime or more profitable than those which we find in the air and the sea.

When we regard them from certain points of view they present the appearance of wayward things, obedient to no law, but fickle in their movements and subject only to chance. Yet when we go, as truth-loving, knowledge-seeking explorers, and knock at their secret chambers and devoutly ask what are the laws which govern them, we are taught in terms the most impressive that, when the morning stars sang together, the waves also lifted up their voice, and the winds, too, joined in the almighty anthem. And as discovery advances we find the marks of order in the sea and in the air, that are in tune with the spheres, and the conviction is forced upon us that the laws of all are nothing else but perfect harmony.

WASHINGTON, January 22, 1855.

Object of the Christian Ministry.

And this brings me at last to the one distinctive object of the Christian ministry, "which is Christ in you, the hope of glory, whom we preach, warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom, that we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus." Manifold are the influences which the Christian ministry exerts on social life, on political economy, on secular education, on public morals; and well may you be thoughtful of those who, with unapplauded toil, like a moral police, seek the peace of the city by day and by night, watching over its welfare and praying for those who pray not for themselves. And hence it would imply a most criminal delinquency if we did not together, like our hearty doxology, adore the grace of God for all those, whether they are now living or have gone to their heavenly home, who have heard the word of salvation. When public testimonials are forgotten, and formal tributes of respect are lost, the things which are most carefully preserved and highly prized are words, the nature of which never occurred to those who wrote or uttered them—words expressive of gratitude for some particular counsel or instruction which years ago was blessed of God to the conversion of their hearts and lives. It is with thankfulness to God that I am permitted—as the fullest compensation for all the past, to an utter oblivion of all hours of trial—to indulge the belief that this ministry has not been altogether without success. I might tell you when and where and how it was that many who are now walking in all the faith of the gospel, known and beloved for their Christian work, took their first step in their new life. I might tell you of one who was once a skeptic, cold and sad, who, by a touch of the Spirit, renounced his skepticism and became as a little child; of one addicted to fashion and love of the world, arrested in a career of gayety and thoughtfulness, and henceforth adorning the doctrine of her Savior in a life of Christian meekness and usefulness; of a thorough man of the world, addicted to pleasure, who, led to Christ, is now a Christian parent, an active citizen, nurturing his children and others in the ways of the Lord; of many who in their childhood gave sweetest token that they had been blessed by the hand of Jesus, and who, for numbers, seem to me like the flocks coming up from the washing of which Solomon did write; of others who, relinquishing prospects of wealth which would have led to luxury and display, the flatteries of ambition, are now preaching the gospel in this and other lands, and not only of such as are now living, but of the many who, having been converted to Christ, have closed their lives in the peace and gladness of Christian hope. Would it be anything less than withholding from our adorable Lord that tribute which is due if we should not bear our united testimony to those manifold instances of the power of the gospel? When I speak of those who have already fallen asleep in Christ, what memories throng upon us all! The very air seems to be filled with the hovering spirits of those who once were with us in this house of God. Their faces come back to us brighter than ever, spiritualized by translation. Were all whom we have followed to the grave to return within these walls, what a congregation they might form! As my eye passes from pew to pew there is scarcely one out of which death has not gathered some sheaf. We would not call them back, for they have received the salvation of their souls. Can we ever forget their counsel and testimony? Was not Christ faithful to them, even as he will be to us? We are pilgrims, but we are not sad, for we have a place in a long column of which so many have already entered through the gates into the city. Follow on with courage and with faith, on and on to the end. Might I condense into one appeal the substance of all that ever was uttered from this place during many years, it would be embodied in this one counsel—that from the heart each of you should be a believer in Jesus. What other word should be the first and the last of an embassador for Christ but that which inspiration has prepared? "We pray you, in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled."—Dr. Adams' Farewell Sermon.

Death in the Hour of Triumph.

A DEATH MORE PATHETIC THAN CHATTERTON'S.

The following is from a Leipsic (Germany) letter of May 10 to the New York Graphic:

"A wealthy gentleman of Berlin, some ten months ago, offered a number of valuable prizes for the best essays that should be written on several subjects of importance to the learned world; a prize of two hundred thalers for the best metaphysical essay, and an equal sum each for essays on medieval history, astronomy, celestial mechanics, sociology, geology, poetry, and—apparently to show his world-wideliness—five hundred thalers each for the best romantic tales and the best poem, the poem to be awarded by a committee selected from the various universities and various designated litterateurs of eminence who were supposed to be, and, as the sequel showed, really were disinterested in the matter, and willing to do only what justice might require. The essays and poems were to be of no particular length, and were to be judged simply by their real merits, but the authors must all be German. The wealth and reputation of the man who offered the prizes were a sufficient guarantee of certainty of payment and of consequent reputation as to set half, if not all, of the younger men of Germany at work to achieve the guerdon of success.

"On last Thursday, at the Gewandt-Haus at Leipsic, the prizes were awarded, a large company of gentlemen and ladies being present. The ceremonies were begun by most exquisite music by the old orchestra—among whom are numbered men who knew and loved Mendelssohn—at the conclusion of which the venerable Dr. Schmidt, so long known for his kindliness and learning at Heidelberg, announced the names of those who had been so fortunate as to carry off the very valuable prizes offered. The names of the authors of the various works had been sent in sealed envelopes, on which were inscribed the fictitious names signed to their productions.

"The author of the metaphysical essay had chosen as his theme Kant's 'Antinomien der Reinen Vernnft' (Antinomies of Pure Reason,) and taken as his name for the occasion 'Hans Wildenstein.' After passing an eulogium on the essay, Dr. Schmidt broke the seal and found in the envelope the name of Max Markmann, who thereupon was called upon the stage to receive the reward of his work. A pale, poorly-clad and most wretched-looking young man stepped forward and was received with hearty applause. His hair was thin and gray, although he was plainly yet young, and his whole appearance was such as to at once awaken the sympathies of the audience. Having received his reward, he stepped quietly aside, and Dr. Schmidt continued his announcements, Markmann sitting near him, pale and still, in a large arm-chair.

"The astronomical essay was on the 'Evolution of Nebulæ, with particular reference to the large nebula in Orion,' and here too the successful author was found to be Max Markmann. When this announcement was made, great enthusiasm was manifested, and, after receiving his prize, poor Markmann took his seat, apparently more weary and dejected than at first.

"The next essay was a review of Ranke, and here too this young man was successful, and so on through the whole list of prizes. Max Markmann stepped forward amid thunders of applause and received his reward. No one who knows the enthusiasm of the Germans will fail to know that all the students were ready to carry the young man off on their shoulders to have a good Kneip.

"The poem was an exceedingly fine one, somewhat in the vein of that exquisite poet of nature, Otto Roquette, yet breathing the air of a loftier and mightier soul, which had dwelt alike with Shakespeare and Goethe and Homer. It was a wonderful composition. Herr Auerbach, the author of 'Village Tales,' 'On the Heights,' and other works, and who was the head of the committee on the tales, had said, of the one named 'The Village Rector,' that it was one of the finest he had ever read. And the successful competitor for all the prizes was Herr Max Markmann.

"The prize for the tale was the last one announced, and as Markmann stepped forward to receive it, amid thunders of applause, his face suddenly became ashy in its whiteness, and he fell fainting on the stage. A death-like silence succeeded, during which he was removed to an anteroom, and but partially restored to consciousness. He lingered but for four hours, and when he died the physician who had attended him announced that his death was caused by privation—in other words, by starvation. All that the highest medical skill could do had been of no avail.

"It was found that for years he had occupied a little chamber in obscure Gasse, where he had worked, gaining a most precarious living in teaching languages, and nearly everything which anybody required to know. In his room were found incomplete models of remarkable mechanical contrivances, a broken chair and mounds of manuscript, among which were letters from some of the most distinguished men in Europe. He had apparently lived on almost nothing for months, and poor, dejected, weary, yet glowing with the fire of genius, had worked for the prizes offered—amounting in all to twenty-four hundred thalers—and then, hungry and weary, had dragged himself to the Gewandt-Haus to win them all and die. If the history of labor, genius and its rewards has a sadder tale to tell than this, I know not of it."

RESOLUTIONS.—Said an old clergyman: "We have too many resolutions and too little action. 'The Acts of the Apostles' is the title of one of the books of the New Testament; their resolutions have not reached us."

Conversation and Conversationalists.

The first-rate talker is neither pedantic nor superficial. His language is not stiff nor professional, but is not slovenly nor too familiar. He has regard, in his talk, both to his subject and to his company; and tries to be plain without being shallow, to interest his audience without paying them the doubtful compliment of expounding first principles. He does not always, however, avoid the danger of monopolizing the conversation, or of turning dialogue into monologue. Coleridge, one of the most wonderful talkers England has produced, spoke by the hour to an admiring or wearied circle, and was disposed, at last, almost to resent a word timidly put in by a questioning listener. Macaulay, another talker of immense mental wealth, acquired the same monopolizing habit, and often poured out his extraordinary stores in one continuous stream; though, as Sydney Smith observed, he had occasionally his "brilliant flashes of silence." Carlyle also is, or at least was, a talker of the first magnitude, having at one time, as Christopher North said of him, "mounted the throne of Coleridge." His "Latter-Day Pamphlets," we have been assured, were spoken before they were written and published; and it is well known that "true Thomas," as his friends sometimes call him, very frequently forgets the silence which he calls golden, and vehemently resorts to the current silver of speech.

Sir James Mackintosh, a man of immense and varied attainments, delighted and excelled in conversation. Round his board conversation was carried on in a style that informed and never wearied the guests. When a new number of the Edinburg Review, or any publication of interest reached him from Europe, he discussed its contents with his friends in a style that never failed to delight them all. The wit and humor of Jeffrey and Sydney Smith, the mathematical lore of Playfair, the political disquisitions of Brougham, or a new poem of Scott, all contributed to the delight and instruction of the social hour, and enabled Sir James to make himself a model of hospitable skill, which in these days is too seldom imitated.

Speaking of the conversational powers and habits of certain great authors, we are reminded that the greatest of our poets seems to have been ready and skillful in conversation. In his encounters of wit with Ben Johnson at the Mermaid, Shakespeare's greatest cotemporary, Lord Bacon, who has told us that "speaking makes a ready man," seems to have been excellent in conversation. He did not, indeed could not, hide that wealth of mind with which he was so wondrously endowed. Dryden also was in his club—a favorite coffee-house—a conversational king. "Glorious John" talked in a style worthy of his talents and reputation, and wielded thereby a literary scepter over a host of willing subjects. His great successor on the political throne (Pope) could be very brilliant in company as well as with his pen; but he was too artificial in his style and habits to excel in that frank expression of genial thought that marks the true conversationalist. Addison, the "Atticus" of Pope, completely failed as a public speaker, and seems to have been oftener dumb than eloquent in general society.

But Addison's successor (Dr. Johnson,) great with his pen, was perhaps still greater with his tongue. Indeed, Johnson, by universal admission, was the foremost talker of his day, and he intensely enjoyed the high colloquial art in which he excelled. In the renowned Literary Club, of which he was the chief ornament, he ruled with something like despotic conversational sway. Burke alone could meet him with any prospect of success on the field of argument. That illustrious Irishman seems to have been as great in the club as he was in the House of Commons. He certainly inspired the surly yet kindly lexicographer with salutary respect. It was when dwelling with ordinary members of the club, none of them mean men in their day, that Johnson's conversational superiority appeared, and enabled him to reign without a rival near his throne. How easily could he upset in a discussion poor Boswell, or Goldsmith, still poorer in a conversational point of view, and at whom Garrick launched the terribly humorous line:

"Who wrote like an angel, but talked like a poor poll!"

Leisure Hours.

THE REV. DR. BONAR IN THE PULPIT.—A correspondent of the Congregationalist, who has heard the Rev. Dr. Horatius Bonar on the other side of the water, has given this off-hand portraiture of him:

"The striking feature of his face is the large, soft, dark eye, the power of which one feels across the church. There are no bold, rugged lines in his face, but benevolence, peace and sweetness pervade it. The first thought was: 'He is just like his hymns—not great, but tender, sweet and tranquil.' And everything he did and said carried out this impression. His prayer was as simple as a child's. His voice was low, quiet and impressive. His address, for it could scarcely be called a sermon, was founded on the words, 'The Spirit and the Bride say, Come,' 'the last invitation in the Bible.' It was marked by that absence of all attempt at originality, which is, to an American, so striking a feature of most foreign preaching. It was simply an invitation; warm, loving, urgent. His power over the audience was complete. Even the children looked steadily in his face, and once he paused in his discourse and addressed himself especially to the Sunday school children, who sat by themselves on one side of the pulpit. I was sure the little things had never heard the Good Shepherd's call more tenderly given. With one of the most winning faces I ever saw, he closed: 'Whosoever'—that includes you; 'Whosoever will'—does that include you?"

PASCAL says that "the heart has reasons that the head does not know."

Religious Intelligence.

DR. W. M. THOMSON, of New York, has a Bible class consisting of 1,100 members.

A REVIVAL, with about 1,000 converts, is in progress in Derby, England, under the evangelical labors of a young and devoted Scotch Episcopal rector, Rev. Mr. Douglass.

THE cloister building of the great Franciscan convent in the City of Mexico, once the residence of 4,000 monks, is now occupied by the Methodist Church, and was dedicated to the worship of God on Christmas day.

THE revisers of the authorized version of the New Testament met recently in New York city, at their thirty-sixth session, and revised the fifth chapter of the Epistle of St. James, and part of the first chapter of the First Epistle of St. Peter.

THE Pacific Christian Advocate says that the annual running expenses of all the churches and Sunday schools of Portland, Oregon, including pastors' salaries, do not exceed $20,000, while the liquor saloons of the city receive not less than $200,000.

A MEMBER was lately received to the First Presbyterian church in Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, by letter, which stated that that sister was a member in "good and regular standing" of the church dismissing her; and, furthermore, that she had been "vaccinated."

THE Roman Catholic Society for the Propagation of the Faith has the largest income of any of the missionary societies. Last year it amounted to $1,104,838. This was $15,000 less than in 1872, when special efforts were made, in view of the fifteenth anniversary of the society.

THE first census of Japan gives the number of Buddhist priests at 221,467. This includes 60,159 females belonging to priestly families and 9,621 nuns. The Shinto (old national religion of Japan) officials and their families number 52,141 males and 50,336 females. The whole population is 33,110,825.

THE United Presbyterian mission in Egypt has 9 stations. The total number of communicants is 508, being an increase during the past year of 83. The largest increase was at Osiout—26. The native Christians contributed $2,952, a sum which, when we consider their poverty, shows great liberality.

THE sixth annual meeting of the Evangelical Alliance for the United States was held in New York recently. The fact that Russia had commenced a persecution of Baptists living in Russia was presented to the meeting. About thirty persons were reported as having suffered and being threatened with banishment to Siberia.

WHAT is called "The London Mission," or, in other words, an exciting religious revival, has been going on among the Episcopalians in that city. Both sections, the "High" and the Evangelical, joined equally in the work, clergy of the former persuasion preaching in the streets in cassock, surplice, cope and biretta, the full dress of the Ritualists.

LANCASHIRE, ENGLAND, has become a refuge for exiled Jesuits. About 100 priests of this order have established their headquarters at Dilon Hall, about nine miles from Liverpool. This hall has been given to them by Mrs. Stapleton Bretherton, of Rainhill. Here the priests, all German, are pursuing their studies as if in their own country.

MORE than three-fourths of the European missionaries in the city of Madras are engaged in the special work of education. They have in charge about 5,000 children. One mission alone has nearly 1,000 in its schools. These schools are fast growing in favor with the native community. With the limited number of missionaries there, the purely evangelistic part of their work necessarily suffers considerable neglect.

THE new church ecclesiastical bill of the German Reichstag provides that ecclesiastics dismissed from office by the decision of a tribunal may be prohibited from residing in certain districts and may be assigned a residence by the police. Resistance on the part of such ecclesiastics may be punished by expulsion from German territory. Persons losing nationality in one federal state lose it in another, and can only have it restored by the federal council.

THE Madeira mission of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions has now entered upon its fortieth year. Its report for 1873 gives 31 churches, with 16 native pastors, 1,633 communicants, and a total of 7,393. Besides the 16 pastors, 105 native catechists are employed in evangelistic work, which is largely carried on throughout this mission. The churches and "village congregations," of which there are 142, raised nearly $2,000 last year.

THE most recent mission of the Berlin Missionary Society is that in Transvaal republic, South Africa, among the Bechuanas. It has proved very successful. There are 12 stations. The largest of these is Bolshabelo. It presents the appearance of a European village, and by its strict regulations protects the converts from the vices of the adjacent civilization. Bolshabelo numbers 1,315 inhabitants, of whom 1,034 have been baptized and 140 are candidates for baptism.

THE Indian Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, recently held, reports 1,567 members and probationers, being an increase of 200 over last year; Sunday schools, 89; scholars, 3,691. The above statistics do not include those of the Bombay and Bengal mission, which has now 23 societies, mostly made up of Europeans and Eurasians. These societies are self-supporting and are the results of the evangelistic labors of the Rev. Mr. Taylor, of California, spoken of in earlier numbers of the Independent.

A SPRIGHTLY little sheet bearing the title Whiffs from Ararat, and published by the missionaries of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions at Erzroom, Eastern Turkey mission, lies on our table. It states that the Erzroom mission-field, in charge of three American missionaries, is nearly as large as all New England; that out of a population of a million and a quarter 221,000 are nominal Christians. Of these less than 1,000 are Protestants, although many in the old churches have become enlightened through the preaching of the truth.

TWO MISSIONARIES of the Church Missionary Society have been permitted to visit Abeokuta. They reached the great city of the Yoruba country January 22. They found that the three churches destroyed by the heathen had been rebuilt by the native Christians, and that after nearly seven years' absence of European missionaries the congregations were in a good condition. One of them numbers 1,000 hearers, with 200 communicants. Europeans are not as yet permitted to reside in Abeokuta.

THE Presbyterians have reason to congratulate themselves upon the financial exhibit of their Foreign Mission Board for the year closing May 1, 1874. The year opened with a debt of $128,000. The General Assembly at Baltimore pledged itself to the payment of this deficit, and $123,000 were raised in fulfillment of the pledge. In addition to this extra amount, $495,547.70 were contributed for current expenses, making a total of $618,000, being the largest amount ever raised by any American society for foreign mission purposes. Of this sum the women's societies raised $90,000.

TO DISCOVER the true Mount Sinai has been the ambition of all Eastern travelers and archæologists. Dr. Beke, the English explorer in that direction, claims that he has at last located the mountain. It is situated a day's journey northeast of the village of Akabin, in Arabia, at an altitude of five thousand feet above the sea. Dr. Beke is confident that he has discovered the true Sinai at this point, from the fact that he found the remains of animals that had been sacrificed, and had also made out Sinaitic inscriptions. It is not at all certain that other Oriental travelers will share his confidence in the matter.

THE Church Missionary Society have recently sent two married missionaries to Japan, in order to open a mission station in the city of Yeddo. In view of the antipathy of the Japanese against the Roman Catholics, these missionaries have been instructed not to make use of the cross as a symbol. The Church Missionary Society is the twelfth missionary society which has entered upon the work in Japan. This does not include the agents of the Women's Union Missionary Society, who act in conjunction with the several churches to which they respectively belong, nor the Episcopal chaplains, the Romish and the Greek missionaries. Can we wonder that the handful of native Christians, staggered by this denominational richness, concentrated, as it is, mainly on the two cities of Yeddo and Yokohama, are asking for a single church of Christ for Japan?

THE Society for the Propagation of the Gospel recently held its one hundred and seventy-third anniversary, Lord Lyttleton in the chair. The contributions during 1873 amounted to $551,000. The society has provided wholly or in part for the support of 484 ordained missionaries. They are thus distributed: America and West Indies, 220; Africa, 94; Asia, 125; Australia and the Pacific, 44; Europe, 1. Among these are included 45 native clergy in India. There are also about 822 catechists and lay teachers, mostly native, and 141 students in colleges. Having secured the consecration of Bishop Kestell-Cornish for Madagascar, by the roundabout way of the Church of Scotland, the society proposes in the same way to procure the ordination of a bishop for Independent Kaffraria. It is to be hoped that this new bishop will, like Paul, refuse "to build on other men's foundations."

ONE of the most flourishing South African missions is that of the Paris Societe des Missions Evangeliques, among the Basutos, who live on the borders of the Orange River Free State. The mission had suffered greatly in recent years through the wars between the Dutch Boers and the natives. These have, however, now ceased, and, owing to the extensive revival which has taken place among the Basutos, the Paris mission has more than recovered its lost ground. The Basutos have kept entirely aloof from the diamond mining, which has demoralized the neighboring tribes. Christian life progresses among them, the number of communicants increases, and many heathens apply for baptism. A seminary has been established for the instruction of native teachers and helpers. According to the last statistics there were 2,183 communicants, 1,315 candidates, 2,069 scholars, 321 were baptized last year, and $1,200 were raised for church purposes. There are 11 stations and 3 out-stations.

THE Moravians have opened a new station, called Ramah, in the northern part of Labrador, where they hope to reach the heathen still remaining in that section of the country. As yet they have met with little encouragement, Christ being regarded by these Esquimaux as like to their own sorcerers. The average temperature at Ramah the year round was four degrees below freezing. On January 30 the thermometer marked sixty-three degrees below zero. One of the missionaries from Hebron (the next station to the south,) on a journey to Ramah, says the Moravian, encountered a terrific snow-storm, the thermometer being twenty-seven degrees below zero. The dogs gave out, the Esquimaux drivers lost their way as they were crossing a mountain, the face of the missionary was so covered with ice that he could not convey food to his mouth, and was only able to breathe through some cracks in the ice crust, even the eyes being almost entirely covered. With the most strenuous efforts the station was finally reached.

EVERY act of sin is more injurious to him who commits it than it can possibly be to any other who suffers by it.

The Blessedness of Desire.

The Savior announces no greater beatitude than that which he connects with hungering and thirsting after righteousness. It would seem to be the condition of conditions that men should want. In things spiritual the promise is without qualification: "They shall be filled." But the hinderance is in the thing to be desired. It is a grace in itself of rare and exalted import to wish to be righteous. Vaguely, people would be happy; they shrink from the thought of final ruin, and cherish hopes of eternal life. The consequences of sin, as exhibited in this world, and as feared in the world to come, are easily deprecated. Some penitential sorrows may be felt, and purity of heart may be regarded as a good thing. But withal there is nothing answering to this supreme desire for righteousness. It would seem to be a simple circumstance, and readily realized, upon which our fullness of good is suspended; and we are surprised that, with so much honest concern and prayer, the abundant blessing does not come. Faith may have its difficulties, and the apprehension of spiritual truth may be perplexing and impossible to the natural man; but the mere desire to be good is something easily attainable, and almost instinctive to all.

So we might suppose, and yet, in fact, the highest reach of the awakened soul is the thirst for holiness. What seems to be almost universal and most easy is really the rarest and most difficult. Desire is the matrix of faith, the mother of belief, as well as the incentive to effort. Other means and conditions are secondary, and come into use and exercise most powerfully where a wrestling spirit lies back of them. The inability to believe with the heart unto righteousness may be because there is little or no desire for righteousness. After conversion the progress depends upon the desire. While the blessing is according to faith, it is also in proportion to the degree of our hungering after the divine manifestations. The thirsty traveler will not pass by the brook that flows across his path, nor will the hungry fail to hear and obey the invitation to come to the well-spread board. However great faith is, desire is before faith, and in some sense greater. Faith cannot be without it, and with it faith cannot be otherwise than irresistible.

The blessedness of faith, and also of willing, is in desire: "And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Where there is this strong yearning for spiritual life, and ardent passion for Christ's love, the coming by faith, and with the heartiest and completest determination of purpose, is no longer doubtful. The Savior's declaration recalls the words of the psalmist: "Open thy mouth wide and I will fill it." Look into a nest of unfledged robins or sparrows, and see how the rustling of a twig opens every mouth for the expected food. There is more genuine prayer and faith in a bird's nest than is exhibited in the hearts and homes of many who claim to be Christians. Prayer is of little account unless it be the utterance of spiritual desire. The parched ground prays, the twisting corn-blades, the withered grass, the drooping flowers, send up their supplications. The hungry herds and the bleating flocks, by their necessities, appeal to the Dispenser of all mercies. The very wants and appetites which God has implanted in our bodies are the conditions of our life, and the assurance that they shall be met. Where the spiritual nature cries out for God, and longs for holiness, we may be sure there are riches of grace to satisfy the desire which grace itself has awakened.

For prayer formal, perfunctory and languid there may be little to hope; but when it goes up from the soul hungering for divine communion, and intent on victory over sin, there is fullness. We cannot look this declaration in the face, that the hungering and thirsting shall be filled, without feeling that deep and strong religious desire is a most uncommon thing. It is just as rare as the conversion of sinners, and the more perfect life in believers. When men tell us that they want to be religious, but are not, and when Christians avow their earnest desire for perfect love, but have it not, there must be a mistake somewhere. Either they are laboring under a grave delusion, or Christ's words are misleading. The blessedness of desire is that "they shall be filled."

Fountains and Cisterns.

In these recent days of drought the difference may be painfully felt. The cistern is but an indifferent substitute for the bubbling spring or the flowing stream. It is sure to give out in time, unless constantly replenished, and when the rain is long withheld the supply is exhausted. Carefulness and suspense attend the using, and the anxiety grows as the store declines. Its capacity is limited, but few can enjoy its benefits, and the joy of inviting all who thirst to come to the waters is denied to those who possess it. And as to quality, it may be negatively pure, but the water is without tone, and dead as to all medicinal properties.

The gushing stream is inexhaustible, and never grudges what it gives. It is the better for a good well that it should be used freely, and the more it is drawn from the cooler and sweeter are the waters. The possessor of a spring knows to be unfailing may be at ease for himself and generously hospitable toward others. The waters and their owner sing together and proclaim to the world: "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters!"

This contrast is drawn in spiritual things. God is described as "the fountain of living waters," while the ungodly are represented as forsaking him, and hewing them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water. Our best schemes of happiness, apart from God, are as broken cisterns. The things we have trusted disappoint, and the transient gratifications of the world, after a brief indulgence, leave the soul athirst and faint. It is folly, when nature supplies the living and abundant stream, to resort to artificial means to secure the element of life and refreshment. It is this folly that men are ever perpetrating in reference to the wants of their higher nature. They turn away from God, they forsake the river of his grace, they despise the well-spring of love and mercy which breaks at their feet, and with a strange infatuation they toil at this cistern-building of pleasure and gain.

Trouble and affliction, like our summer droughts, come to expose the vanity of these substitutes for true religion. Of whatever sort, their insufficiency is exposed in the time of trial. Be it a false faith, an infidel philosophy, or a devotion to appetite and sensual indulgencies, it matters not. The cistern of human invention, however capacious and skillfully wrought, can be no substitute for the living fountain. In the end what we have constructed proves to be worthless. We have lost God, the only satisfying portion, and have gained nothing but a form or name to mock and embitter the parched and fevered heart. The fountain of living waters, the broken cistern! Every man has chosen one or the other—the everlasting God or the empty shadows of time.

The Burial of Livingstone.

BY PRES. G. F. MAGOUN, D. D.

Saturday, April 18, saw another grave added to those of the illustrious dead of England in Westminster Abbey. The number of persons in any generation to whom the English nation can pay that crowning honor is now of necessity small. And it is not always that the universal sentiment sanctions, as in Livingstone's case, its bestowment. The heart of the world has been so moved by the heroism of the great Scotch missionary traveler that the heart of all Britain would be moved by his death, even if the circumstances had been less touching, and if Britain had no national pride in the man. It is very nearly a year since he died. The noble and faithful boy, Jacob Wainwright, who accompanied his remains to London, cut on the tree above his hut at Ilala, on Muliala, these simple words: "Dr. Livingstone died on May 4, 1873." Let this black boy's loving and mournful inscription be remembered along with his master's pathetic words as he was borne in men's arms beyond Lake Bemba, in the Bisa country: "Build me a hut to die in." Livingstone was sick all through his last journey. Indeed he seems never to have been well since August, 1872, when he left Unyanyembe. Months ago he told the native boy Stanley sent him that he was too ill to go on with his work. Yet he would not allow his party to wait for him, though if any of them were sick he would wait for them to recover. Almost at the very last he was planning to rest awhile and buy ivory with which to return to Ujiji and recruit and reorganize. When they told him it was three days to the Lnapala, "Then I shall never see my river again," he said sorrowfully. One African chief refused them permission to stay in his territory, and obliged them to march back three hours with the dying yet indomitable explorer. He died so quietly that Majwara, who was with him, did not know when he ceased to breathe.

Then began that long journey to his grave, which occupied eleven months. "The funeral procession was first formed in the far-distant land of his devoted love" and ended at Westminster Abbey. Through the Bisa country it had to fight its way. As the steamer Malwa, which bore his precious and honored remains, came up Southampton water, his son, Mr. Henry M. Stanley, Admiral Hall and others boarded her from a tug, and Jacob Wainwright grasped warmly the hand of the American who "found Livingstone." In the mail-room of the Malwa, in a coffin of scented cedar wood, covered with flags, lay the body of Livingstone. All heads were uncovered as it passed over the ship's gunwale, and with minute guns, and all the bells of Southamptou tolling, it passed through crowded streets, where all the shops were closed. The Zanzibar coffin was inclosed in lead, and then in another coffin of polished English oak, before it entered the great abbey. Rawlinson, Frere, the Duke of Sutherland, Lord Houghton, Colonel Grant, Dr. Moffat, Stanley with his Kalulu, were among those present at the private service in the map-room of the Royal Geographical Society. The service was conducted by a Scotch clergyman from Livingstone's old home. As the procession left for the abbey the carriages of the Queen and the heir-apparent led the way. An uncounted multitude of English dignitaries and honored personages crowded the abbey in every part. Jacob Wainwright and Stanley led the pall-bearers. The grave was near that of Stephenson and Major Reynell, the African traveler. Those who buried Livingstone's wife—Robert Moffat's daughter—in Africa stood about it. At the head of the grave, at a small desk, stood Dean Stanley, and near him Moffat, leaning on the shoulder of the negro boy. Some leaves of the fan-palm were among the flowers upon the coffin as it was lowered. A little girl of six years dropped her bouquet into the grave of her grandsire of sixty. On this following Sunday the dean preached a memorial sermon from the abbey pulpit to an immense concourse, largely composed of "Dissenters" like the renowned traveler. "Followed to his grave," said the preacher, "by the leading Nonconformists of England and by the staunchest Presbyterians of Scotland, all the churches may claim him as their own."

It is painful to note, in this connection, the niggardliness of the British government in respect to the funeral of the greatest explorer the English race has produced. Only at the last moment did the Disraeli ministry say that the expenses would be met by the exchequer—i. e., to the amount of £250. Private appeals have been made for the relief of those he left behind—four children and two aged sisters—who would have been left otherwise destitute. The government pension to the children yields £50 each—"a sum," says the English Independent, "that is in striking contrast to the bloated expenditure so readily indulged when some aristocrat or military person requires to be provided for out of the national treasury."
